In the old days, they smacked us across the knuckles if we read with our hands.
Today, reading with your hand is quite acceptable.
In fact, it's somewhat of a status symbol, because people who read with their hands are graduates of the Evelyn Wood Course.
The hand, however, hasn't always been the symbol of rapid reading. The old method of teaching students to increase their reading speed was to equip them with a reading machine.
The theory was that a motorized arm on the machine would extend out over the page. The arm would move down the page at a steady speed. Hopefully, your eyes would go along for the ride.
The machine, while seemingly a good idea, didn't live up to its expectations. It couldn't slow down when the reader ran into a confusing passage. And it was too awkward to use in easy chairs or beds.
In 1945, Evelyn Wood discovered the hand as a device for reading faster.
Her reason for using the hand as a tool was to "give my students the ability to read groups of words at a time and to increase their concentration so they won't have to go back and re-read so often."
Her principle worked.
Since 1959, 450,000 people have taken the Evelyn Wood Course and have increased their reading speed by an average of 4.7 times.
Using the hand to read faster is a very interesting experience.
If you would like to try your hand at it, why don't you come to a Mini-Lesson™? In one hour's time, we'll have you reading down the page faster than you can imagine.
In fact, you'll actually take home with you a definitely faster reading speed that can be used on newspapers, magazines, correspondence, textbooks, and technical journals.
We'll tell you about some of the other things that have made this the most popular extra-curricular course in the world. We'll also show you how we improve memories, and how we make chapter outlining an obsolete study technique.
It's a wild hour. And it's free.

It's Frazier By A K.O.

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Joe Frazier dropped Jimmy Ellis twice and stopped him in the fifth round Monday night to win the undisputed world heavyweight boxing championship - unless Cassius Clay comes back.

The end came with Ellis, the World Boxing Association champion, sitting in his corner after taking a savage beating from Frazier in the showdown battle for the world title.

As the bell rang for the fifth round it went into the books as a fifth round knockout.

Ellis, an underdog at odds from 6-1 to 4-1, landed his right hand punches early but Frazier kept marching through and banging away with both hands to the head and body. The bout almost ended in the fourth with Ellis flat on his back and the count up to five when the bell sounded. Referee Tony Perez continued his count under New York rules and it reached nine before a dazed Ellis was able to get off the deck and wander to his corner.

Frazier, 205, came out smoking as he always does, ran through the fire of Ellis' bid for an early knockout and then just climbed all over him with constant pressure in the hold Hammerin' Henry Armstrong style.

Ellis, heaviest in his career at 201 pounds, was holding on for dear life in the third while Frazier punished him with that solid left hook to the head and body. Still, Ellis fought his way out of his corner in one last spurt at the end of the third. The fourth was all Frazier as the stocky Philadelphia slugger grunting with every punch drove his man around the ring.

"I've tried to be the best fighter in the world," Frazier said afterwards.

"I think in a year or two, I might turn it in and find something else to do."

He said Ellis' fast start in the first found "didn't bother me at all because I hit him with a jab and I knew he couldn't stand up."

Frazier talked to Ellis several times in the ring. What did he say?

"I told him, 'You can't hit, sissy; I took your best right hand. You ain't got nothing'."

A near sellout crowd of 18,000 that paid about $600,000 roared while Frazier swarmed all over the Louisville boxer and pinned him in his own corner to absorb heavy punishment.

Ellis finally went down from a left right combination and the effects of the steady barrage by the relentless Frazier. He barely got up at nine.

Sensing the kill, Frazier came at him against with both guns smoking. A left hook to the head dropped Ellis flat on his back. As referee Perez got up to five in the court the bell rang. He continued to nine and Ellis just barely did get up.

If Clay, who had picked Ellis, his old sparring partner to win, decides to come back despite his statements to the contrary, he may have all he wants in Frazier, the 26 year old Olympic champ of 1964 who now has won all of his 25 pro fights.

This was his 22nd knockout and his fifth successful defense of the six state title he won by beating Buster Mathis in 1968.

Ellis, beaten five times as a middleweight early in his career, had won 12 in a row as a heavyweight. He never had been stopped and had been down only once in a middleweight scrap with Rubin Carter.

Where Is Denny McLain?

DETROIT (AP) - Where is Denny McLain?

In Lakeland, Fla., where the Detroit Tigers open spring training Friday?

At his home in the Detroit suburb of Birmingham?

In New York to speak with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn?

Newsmen have been unable to reach the star Tiger pitcher since Friday in New York when he met with Kuhn to discuss the 25-year-old right hander's involvement in "off the field activities."

"I have no idea where they are. They're supposed to be in Lakeland but beyond that all I know is what I read in the newspapers," said a woman who answered the telephone at the McLain house Monday.

"My husband and I are friends of the McLains and we are staying at their house while they're away," she said.

Earlier an officer from the Southfield District Court went to the house in connection with a hearing set for Monday concerning alleged nonpayment of rent on the home. He reported that no one answered his knock and, therefore, a subpoena was tacked to the door ordering McLain to appear in court Wednesday.

McLain had previously been ordered to appear in circuit court in Flint Monday concerning a suit in which he and another man were ordered to pay more than $7,000 to Citizens Commercial & Savings Bank.

Citizens Bank is suing McLain and a suburban Farmington man, Edwin K. Schober, claiming they executed a promissory note for $7,000 on July 26, 1968, for a loan in that amount.

Redmen Hope for Play-off tent shooting continued to plague them.

The Yellow Jackets scored an insurance goal at 16:39 when Baxter stole the puck from a UMass defensiveman and beat Flaherty to the corner. The period ended with AIC leading, 4-2.

The third period was wide open, but AIC cleared the puck effectively from their zone, keeping UMass from putting extreme pressure on Normand. The Redmen had three or four good scoring opportunities but, as said previously, poor shooting accuracy continued to plague them. Coach Cannitf pulled Flaherty with one minute left in favor of a sixth skater but it was to no avail. Final score: AIC 4, UMass 2.

ICE CHIPS - Despite giving up four goals, Flaherty made several outstanding saves, including three breakaway saves on Dave Forbes, the Yellow Jacket leading scorer.... His counterpart, Dave Normand, made 52 saves....Eric 'Red Baron' Scrafield was quite impressive with his fine twoway play....Doug Powling played a good defensive game and his checking was really solid.... Wednesday night the Redmen take on Amherst at Orr Rink at four o'clock.

URI Tonight

WOULD YOU BELIEVE? In the original set of statistics passed out after the UConn game by the UConn statisticians, Bobby Boyd was credited with a four for six performance in the second half. Boyd, a gunner's gunner who seldom shoots without the ball in the tradition of Tommy Heinsohn, actually fired 15 missiles at the hoop.

After the nonsense was discovered, Erving received an additional two rebounds for 23. Meanwhile many fans remember that Toby Kimball of UConn led the nation in rebounding in 1965. With statistical blunders like these, it's no wonder that many people chuckle at Kimball's title.

Over 200 Umies made the Winter Carni journey to Storrs, and showered the Redmen with confetti and streamers when the final buzzer sounded. Over 100 ducats have already been peddled here for RI, and for those who want to make the junket ticketless, URI has put aside some more seats on a first come first serve basis.

Redmen fans have become the talk of New England. Last year, and in all previous years, all road games except those played in Boston during intersession were played in front of family and friends of the players. Now Jack Leaman boasts of, "the super crowds that we get on the road. It's great."

Trackmen Nipped by Powerful Northeastern, 58-46

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

For the second straight weekend the UMass track team ran into a meet - experienced and well - balanced opponent and came out on the short end of a real close meet. This weekend the opponent was Northeastern University, a perrenial New England track power which was in peak condition for the meet.

The final score was 58-46 and for those unfamiliarized with track scoring, this was a close score. And it was a satisfying score for Coach O'Brien as his Redmen stayed within three or four points for most of the meet with the final point spread of twelve points being decided in the final two events. This was a good accomplishment against a team which was last year's New England champions.

For the second straight meet the Redmen made some notable individual performances. Ron Wayne won the mile and two mile, setting a meet record of 4:15.3 in the mile.

Jim Graves also set a meet record, this one coming in the high hurdles with a time of 6.6 seconds. He was followed across the line by teammate Gerry Spellman who showed signs of returning to his top form. This one-two finish in the hurdles was especially satisfying to Coach O'Brien, as Graves and Spellman defeated two NU hurdlers who had placed in the greater Boston meet. Graves is a sophomore and Spellman is a junior and the future looks bright in this event.

Walter Mayo once again lead a UMass sweep in the dash. O'Brien has been very pleased with the dashmen performances in the first two meets as they have kept the Redmen close to their opponents with the nine points they have picked up in the event in each meet.

Going into the hurdles and the dash UMass was 13 points behind in the meet, but after these two events the deficit was only three points. These events will be relied upon by Coach O'Brien to keep UMass in the running in the remaining meets and if the NU meet is any indication of these performer's responsibilities then Coach O'Brien can be pretty sure that they'll come up with the big effort when it is needed.

Eddie Acaro continued his steady improvement in the shot and weight throw in this meet. He won the shot with a mark of 49 feet 9 inches and placed third in the weight throw. Eddie's improvement from last week's meet makes him a key factor in the up and coming Yankee Conference and New England indoor track championships.

Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey once again placed one-two in the high jump. These two have been consistent performers all season, dating back to their performances at the Boston Gardens in the BAA and K of C meets.

Emerson Hiller and Al Mangan showed improvement in their events over last week's meet. Hiller jumped 12'6" in the pole vault for his best vault this season and Mangan ran his best race in the 600 yard run, just being edged out from placing by a fine group of Northeastern 600 yarders.

The meet was see-saw all the way and came down to the 1000 yard run as the meet did last year. UMass was down by four and needed a victory to lead by a point going into the relay. The burden was on Dave Evans shoulders and he was outleaned at the finish line by his opponent, with both runners being timed in 2:18.9 on the slow track at Cabot Cage. Dave performed as a captain should and a matter of inches kept him from victory.

After this event UMass was down by seven points and the final five points for Northeastern came by their relay team. Just a matter of inches kept UMass from a possible victory and the score of 58-46, although it appears to be a big margin of victory, is very small after reviewing the entire meet.

The freshmen team met the same fate as did the varsity, losing 59-45 to the Northeastern freshmen. Once again the story was overall team depth by the Huskies.

Outstanding performances were turned in by Billy Hackler, who set a new freshmen record in the high jump with a jump of 6'5" and by Tom Jasmin who set a freshmen meet record of 9:41.2 in the two-mile.

Wednesday night at 7:00, the Redmen travel to Storrs for a big meet with Connecticut. Tomorrow's Collegian will contain a preview on this meet.

Gymnasts Win Easily, Down Pitt, 154.75-133.40

The UMass vasity gymnasts upped their record to 4-1 Saturday with a 154.75 - 133.40 win over the University of Pittsburgh. The Redmen captured the top three positions in three of the six events, while Pittsburgh could manage only two first places and a tie for second in the entire meet.

Top UMass performances were by Tony Vacca on high bar, Joe Reed and Steve Cary in the long horse vault, Norm Vexler on still rings, and Reed on parallel bars. Vacca was the high scorer in the all-around event as Vexler competed in only three of the six events.

UMass jumped to a 25.2 - 23.7 lead after the first event as Mike Kasavana and Vacca took second and third in floor exercise. Lowell Meek took first for Pitt with a 9.1.

On side horse, Pittsburgh took its second and final first of the meet as Joe Gracik scored a 9.3 to win the event. Second and third went to Vexler and Rick Riley with scores of 8.65 and 8.60. Gracik's 9.3 was the high score of the meet.

Vexler captured first on still rings edging out teammate Mike Pelloquin and Pitt's Jim Miller by one tenth of a point; Pelloquin and Miller tied for second with scores of 8.55.

UMass completely dominated the remaining three events as they captured all of the top three places.

Reed and Cary tied for first in the long horse vault with a score of 9.0. Scott Stover, competing in long horse vaulting after a long layoff because of injuries, was third with an 8.9.

Parallel bar honors went to Reed who scored a 9.05 to match his Penn State performance. Second and third places were won by UMass' Doug Salisbury with an 8.55 and Cary at 8.45.

On high bar, Vacca received one of UMass' highest scores in the event this season. He placed first with a 9.1 and an excellent routine. Stover was second with an 8.75 and Reed third with an 8.7.

Saturday's meet was of particular importance to the Redmen in that it not only put UMass back on the winning road after the Penn State setback, but also gave valuable experience to many gymnasts who will provide depth for UMass in the future. Depth could prove to be a major factor when UMass meets undefeated Springfield College and Temple University later in the season.

Redmen In Key Conference Win Over UConn, 71-65

Gallagher, Erving (As Usual) Star in 2nd Straight Big Win

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

STORRS, Ct. - UMass followed up its big victory over Holy Cross with another big and key win over Connecticut, 71-65, here Saturday night behind the stalwart forward play of the Julius Erving-Jack Gallagher tandem, the strong all-around performance of John Betancourt and the clutch relief work of Mike Pagliara and Dennis Chapman.

The Redmen, who embarked on an important three-game adventure when they defeated the Crusaders last Tuesday, 83-66, outplayed the Huskies on the latters' home court and now face their third challenge, Rhode Island tonight at eight o'clock in Kingston.

Pacing the visitors cause was the familiar person of Erving and the key man in the recent resurgence of the Redman, Gallagher. The 6'5 Erving, UMass' super package of basketball talent, did it all again. Q. How many points and rebounds did he get?..... A. 20 and 23.

Gallagher had another superb ballgame. Not only did he contribute his usual great defensive game, covering the UConn forwards, Ron Hrubala and Robert Taylor and grabbing 11 rebounds, but was the second highest Redman scorer with 15 points.

Soph guard Betancourt turned in a solid job in all aspects of the affair. He had 11 points, four rebounds and was the assist leader with eight. On defense he guarded the Huskies best scorer Bob Boyd and held him to 17 points on only seven of 29 shots from the field.

Chapman and Pagliara, in reserve roles at forward and guard respectively, were key men for UMass down the stretch. The Redmen were riding a slim 44-42 advantage with 12 and a half minutes to go in the fray. With possession of the ball, they went into a very deliberate-type offense, working the ball around the outside but having trouble getting it in underneath.

Pagliara settled the problem by canning a 20-footer with 10:49 showing on the clock. UConn's Tony Budzinsky answered back with two foul hoops but Chapman came through for the Redmen with a long-range jumper to put UMass up, 48-44, with 9:59 left.

The visitors ran off three more points on a Betancourt free throw and a baseline jump shot by Pagliara. Over the next four minutes UMass outscored the Huskies, 10-4. Chapman and Betancourt had four points each; Erving added the extra two to make the score 61-48, with 5:37 to go.

UConn made things hairy by ringing up eight straight points without a Redman return, cutting the advantage to 61-56 with 3:13 remaining. A few seconds later, Dick Samuelson was fouled and stepped to the line for a key one-and-one foul situation. Sam hit both of 'em.

After Betancourt and UConn's Stack, who was swishing some real long bombers in the late moments for the home team, traded baskets, Erving made both ends of a key one-and-one for a 67-58 Redman lead with 1:56 left.

The lead looked safe, but three points by Stack made things uneasy until Ray Ellerbrook slipped in a lay-up with 34 seconds to go. Pagliara sank two foul shots and Boyd hit a field basket to round out the scoring for the night.

The final 12 minutes of the affair were nip and tuck, UMass holding a slim 21-19 edge with 7:52 to go to halftime. The Redmen then got hot and, over the next five and a half minutes, built up a ten-point, 33-23 advantage. The Huskies cut that by three and the visitors left the floor leading at halftime, 36-29.

The second half saw things get close again. Cold shooting hampered the visitors as only Erving and Gallagher could hit before cool play by Betancourt, Chapman and Pagliara brought the Redmen another big victor.

HOOP NOTES - As the last few seconds of the game were ticking off, the Redmen were working the ball up court and, as the buzzer went off, Erving got control of the basketball and jubilantly jammed it through the twine while red and white streamers filled the air in a happy UMass response to a very big win....250 or so Redman fans made the trip to Storrs and, once again, gave tremendous vocal support for their favorites....Stack was UConn's best scorer with 27 points....Samuelson turned in another strong game under the boards with 11 rebounds....Ellerbrook had an off-scoring night, only eight points....Soph redshirt Tom Austin put his height to use by untangling some basketballs that got caught in the UConn net after pre-game warmups ended....The play should be scored as an assist for Austin because the Huskies team managers were too short to get 'em unstuck themselves....Rick Vogeley tried his hand at sports writing.... The UConn cheerleaders were a show by themselves and almost distracted a couple of responsible MDC sports-staffers from keeping their minds and pens on the contest.

Pucksters Upset by AIC, 4-2
Play-off Hopes Diminished

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Massachusetts hopes for gaining a berth in the ECAC Division II play-offs were handed a serious setback Saturday afternoon when American International College upset the Redmen 4-2 at Blunt Park Arena in Springfield.

Unofficially, three of the four play-off berths will be awarded to Bowdoin, Merrimack and Vermont. Middlebury, the leading contender for the fourth spot, lost two weekend games, dropping their division II record to 8-4. In order for UMass, now 7-5 in Division II play, to take fourth spot, they will have to sweep their remaining Division II games against Amherst, Holy Cross, and Williams. Meanwhile, Middlebury must lose at least one of their remaining four games against Vermont, Norwich, Hamilton and Williams.

THE RED BARON - UMass Eric Scrafield was one of the few bright spots in Saturday's 4-2 loss to AIC.

If the Redmen hope to sweep these three remaining games, they will have to improve considerably over their performance Saturday. The Redmen took 54 shots on AIC goalie Dave Normand, and fanned or shot wide on countless other opportunities in front of the net. Their passing especially in the offensive zone was poor, and the stellar defensive play which UMass had displayed of late was missing early in the game.

The Yellow Jackets scored when the game was only 22 seconds old. Defenseman Larry Cyr passed to wing Bob Anderson who rushed down the right side of the rink. After crossing the blue line, Anderson sent a centering pass to Yves De Rome who unleashed a quick shot on UMass goalie P.J Flaherty. Flaherty blocked the shot but was unable to control the rebound which bounced to the right side of the net. Anderson, who had circled the net, beat the UMass defensemen to the puck and flicked it into the open corner.

AIC continued to fore-check effectively as the Redmen were unable to clear the puck. At 1:50 Bob Stupak took a slap shot from the point and beat Flaherty to his right. Flaherty was partially screened by De Rome and Dave Forbes because the defensemen didn't clear them from in front of the net.

UMass seemed to come alive after the second goal when Doug Powling applied a crushing check to De Rome and sent him limping back to the bench. At 6:25 Eric Scrafield took a pass from Powling and sent a powerful shot to Normand's left. Normand never saw the puck but unfortunately it hit the cross bar and bounced out. Despite outplaying the Yellow Jackets, the Redmen suffered another defensive lapse late in the period which resulted in the third AIC goal. Bruce Baxter took a shot from Flaherty's left Flaherty blocked the shot, but the defense had allowed Forbes to slip behind them and get in front of the crease. Forbes took the rebound and tried to beat Flaherty to the stick side. Flaherty again made the save, but the defense didn't push Forbes from the crease. This time he got the rebound and beat the UMass goalie to the opposite side of the net.

The second period was a completely different game. The Redmen came out flying. They were hitting, forechecking and backchecking effectively and putting considerable pressure on the Yellow Jackets goalie. Their persistence paid off when Scrafield stole the puck from Anderson in the AIC zone and waltzed in on Normand. It was the Red Baron's second unassisted goal of the year. AIC began to play unsportsmanlike and UMass had a two-man power play advantage. Again, poor passing in the offensive zone and poor shooting in front of the net nullified the Redman attack.

Al Nickerson scored for UMass at 11:37 when he beat Normand from the point, after taking a pass from Dan Reidy. The score was AIC 3, UMass 2 with almost nine minutes left in the second period.

UMass was clearly in control of the game; they were unleashing shot after shot on Normand, who made 23 saves in the second period. Despite their hustle and desire to score, the Redmen could not seem to find the inside of the goal. Poor passing and inconsis-

Hoopsters Battle URI With YC Title On Line

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

"I hope Claude English plays, because if we win I don't want anybody to say that we backed into the Conference title." These were the words of UMass coach Jack Leaman on the eve of the biggest game of the season. Leaman went on to emphasize, "We're playing the best ball of the season, and I'd like to beat them at their best."

Rhode Island presents problems for the Redmen in many ways. For starters, Rhody is the only team that has outre-bounded the Redmen. Rhody is the deepest team on the schedule with the possible exception of Penn. If English plays, and the guess here is that he will, URI will have two outstanding threats in the aforementioned English, and John Fultz.

In the backcourt the Rams go with 5'5 Ed 'Flea' Molloy and 5'11 Dwight Tolliver. Nate Adgar, 6'5, is a starting forward along with the 6'6 Fultz. If English doesn't play, and if he does not, URI is in serious trouble, 6'8 Bud Hazzard will fill in.

URI leads the Yankee Conference with a 6-1 mark and stands 12-7 overall. In the last week the Rams have beaten both UNH and Maine on the road, and were bombed by B.C. 97-80. With URI on top 9-6, English was carried off after falling on his knee.

Leaman will counter with his normal starting line up. Jack Gallagher will have the unenviable task of shadowing Fultz, but the way the 6'4 senior has been going lately nothing is too tough. His game on Saturday at Storrs was his best to date.

Mike Pagliara will see a lot of action tonight. John Betancourt was kicked in the left knee just before the end of the UConn game, and will play with it heavily taped. Ray Ellerbrook had another of those "nothing would go in" nights and was relieved by Pag on several occasions.

No Buses to URI

The Student Senate buses will not operate Tuesday evening to transport students to the game. This was the word received yesterday from the manager of the Senate Bus Service.

We tried the trip to UConn, and consider it a success although all persons with free passes didn't show.

Reasons for refusal to make the trip are:

1. The buses would have to leave too early. This would cut into some class time but more importantly, the campus shuttle service would have to be cut short, which we are not willing to do.
2. The buses we use are basically school buses which are not that comfortable.

The service will be provided for remaining away games which will be played within a reasonable range.

Coxswain Needed

The UMass Crew Club is quickly making final preparations for an anticipated March first ice-breaking opening outdoor practice on the Connecticut River. The thirty-five members in the club have recently moved into a new tank room in WOPE and have been conditioning themselves for the spring season. The club is in need of coxswains for their boats. Candidates should be less than 135 lbs. and have the potential to lead. Interested men in all classes are asked to call Boyden, Room 211, 545-2801 - Ask for Mike Faherty.

IT'S ALL OVER - Members of the Crew Club relax after a grueling race. The club is in need of a coxswain and interested students should read the notice above.

Martha's Vinyard Oil Slick Kills a Thousand Sea Birds

More than one thousand sea birds were killed when a ten mile strip of Martha's Vineyard was hit by an oil slick during the past week. A considerable number of dead birds were also washed up on beaches from Hyannis to New Bedford.

Members of the newly formed Coalition for Environmental Quality were among the groups who came to assist and survey the damage caused by the oil slick. Islanders as well as many mainlander volunteers searched the neighboring roads a and beaches for dead and injured animals.

However, while some birds were saved, most living birds were so incapacitated by the oil that an injection of pentabarbitol sodium was used to put them out of their misery.

Much speculation has been aroused concerning the source of the slick, which is coincidental with oil damage in Newfoundland, Santa Barbara, and Tampa this week. An interview with naval personnel revealed that oil, identical to the type covering these birds, is frequently pumped out of ships through thier ballast tanks. In fact, this amounts to standard procedure on most vessels today. Apparently a storm carried this slick from the shipping lanes to the Massachusetts area.

A group of islanders have dumped a truckload of these birds on the Statehouse lawn in protest. However, much of this damage is irreversible. Three King Eider ducks were found dead on a beach near Edgartown. There are only two hundred of these ducks known to exist, with no estimate as to how many carcasses were washed out to sea.

Breeding and winter feeding grounds were turned into polluted waste and some sections of the Vineyard shore was turned into an oily mess. State officials also estimate a recovery period of up to two years for many of these birds. Due to the impossibility of obtaining large quantities of live fish for feeding injured loons, these creatures were destroyed.

According to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and state conservation workers, oil company representatives promulgated a rumor that algae was responsible for the death of the birds. However, when analysis revealed the slick to be a heavy motor oil one oil company donated $20,000 for aiding in cleanup and animal maintenance.

The Chamber of Commerce at Vineyard Haven expressed fear that beaches on the southern shore would not return to their normal state before the coming vacation season. This could mean a great loss of revenue for the area.

C.E.Q. members have taken motion pictures of this disaster. Also, specimens have been retrieved from the beaches for display in the Student Union this week. The films and carcasses will be used for information, education and publicity purposes.

CEQ Committees will Explore Problem Areas

The first meeting of Committees for the Coalition For Environmental Quality (CEQ) will be held this evening in SBA.

These committees are designed not only for the research of problem areas, but also to promote corrective measures against the continual deterioration of the environment. This coalition is not a "student" movement. It is designed to mobilize the resources and energies of students, professors, and community people.

A tentative agenda for the evening calls for a gathering of the temporary chairmen of the meetings at 6 p.m. At 7 p.m., the five research committees will meet in the following rooms: Land Ecology-Room 109, Air Ecology-Room 110, Water Ecology-Room 111, Wildlife Ecology-102, Human Ecology and Population-Room 112.

It is expected that each of these research committees will: (1) break down their subject area into specific concerns, for example, Air Pollution researchers could break down into study groups on Atomic Radiation, Smog Control, etc. and (2) set up dates for future meeting times.

At 9 p.m., the following committees will meet: Publicity Committees will meet in room 102 with those persons interested in newspapers, television, radio, photography, posters, etc. The Films and Speakers Committee which is designed to bring the distinguished lecturers and films on Ecology to the area, will gather in room 109.

The most important aspect of the Coalition, the Direct Action Committees, will also meet at 9 p.m. in the following rooms: Legal and Legislative Action Committee-Room 110, Community Action Committee (which includes picketing, visiting officials of major polluters, and education)-Room 111. Administrative Staff Committee (including volunteers to help with phone answering, duplicating, etc.)-Room 112.

If you are sick of smog infested cities and polluted streams, it is time for you to act. Passivity solves nothing. Pollution and abuse of our environment will not be ended without pressure from you, the citizen! Remember, "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the pollution."

News Analysis

Security Operations Switch is Recommended

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

Last spring a study was made of the campus security operations. This study, known as the Powell Report, recommended that the supervisory power over the Security Division be switched from the Treasurer's office to the Provost's office. The COLLEGIAN has learned that a special committee set up by President Lederle to study this proposal has recommended "unanimously" that this change be adopted.

According to Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen, this recommendation will now go to President Lederle. There are no actual plans for implementation, said Allen.

The rationale behind the "recommendation" commented Allen, the chairman of the special committee, is simply the need for campus security "more concerned with students." The Provost's office, since it must deal with student affairs, might be more effective in the role of security.

The Powell Report had made the observation that "one of the weaknesses in communication between the (security) department and the University community has been the lack of any clear-cut avenue for complaints and Departmental direction."

The original connection between the security division and the Treasurer's office was based on the idea that since the responsibility for the "properties" on campus and for the Physical Plant were with the Treasurer's office; security for the buildings and property could best be handled through the same office.

One might say that the University is becoming more concerned with the people in the University than the buildings. That sure seems to be a priority change!

Metawampe Award Invites Nominations

The 1970 Metawampe Award Committee is now in session. Each year the honor of the Metawampe Award is bestowed on an outstanding faculty member or administrator chosen by the students of the University. Presented each spring at student leaders night, the award recognizes superior service inside and outside of the academic sphere.

The 14 member Metawampe Award Committee is comprised of representatives from each of the four classes and is funded by the classes. Belden Bly, class of 1970, serves as chairman of this year's committee.

A student or student organization on the University may nominate a candidate for the award. The committee's task is to search into the activities of each candidate and select from the best of the UMass faculty and administration one outstanding person.

The Metawampe Award includes a $1,000 gift, but most important the honor of being chosen by students.

Nomination papers for the Metawampe Award will be available in the RSO office, Student Union, next week.

Cynthia Olken Urges Continued Rent Hike Protests

Senate President Cynthia Olken yesterday warned students that they must continue to protest the administration's proposed rent hike despite creation of a rent committee Monday.

"The idea of such a committee to coordinate alternatives to the increases is a good idea, one which should have been initiated a long time ago," she said. "But massive student involvement is still needed if alternatives are to be found."

Senate Public Relations Committee Chairman Geoffrey Levine added, "Committees by themselves tend to to nothing . . . they can be effective only when students act to spur the committees on . . . If students sit back and wait for the committees to do something, chances are that nothing much will be accomplished.'

Glenn Elters, the Senate's Vice President agreed and went on to say, "the formation of the committee itself is an admission on the administration's part that it made a mistake by not including students in the rent decision in the first place. I think the administration is inept in its running of this University."

The three senators urged students to participate in Thursday's scheduled demonstrations against the proposed increase and the lack of student participation in making decisions on the rent issue, as well as in the selection of a new Chancellor and in the school's academic decision making process in general.

According to Levine, the day's activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. with rallies in each of the University's four residential areas. Students will then meet at the Student Union at 2:00, where they will sign what Levine calls "letters of dissatisfaction over their role in University decision making."

At 2:30 the students will marcn to Whitmore and will, in Levine's words, "dump the letters on Dean Field's desk."

The day's events will conclude with a teach-in in the Union, set to begin at 3:00, which Levine says will deal with student power in general and the rent increase in particular.

Monday President Lederle announced that he was forming a committee of students, faculty and administrators to coordinate investigations of the proposed rent increase. The committee's chairman will be appointed by Miss Olken.

While no official student appointments for the committee have been made, it is believed that the following Student Senators will be named to the body this week: Glenn Elters, Dawn Dudash, Cynthia Olken, James Alpert and Hugh Wilder.

Senate Proposal Rejects Tippo Aid

On the agenda for the Student Senate meeting of Wednesday, February 18, there is a bill to reject Provost Tippo's offer of $1,000 to aid in the Student Senate commitment to have a private firm audit the Administration room rent increase figures.

The rationale behind the rejection of the Provosts offer is the desire to keep the loyalty of the firm exclusively with the students.

Along these same lines is a bill charging the Student Matters committee with investigating the role of student opinion in the decision making of the University of Massachusetts Building Authority.

In the academic area there are two bills scheduled. The first is seeking Senate approval of a New Bachelors Degree with "individual concentration to serve as an approved major program in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Humphrey to Speak Again at UMass Lecture to Provide New Philosophy

Former Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey will speak at UMass Tuesday, Feb. 24, at 8:15 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage.

The lecture, will deal with foreign policy. It is Mr. Humphrey's only appearance in the Northeast in a series commissioned by the Pillsbury Company of Minneapolis to commemorate its centennial.

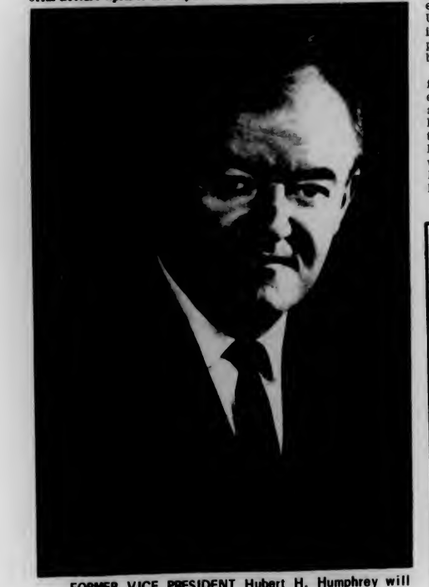
The students' Distinguished Visitors Program at UMass is the co-sponsor. Mr. Humphrey's last UMass visit was to deliver the 1969 Martin Luther King, Jr., Memorial Lecture April 18 of last year. He was commencement speaker and received an honorary degree from the University in 1964.

Board chairman Robert J. Keith of Pillsbury said "the decision to have Mr. Humphrey deliver the lectures recognizes today's critical need for a constructive re-evaluation, and seek ideas which may lead to solutions, seems to be a genuine and constructive manner in which the Pillsbury Company should celebrate its 100th anniversary."

Mr. Humphrey said his lectures relate to the world with which man must learn to cope, and will not deal with contemporary political issues. "The lectures will attempt to provide a new philosophy for the 1970's and 1980's, in order to help the American people meet the series of changing problems that not only threaten the survival of the world, but even if we do survive, will make it increasingly difficult for individual men to fulfill their own lives,' he explained.

The four-lecture series, all at university campuses, began last Oct. 16 at the University of Minnesota and will end March 10 at the University of Arizona. The series will be published after completion in book form by the Pillsbury Company.

Mr. Humphrey is now a professor political science at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., and the University of Minnesota. He was the Democratic presidential candidate against Richard Nixon in the last election and was vice - president under President Lyndon B. Johnson from 1964 to 1968.



FORMER VICE PRESIDENT Hubert H. Humphrey will speak at the Cage, Tuesday, February 24, at 8:15 p.m.

Defense Files Mistrial Motion Asks Halt in Jury Deliberation

CHICAGO (AP) - Defense attorneys filed a motion Tuesday asking that jury deliberations be halted and a mistrial declared for seven men charged with conspiring to incite rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Attorneys William M. Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass filed the motion with the trial court clerk and asked for immediate action. It was not known when a ruling by Judge Julius J. Hoffman might come.

Weinglass said the motion gave no reasons to support a mistrial.

"But," he told reporters, "it is obvious that the jury is not able to reach a decision after four days of deliberations."

The motion was filed after the jury had deliberated more than 40 hours.

Earlier, Kunstler said "it would be a miracle" if all the defendants were acquitted, but that he expected "compromises."

"Some of the defendants will be convicted, others will be acquitted or the jury will hang deadlock on all of them," Kunstler told newsmen after the jury had been out more than 35 hours.

The jury of 10 women and 2 men retired Saturday afternoon to consider a verdict. The defendants are charged with conspiring to incite riding at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. In addition, each is charged with a substantive count: two with teaching the making of incendiary devices and five with actually crossing state lines with intent to incite rioting.

The jurors must consider the testimony of 190 witnesses who appeared during the trial which lasted nearly five months. They also took with them to the jury quarters about 300 exhibits.

While the jury was closeted on the 23rd floor of the Federal Building, several hundred supporters of the defendants marched around the building, some carried signs reading "Impeach Hoffman" and "resist summary injustice."

The seven defendants remained in the Cook County Chicago Jail where they are serving sentences for contempt that Judge Hoffman imposed Saturday and Sunday.

Kunstler and Leonard Weinglass, another defense attorney, also were sentenced for contempt. But Judge Hoffman stayed their jailing until May 4 to allow them to carry out an appeal from the contempt sentences for their clients and themselves.

"Smoke Out" Campaign Organized in Randolph

RANDOLPH, Mass. (AP) - "Cancer stops smoking, says a sign in Randolph, a community where drugstores are draping their cigarette counters in mourners' black and students are waging a day-long campaign against smoking.

Randolph High School students were to canvass house to house Wednesday, asking residents to "light up a student's future, not a cigarette."

The campaign, a "smoke out," is designed to collect money for a college fund, as well as help residents quit smoking, says Arthur P. Mullaney Jr., guidance director of the Randolph school system.

Some 500 students, who will call on the nearly 10,000 private homes in town, will ask residents to donate the price of apack of cigarettes to a college scholarship fund. Students were also to stake out the community's three shopping centers, urging shoppers to sign pledges that they will stop smoking for the day.

The pledge says:

"I will not smoke on Feb. 18. I believe that cigarette smoking may be hazardous to my health. I will think of this if I light up a cigarette after Feb. 18."

Those who won't quit smoking, says Mullaney, will be plagued by anti-smoking literature at a later date.

Students went on a "dry run" Monday, passing out anti-smoking literature and a sheet asking residents to join the campaign. But they hope to collect $7,000 Wednesday.

Apart from letters of encouragement by President Nixon, the two Massachusetts senators, and Massachusetts Gov. Francis W. Sargent, Mullaney says he has heard from organizations in 20 states who would like to initiate the same type of program - if not against smoking, for other causes.

Local support has been equally enthusiastic, says Mullaney. All stores will have their cigarette counters draped in black.

Teachers were to man telephones during the day to promote the campaign and encourage the halting smoke to quit.

And only those "dying for a smoke" will be permitted to do so at a campaign celebration Wednesday night.

Nixon Favors Amendment Lowering The Voting Age

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration endorsed Tuesday a move to lower the voting age in national elections to 18 and former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark said even more is needed to involve youth in the American political system.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst told a Senate panel that President Nixon favors a constitutional amendment permitting 18 year olds to vote in presidential and congressional elections.

Kleindienst said this would still leave the states with a free hand to set the qualifications for voters in state and local elections.

The hearing was interrupted briefly when 15 women, all well dressed and mostly middle aged, rose from their chairs waving placards and shouting demands for immediate action on a long pending constitutional amendment to extend equal rights to women.

Clark had just concluded his testimony when the women shouted at Chairman Birch Bayh, D-Ind.; "This amendment has been pending for 47 years and you're giving us the runaround."

The women said they were members of the National Organization for Women.

Bayh said he has twice reported such an amendment out of his constitutional amendment subcommittee and offered to meet with the women after the hearing.

"That is not a demonstrably effective answer," one woman told Bayh as she led the group from the hearing room.

Before the interruption, which Bayh said did nothing to add to the women's cause, Clark testified 18, 19, and 20-year old citizens must be included in the electoral process to demonstrate that their concerns can have an effect on the processes of government.

"Youth is excluded from the initial step in the decision process devised by our system of government - the vote," Clark said. "He must be involved.

"He is less than 10 per cent of the electorate.

"He will not decide, but he must contribute." Clark said the nation must begin to involve young people in voting during their last year of high school.

In most states the legal age for voting is 21. Georgia and Kentucky have lowered this to 18, Alaska to 19, and Hawaii to 20.

Kleindienst rejected arguments that younger persons cannot be trusted to exercise the responsibility of the ballot.

He said many of the persons associated with campus rebellions and disruptive political activism are well past 21 and represent only a small percentage of young Americans.

"The vast majority - both in school and at work - are living responsible, constructive lives," Kleindienst said. "These mature young people should not be penalized for the actions of a few."

Kleindienst said the Nixon administration believes that giving young persons the vote and a responsible role in the political process may eliminate what he called a sense of frustration and non-involvement that has possibly led to the irresponsible behavior of a few.

Saying these are the reasons, the President favors lowering the voting age to 18, Kleindienst said however the administration believes this should extend only to elections for president, vice president, U. S. senators and members of the House of Representatives.

"The voting age for participation in all remaining elections - both state and local - should continue to be a question for each state to determine," he said.

Kleindienst testified before the Senate subcommittee on constitutional amendments which has been taking testimony from supporters and opponents of a proposal to lower the voting age in all elections.

United Christian Foundation to Hold Anti-Viet War Conference Saturday

The United Christian Foundation has organized a conference to form a Western Massachusetts Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam organization. The conference will take place February 21 at Edward's Church in Northampton.

Mr. Samuel Johnson, in a recent letter, explained the reasoning behind the conference. He stated that churches have not done enough in the war effort. Also, the various groups and individuals protesting have shown considerable lack of cooperation.

The conference will consist of speakers and discussion groups concerning the war itself and anti-war protest methods.

Ngo VinhLong, a native of South Vietnam and now a student at Harvard, Rev. Richard Fernandez, coordinator of the national CLCV, and George Wald, professor at Harvard are the guest speakers.

Registration will be from 9:30 to 10:00 and will cost $2.00. Advance registration should be made through Mr. Samuel Johnson, United Christian Foundation, 319 Hampshire.

Phone calls will be accepted so that the listening audience can join in.

H&R Holds Convenience Food Seminar Starting March 2 W. Springfield

"Convenience Foods In Food Service Operations" a seminar for food service personnel, will be presented by the UMass department of hotel and restaurant administration at West Springfield starting Monday, March 2.

The two-hour Monday evening sessions will be held in the auditorium of the Western Massachusetts Electric Company, 174 Brush Hill Ave., West Springfield, from 7 to 9 p.m. on March 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30, and April 6, 13, and 20. According to Charles E. Eshbach, acting head of the department of hotel and restaurant administration, this seminar is an offering of the Cooperative Extension Program of the College of Agriculture presented through the hotel and administration department.

The seminar will discuss use of convenience foods, especially the prepared entrees, in food service operations. Instruction will concern the various foods available in convenience form, packages, stages of preparation, purchasing and storage, pre-preparation practices required, and adaptation of equipment, kitchen layout, and personnel performance, plus economic factors.

The lectures and other class presentations will describe and explain developments and relate accepted principles of food service management to the new situations and probelms resulting from food changes. People from the industry will describe their convenience foods experiences.

The seminar is designed for people in all types of food service operations and is open to all interested. There is a registration fee of $20 and advance registration is necessary.

Recent Testimony Against the Pill Has Not Affected Sales Too Much

NEW YORK (AP) - Druggists across the country say recent testimony against birth control pills has alarmed many women but sales of the pill have not lagged significantly yet. Some pharmacists reported, however, that demand for other contraceptives is up.

Results of an Associated Press sampling indicate it may be too early to assess the impact of scientists' claims before a Senate subcommittee last month that oral contraceptives may be harmful to health.

"Most women buy three to six month supplies, so we won't see an instant drop," noted a spokesman for a Los Angeles pharmacy. The pill usually comes in batches for a month or more.

"We've had no decline . . . but people have been asking whether or not the pill is safe," said a Little Rock, Ark., pharmacist in a typical comment.

Some druggists reported a decline in new prescriptions for the pill since the subcommittee hearings. But they said most women who were taking the pill before the hearings continued to refill their prescriptions.

The pill was named at the hearings as a possible factor in blood clots, cancer, heart disease and other ailments. Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, advised doctors to alert women to possible risks but he also cautioned against "over reacting."

On Sunday Surgeon General Jesse Steinfeld said a growing amount of evidence would indicate other forms of contraception would be safer for some women. However, he said, "I think the pill has saved more lives than it has cost."

To some women, he indicated, the possible risk of taking the pill may be less than complications such as miscarriages and hemorrhages.

Some doctors say they have noticed an increase in unwanted pregnancies which they attribute to women forsaking the pill.

Meanwhile, big money hangs in the balance.

Trustees Raise Costs At Maine's Campuses

BANGOR, Maine (AP) - The University of Maine's trustees voted Tuesday to increase tuitions at most of the system's nine campuses and also raise the room and board charged at five state colleges.

The vote was 11-1 with the dissent coming from Stephen T. Hughes who, when he was appointed to the board in 1969, was the first student trustee.

Some 60 students from the Orono campus picketed the trustees' meeting in protest at any tuition rise. The demonstration was orderly and peaceful.

They were invited into the meeting and two of their number spoke against the increases.

For resident students the tuition at the Orono, Portland and Law School campuses will go up next year from $400 to $450 a year, Bangor and Agusta campus students will continue to pay $400. At the state colleges tuition will be doubled from $100 to $200.

Out of state students will pay even more - $1,350 instead of $1,000 at Orono, Portland, Augusta and the Law School; $550 instead of $200 at the Gorham, Farmington, Washington, Aroostook and Fort Kent state colleges.

The trustees also tacked an extra $70 onto the room and board charges at the state colleges.

Ten Years After

Walk to Feed the Hungrey

To the UMass Community:

One-half the world is hungry or malnourished, but what have we, as individuals, done to see to it that every man, woman and child goes to bed well-fed? We are all horrified and saddened at the mere sight of children begging for scraps, but all the feelings of sorrow will never feed a hungry child. Hunger and malnutrition must be eradicated from the earth.

I volunteered my services to help organize a 30-mile Walk For Development on May 3, 1970 in the western Massachusetts area under the auspices of the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. The Foundation has sponsored several such Walks throughout the United States during the past few years. Walkers receive a special sponsor card and ask various members of the community to sponsor them for any amount the contributor wants to for every mile the Walker walks. The money raised is given toward a foreign and a domestic project chosen by the Walk Committee and a small amount returns to the Foundation to promote future Walks. This spring alone over 200 Walks are being co-ordinated throughout the country including Walks at the Universities of Connecticut, Wisconsin, Minnesota and California.

If there is to be an Amherst Walk for Development I need people to help me in co-ordinating it. I am relatively new to this area and I need people to help get the high schools and junior high schools in western Massachusetts involved. I really do not care whether the volunteers are students or faculty, I need workers! If you are in the area of 441 Cance House, stop in and we'll rap about the Walk for awhile or call me at 6-5133.

Together we can find a way,

Winter Carnage

To the editor:

While it seems logical to assume that Winter Carnage weekend was a campus-wide phenomenon, affecting various dorms in varying degrees, I will speak here only of Moore House, being only too well acquainted with the disaster that it suffered. On the Saturday of the weekend of grand festivities known as Winter Carnage, thousands of blithering fools and friends infected Moore throughout its intricate labyrinth of corridors and stairwells. It became a rare and welcome sight to see a familiar face in that mob, 99.9% of whom were highly intoxicated in one way or another. Some of the guests were determined to keep on earning their keep. An example of this was the washing of the main stairwell with the use of a fire extinguisher by what I suspect was a befuddled group having trouble finding the fourth floor. This action can only be reconstructed as an attempt to clean up one of the circular fluorescent lights which lay shattered in several thousand pieces on the concrete steps and platform. Rumor has it that one of the group was tripping on DDT and thought the broken light would set the floor on fire. After several encounters with droves of roving drunks, I began to get paranoid together with about five albums which I was borrowing from a friend whose room I was now in. I considered myself lucky to get back to my room unmarked through the lands of the wandering bands of barfing, bullmouth beeries. The corridor had by now been decimated in the tried and true tradition of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Laying a solid foundation to the mess was the various forms of litter which converted the hallway into a king-size rubbish repository. The bubbler was full of cigarette butts and screaming yellow zonkers as well as a badly mangled copy of the government committee minutes. One look at the toilet stalls was enough to make one consider taking up constipation or going into town to pick up an outhouse. At any rate, I retreated to my room, locked the door, and put on a set of earphones and some good music, cutting off the outside world. This retreat ended about five a.m. when my roommate came in. I took the earphones off. Within three minutes a midget and his chick walked in without warning, almost catching my roommate in the nude. He was looking for either Bill Cosby or Elmer Befuddledbean. Confessing ignorance, I politely escorted them out only to encounter another character who I have since dubbed Two Ripple Pete due to the bottles he held in each hand. This poor, noxious soul wanted to know about that Arlo Guthrie chick who lived on the fourth floor in Pierpont House. Instead of getting into an argument about who Arlo Guthrie really was, I told him that the police were about to bust my room so that he'd better clear out. Two hours later he was still hiding in the second toilet stall. Working up a little bravado I decided to survey the desolation of the ground floor lounges. Whatever was left of the furniture had been smashed to blend in nicely with the lesser rubbish or, if lucky, was only overturned. A bright spot was the fact that the stereo still gave out excellent static at any volume. Shaking my head wisely, I trucked back to the room. Halfway through the door I turned to see what was causing a rapidly approaching crescendo of noise and like a final fleeting gesture I beheld a stark naked figure galloping loosely down the corridor pursued hotly by a half dozen foaming-at-their-mouth fiends, screaming at the top of their booze. At this point I slammed the door shut, slithered over to my bed and hit the sack because there was nothing else available. If there be a moral to this tale of great woe told by an idiot full of sound and fury it is this . . .

. . . If you can't curb your friends don't bring them, we like our toilet seats clean.

Satan's White Horse

Beware my friend, I'm heroin, known to all as destroyer of men.
When I was first used nobody knows,
I came from the land where the poppy seed grows.

I'm a world of power, all know it's true, use me just one, and you'll know it too.
I entered this country, without a passport, ever since then I've been hunted and sought.
From addicts to pushers to plainclothes dicks, but mostly by junkies who need a fix.

My little white grains are nothing to waste,
I'm soft and deadly, and bitter to taste
I conquer mens wills and control their minds, and drive them to commit all sorts of crimes.

I make a school boy forget his books, and a beautiful girl neglect her looks.
Make a good husband cast out his wife, and send greedy pushers to prison for life.

In cellophane bags I find my way, from great men in offices to children at play.

From heads of state to the crummiest bums, from the richest estate to the poorest slums.

I chastise the wise, make a strong man meek, misuse the fool, destroy the weak.
Am I not a king, a god to behold,
more precious than diamonds,
more treasured than gold?
I capture your mind and control your brain with a full coarse treatment;
first pleasure then pain.
So deny the sharp needle or I'll make you sick, with the deadliest habit you ever could pick.

Run if you will, I'll never give chase, for as sure as I'm heroine you'll be back for a taste.
I've given my warning, so be sure to take heed, or else put your foot in my stirrup, and mount my steed.
Sit tight in the saddle, and ride him well, for the white horse of heroin will take you to hell!

Thou Shalt Not Hitch hike!

To the editor:

I wish to reply to Mr. Tracy's letter in the Feb. 13 issue. Unfortunately Mr. Tracy's concern for the problem of hitchhiking vastly outweighs his understanding of it. It appears to him that "the state troopers would have better things to do than arrest peaceful college students. . . .for no greater crime than hitchhiking." Granted, the matter seems trivial. However, I doubt that the legislature just dreamt up the idea that hitchhiking was dangerous and must therefore be made illegal. They have better things to do. Rather, the matter was brought to their attention in it's true light; that of a serious problem. If Dick Tracy had investigated more carefully he would have seen this. He would have seen that cars stopping indiscriminately can indeed be a serious hazard, especially in times when traffic is heavy or visibility poor. He would have seen that his idea that "all cars should be ready for anything at any time" is a beautiful argument but a very unrealistic one. The type of driver on an interstate is frequently going a long distance (maybe even as far as Vermont). He moves along with the traffic and is lulled unsuspectingly into a feeling that all is well. 65 M.P.H. to him, becomes 35 M.P.H. Then, right in front of him. brake lights flash as a car stops to pick YOU up. Usually nothing happens but occasionally an accident occurs. Can you say that since this fellow was less than alert, that it was his own fault? Or, should you say that if you hadn't been there, trying to save a few dollars, that the accident would not have occurred? You find this law "unnecessary and unjust" simply because it doesn't appeal to your personal interests. You further state, "Why aren't we allowed to walk where we please?" The fact is that sidewalks are provided for this purpose and I doubt that you would be very happy if cars shared them with you. Yet you insist on trying to share the road with the cars. At first you stand on the curb but a few minutes pass and nobody picks you up. "Perhaps they can't see me," you think. So you decide to make yourself a little more obvious by blocking one third of the right lane. And then you wonder why the drivers give you a dirty look as they swerve around you. It is not because they hate hitchhikers. It is simply that they don't want to share their road with you. Even little children can be taught to stay out of the road but apparently many hitchhikers can't. You say, "I hope this letter will be seen by someone who can do something about this rotten set-up." Perhaps your parents will see it and spring with a bus ticket for you.

Text of Black Studies Proposal

Recommendations of Committee on Afro-American Studies

The committee on Afro-American Studies, in accordance with its mandate from the administration, is pleased to make the following recommendations:

That a formal academic department, to be known as the W.E.B. Dubois Department of Afro-American Studies be established at the university.

This department will offer an undergraduate major in Afro-American studies as well as courses of studies essential to non-majors intending to play some role in the black community.

It is our view that DETAILED and SPECIFIC requirements of the department and the structure of its program should be left to the department after it has been established but that the general scope of the department will be as follows:

A. The department must concern itself with the wide range of questions pertaining to the political and cultural history, the present situation as well of the future aspirations and possibilities of Black America. This means that the work offered in the department must run across traditional boundaries of the various disciplines including studies in History, Social Sciences, Literature, the Arts, languages and other areas relevant to the black experience.

B. This cohesive and comprehensive approach to the area means that there must be consideration not only of the black community in the United States but of the experience of the black communities of Africa and other parts of this hemisphere. This international scope must be reflected in the faculty and students of the department.

C. The program of the department must involve traditional approaches of study and scholarship, and beyond that, must involve the student in research and non-traditional work study programs in the black community as a basic element of his education.

D. Part of the Department's mandate must be to initiate discussions and negotiations with the other colleges of the area to determine the feasibility of a Five College Department which would be able to coordinate the development of Black Studies in the area utilizing the unique resources of all Five Colleges.

E. That an essential element of the department will be a black cultural center offering courses of instruction and training in the literary and performing arts. This center will concern itself with preserving, developing and presenting to the general community the various expressions of the cultural life of the black community.

The full report and proposal of the Committee follows.

Traditionally, American institutions of higher education have embodied and reflected within their institutional structure and functions the effects of social and economic ideas and developments within the general society. To this extent they have been the creatures of society, being defined by social forces rather than the definers and shapers of events and developments within the society.

Now, however, for a number of disparate but converging reaaons colleges and universities throughout the nation have become one of the arenas in which the large social issues and changes which are currently affecting the general society are finding sharp focus in the form of increasingly bitter confrontations. This situation is inevitable and generally healthy. The situation is not, as many educators have suggested, that "the university is being pilloried for deep-seated social failures for which they are not responsible and over which they can exert no control." It is rather, that the universities are being challenged to accept responsibility for the very real role that they have accepted and are playing in creating and perpetuating national social conditions.

As the national black community intensifies its struggle to liberate itself from the oppressive conditions imposed by centuries of racism, the extent to which not only blacks but other non-Caucasian ethnic minorities have been excluded from the central institutions which structure the American experience become more evident. The extent to which Blacks have been excluded not only from the campus but have been systematically denied their historical and cultural role in the records of the society, as expressed by the curricula of the universities, is outlined in increasingly sharp focus. Thus, for reasons that go much deeper than their traditional function as conduits of immigrant minorities into the ??American mainstream," the American university is faced with a necessity to respond in a much more innovative manner to sweeping social changes in the general society.

In fact, it seems clear, that in an increasingly complicated technically oriented society, the institutions of higher learning are being called to a much more vital and definitive role in the solution of social problems. We are witnessing a domestic social revolution which can only intensify in the years to come. The overt and visible symptoms of this social crisis are easily evident: major cities are periodically immobilized by what can only be termed urban guerilla warfare with an ever-increasing toll in human life and property and a deepening and bitter polarization of the country along racial and class lines. While it is not so immediately clear exactly what is to be done if a traumatic and potentially irreconcilable racial confrontation is to be avoided some quite precise and specific adjustments are beginning to emerge.

It is now fashionable -- following the Kerner Commission report -- to attribute the present domestic distress to the effects of "white racism." What is not so clearly present is any general willingness on the part of the dominant institutions of American life to examine fully and with uncompromising candor the implications of the phrase. We do not detect any serious, informed action-oriented debate taking place within those institutions which affect and define the patterns of social, economic and political relationships in the nation. There is much talk, portentious platitude, pious handwringing and even tokenism, but the kinds of rigorous self-scrutiny and reappraisal of time-honored practices and assumptions which is essential to any real effort to solve the problems facing the society, seems only rarely to be present. It is in the spirit of this kind of committed dialogue and from a pervasive sense of urgency that this proposal is made.

In the matter of the traditional exclusion and oppression of Black Americans, no institution --whatever its particular role in American life might be -- is without responsibility. This includes the great public universities. And in the same manner that these institutions must accept, by virtue of their traditional record of insensitivity, moral myopia and neglect, a major culpability for the current crisis, they must now accept a major responsibility and a leading role in its solution.

The University of Massachusetts, its recent gropings towards the inclusion of Black people notwithstanding, is on its record one of the least committed and responsive of the large public universities in the country at the present time. In almost a hundred years of existence it had, until last year -- and only on the initiative of its handful of Black faculty members -- demonstrated little specific concern for the educational needs of the Black Community of this state.

But it is not our intention to belabor the errors and injustices of the past. We, speaking in behalf of the Black community of the University, are concerned with present realities and the possibilities of the future. At present there are more Black students at the Universities of Mississippi and Alabama than at the University of Massachusetts. Until the past academic year with the initiation of the CCEBS program, there were more students on this campus from Africa and Asia than from the black communities of Boston and Springfield. The proposal which follows is predicated on the assumption that the CCEBS program is in evidence of the University's increased awareness of the inadequacy of its record and its commitment to correcting this situation in the future. We assume that the program will be expanded and broadened to include other minorities, specifically the native Indian and Puerto Rican communities and much greater numbers of black students than has generally been the case. If this is not to be done then there is quite literally no contribution that this institution can make to the needs of the future so far as the country's racial crisis is concerned and it would be well advised to abandon any such hope that it might entertain.

However, the mere presence of Black students in the physical environment of the campus is merely a beginning. There are certain necessary adjustments that any previously almost exclusively white institution which was conceived, structured and run without any thought to the specific educational and psychological needs and expectations of the present generation of Black students.

The persistence of white racism as a dominant social force in the society is evidence of, among other things, a basic failure on the part of the educational system. It is evidence of an ethnic and cultural rigidity, a narrow, provincial racial and cultural chauvinism which pervades the curriculum offerings of these institutions. Universities in which the cultural pluralism which is the reality of America finds adequate reflection in the course offerings are very few indeed. And when couses that essay to relate an accurate assessment of the history, cultural heritage and contemporary situation of the Black community exist, they are sporadic individual efforts inserted into a white curricula without adequate context or continuity.

So long as universities continue to conduct their business, make up their curricula, and structure the information they dispense as though the country were simply a collection of white suburban enclaves and the history of the country merely the record of the destruction or assimilation of inferior cultures by the dominant Anglo-Saxon minority, then the unfortunate, ignorance, prejudice and misunderstanding that currently marks the relationship between the various ethnic groups will continue. The immediate victim of this procedure is the student, but in the long term it is the peace and stability of the society that suffers.

For the white student, this racial and cultural chauvinism has functioned to defraud him of any sophisticated and accurate vision of his nation's reality. For the Black student it has been a damaging and embittering fact of life. This failure of perception, intelligence and indeed of morality on the part of the schools has had a damaging effect on the Black community which has come, in turn, to suspect and in many cases reject "whitey's education." Because these schools have been traditionally the purveyors of white middle-class values and assumptions which are by definition of the Kerner Commission Report racist, the university-educated Black person has been frequently lost to the Black community. Quite literally his education served to make it impossible for him to find a useful and creative role in that community. It is because this generation of Black students and many of their counterparts of the faculty are not inclined to participate in the perpetuation of this pattern, that this proposal is being written. It presumes the willingness of this University to undertake significant and expensive changes in, and additions to, the intellectual and cultural environment of the school, that the education offered here be effectively responsive to the practical needs of the Black community and psychological needs of the young Black students who have been deprived by the society and its educational system of any positive sense of the history and culture of their people. Also, the presence and availability of the department and curriculum that we are proposing will inevitably serve to expand the white student's consciousness of the history and current reality of his country and society.

Toward this end we propose that the University immediately undertake the formation of a Department of Afro-American Studies, to be in full operation by September of 1972. The department will prepare and offer to the University a series of course sequences in various disciplines which will in combination present the social, cultural and political history of the Afro-American people in a comprehensive and structurally integrated manner. The courses will involve studies in the following disciplines: African Languages, Literature, History, Anthropology, Political Science, Economics, Psychology, Music and the Fine Arts. Fully staffed and functioning, the department will offer an interdisciplinary major in Afro-American studies available to students interested in careers in education and scholarship.

In addition, the department will offer course sequences which will represent a basic part of the academic programs of Black students in each of the named disciplines, whatever their major academic field or vocational interest may be. These course sequences will be further discussed but the primary purpose is to provide the student with an approach and perspective towards his major field which is based on concerns, experience and needs of the Black community.

Clearly, a few of these objectives might be achieved by an expansion of the scope and a structuring of existing departments. The mere addition of Black faculty is not sufficient, however. And on the evidence of history, it is equally clear that existing departments lack either the will, ability or energy to undertake the extensive reorientation of their personnel and procedures that would make the function that we are describing possible to them. And, even if this were not the case, such an effort, even at its most effective, would simply continue and institutionalize the disjointed, fragmented, and unsatisfactory approach to the subject that has prevailed.

What is necessary, and what is being proposed here is a cohesive department which as a formally centralized unit with its own resources of teaching, administrative and research personnel, can plan, develop, and coordinate such a program. WHAT IS BEING PROPOSED IS A BLACK EDUCATIONAL entity which can initiate the necessary relationship to the Black community -- both national and international -- which is neither possible or appropriate for any EXISTING BODY OR AGENCY OF THE UNIVERSITY AT PRESENT. There is, quite literally, nothing in the existing structures of the university which fills or is capable of filling such a role.

In addition to the regular teaching function of the department, it will move into the existing vacuum and become a focus for the expression of Black academic and cultural concerns. Thus, it will be responsible for bringing to the campus for varying periods of time lecturers, scholars, writers and artists from the national Black community and the Third World. It must have the autonomy and resources to negotiate exchange programs for Black faculty and students from this university with other universities in this country, Africa, the Carribbean and other communities of African-descended peoples. Thus it will meet a need, which is important in the total educational experience, for a BLACK ACADEMIC AND CULTURAL PRESENCE in what is at present a completely white oriented environment. Nothing short of such an institution can meet the needs and expectations of this and future generations of Black students.

STRUCTURE, SCOPE AND RANGE OF FULLY STAFFED DEPARTMENT

The following is an outline of the faculty and administrative personnel of a fully staffed department and its relationship to the university. It does not include the numerous related research projects of a scholarly and activist nature which become possible under the rubric of such a department.

ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNEL

The academic and scholarly activities will be the responsibility of the chairman and an academic committee composed of the permanent faculty and an equal number of student representatives. The chairman should be a prominent scholar with close ties and commitments to developments in the Black community of this country and abroad. He must be a man of sufficient influence and prestige in the field so as to enable him to attract to the department teachers and scholars of the highest calibre. He will be responsible for the development of the academic program.

The administrative staff will be headed by an Assistant Chairman whose responsibilities will include all organizational and administrative functions. His qualifications need not be of a scholarly nature. He should have experience and a sophisticated understanding of the procedures by which research funds are obtained.

There should be a librarian and archivist who will be responsible for the acquisition of a graduate research library on Afro-American studies. This library should include primary materials, particularly those from the region, and the scholarly papers of scholars and statesmen.

LIBRARY RESOURCES AND ACQUISITIONS

It undoubtedly will be possible for the department to operate initially with the library resources available at the university and neighbouring colleges. But the development of the department will require the early acquisition of a library of Afro-American studies.

THE COLLECTION.

The scope of the collection would probably be determined, at first, by the interests of the Department as indicated by its course offerings. Obviously, the Afro-American Studies Library would have to reflect the inter-disciplinary nature of the program and collect both the current and classic works of history, sociology, anthropology, economics, political science, folklore, art, music, and literature. It is assumed that the core collection will include materials dealing with the black experience in the United States, but the members of the Afro-American Studies Department will need to determine the extent to which Africana materials should be collected.

ACQUISITION PROCEDURES

The Department may wish to explore the possibility of entering into some form of acquisition program with one of the major wholesale book suppliers, such as Richard Abel and Co. For example, this company is equipped to supply an extensive list of titles in the Afro-American Studies field, primarily those published in the English language in the United States or Great Britain. Among the services which Abel can provide is a standing order plan for current trade and reprint titles on Americana and Africana in subject areas specified by the Department. Abel can also furnish sets of catalog cards for each book selected (at $0.90 per set). The descriptive cataloging of these cards is based on that of the Library of Congress and the classification scheme is that adopted by the library receiving them. Such a program would insure the Department of an early delivery of relevent new titles as they are published and a quick and relatively inexpensive cataloging.

It is estimated that the Department will need to invest initially at least $15,000 in book money to establish the beginnings of a core collection. The basic works of history, literature, and sociology in this field are available as trade books or reprints. Reprint titles are generally prices in the $10-$30 range, usually with no discount. Because many important works are available only in reprint form, it is expected that a greater expense will be involved in acquiring a working collection in Afro-American studies than a comparable collection formed largely of trade book titles.

FACULTY

Apart from a demonstrable proficiency in their field, the potential faculty member must demonstrate an intellectual commitment to an aggressive non-traditional approach to their specific discipline. This means that they should come from the ranks of young scholars of both races -- though the emphasis will be on finding black scholars -- who have undertaken the task of challenging the assumptions, practices and methodology of their disciplines in the many areas where traditional practices have either negated or distorted the black experience and black contributions. This is necessary because, contrary to general opinion, the major function of black studies is not merely the introduction of little-known or ignored facts and events concerning the history of Black peoples. The major function of the field will be the introduction and validation of new methods and sources, the creation of new interpretations of traditional materials, and a radical transformation of the notions, concepts and perceptions of history, society and culture presently embodied in the white western academic traditions.

Fully staffed, the department will have an interdisciplinary faculty of approximately 20 full-time members which breaks down as follows:

African Languages . . . 3 members
African and Afro-American Literature & Folklore . . . 3 members
African History . . . 1 member
Afro-American History . . . 2 members
African Cultures, Ancient & Modern . . . 1 member Anthropology . . . 1 member
Sociology . . . 1 member
Psychology . . . 1 member
Political Science . . . 2 members
Music, Drama and the Arts . . . 3 members
Economics and Business Administration . . . 2 members

These estimates are contingent on a number of factors and information which we do not have at present, notably the size of black student enrollment, availability of faculty, and the specific areas of concentration of the faculty we are able to attract in the initial stages of the department's operation.

ACADEMIC RANGE AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The first responsibility of the department will be to prepare and offer a major in Afro-American studies which will be interdisciplinafy in scope. The department will have the parallel responsibility of leavening and affecting the quality and focus of the educational experience of all black students regardless of their major field of study, thus it will be responsible for the designing of courses and sequences of courses which will be of general interest and of specific relevance to students in disciplines other than Afro-American studies.

THE MAJOR

The major in Afro-American studies will be recommended only to students intent on a career in teaching or advanced scholarship in Afro-American studies in one of the relevant professional disciplines. The maximum of 60 required major credits will be spread over many disciplines with a heavy emphasis on History, Sociology, Political Science and Literature. This means that within the scope of the major there will be included courses which correspond to and will fulfill requirements presently offered in traditional departments. The student will be required to take at least 24 credits within one discipline, and the rest a minimum of 24 within the other disciplines of the department. The major will be designed to give the student a specialist's training in one area of the black experience reinforced by a general and theoretical knowledge of other relevant areas of scholarship relating to the black experience.

COURSE SEQUENCE FOR NON-MAJORS: The Black humanities sequence.

One of the primary needs to which the department is a response is that of the young black student for a detailed and sophisticated perspective on the cultural and political history of their people. The general introductory courses of the department will be the Black Humanities sequence which will be mandatory for all black students and optional for interested whites as a substitute for the present humanities requirement which are simply based on the intellectual history of western Europe.

The Black Humanities sequence will consist of a two-semester freshman course on the History of African and Afro-American peoples. This course will be equivalent to the course now being offered by Mr. Benjamin. The sophomore sequence in the black humanities will consist of an introductory year course in the Cultural history and Literature of African and Afro-American peoples.

Freshman Sequence: African and Afro-American History. First Semester: An introduction to the political history and social organization of Africa south of the Sahara, up to and including the Western penetration of the African continent. Second Semester: The history of slavery in the Americas and its effects on African cultures and a general history of the Afro-American community.

Sophomore Sequence: Black Culture and Literature. First Semester: General introduction to the philosophy and world-view of indiginous African cultures with special emphasis on the West African culture group examined through the traditional literature and modern literature of the region. Second Semester: Afro-American literature and culture. An introduction to the literary and other forms and cultural expression in the Afro-American community.

As should be the case in general introductory courses, this sequence will introduce the student to the methods, concepts, procedures and vocabulary of the respective disciplines but the material under consideration will be that produced by the Afro-American and African communities.

COURSE OFFERINGS FOR NON-MAJORS.

The relationship of the department to the education of non-majors is conceived in the following terms. In each of the disciplines which are relevant to our perception of the condition of the black community, the appropriate faculty will be responsible for developing an introductory course, i.e., Introduction to Sociology, Psychology, etc. These courses will be general introductory courses in the particular disciplines, except that the emphasis will be on illustrating the impact that the scholarship in the discipline has had on our perceptions of the black experience. Thus for example, the black student planning to major in a discipline will get his orientation to that discipline from a perspective of that discipline's relevance to the black experience. The Faculty in these disciplines will also be responsible, where this is feasible and useful, for creating a secondary, more specialized sequence of courses in the discipline dealing with problems relevant to the black perspective.

These courses will be available and recommended for black students majoring in these disciplines and open to the general student population. The students will then complete the requirements for their major from the general offerings of the particular department with the advice and counsel of the appropriate faculty in the Afro-American Studies department. Such a student will graduate with a traditional major, i.e., English, History or Sociology but with a strong emphasis and orientation towards black studies.

NON-TRADITIONAL ACADEMIC FUNCTIONS

This current generation of Black student is, by virtue of the historical circumstances in which they find themselves and the alternatives available to them, the most important generation of Black people to be produced in this country because the decisions made by this group, the commitments they espouse and the responsibilities they accept will determine the fate of the Black community in this country.

Consequently, much of the emphasis of the department, will be on developing a tradition of service, of collective responsibility, and a sense of national purpose and priorities among these students. It will be the responsibility of the department to maintain creative relationships with other departments so that there can be a sharing of resources. For example, the sociology faculty of the department will be responsible for establishing the kinds of arrangements with programs in southern Black schools and in urban areas that will make it possible for our students to do field work on community projects through the auspices of programs at other schools. This will to an extent solve the problem of the absence of a large Black community in Amherst. The possibilities of similar programs involving universities and programs in Africa and the Carribbean will also be explored.

It can be seen from the preceding, that contrary to isolating the student from the general academic and scholarly atmosphere of the University, or limiting and fragmenting the scope of his concerns, the department of Afro-American Studies will be centrally involved in giving perspective and focus to the educational experience of students in every aspect of academic endeavour.

PLANNING AND IMPLEMENTATION

PRESENT STATUS OF BLACK STUDIES

Given present conditions in the national academic community - particularly the availability of qualified faculty in the field in light of the history of neglect by traditional institutions of higher education - our projection of a fully staffed department in two years is an optimistic, though not impossible one. It requires that the university act quickly to establish the departmental structures within which a permanent faculty and administrative staff can be recruited.

Despite the absence of the organizational structures necessary for the recruitment of faculty and establishment of the coherent sequence of courses necessary for a major, the committee in consultation with the administration felt that it was possible and desireable to attempt to meet at least some of the needs and expectations of the black community during the 1969-70 academic year. Pending the formal creation of the department, the committee proposed in August, 1969, that certain interim actions be undertaken for the school year 1969-70. These proposals and a report of the progress in their implementation follow.

IMMEDIATE ACTIONS (1969-70)

Following the University's acceptance of the broad general outlines of this proposal and the appended budget a number of steps utilizing the existing personnel resources of the University will become possible and necessary:

INTERIM DIRECTOR

1. An interim director of the W.E.B. Dubois department of Afro-American Studies can be appointed and given the following functions:

A. He be mandated to work with an appropriate representative committee from the Black community to design the details of and staff the department.

a. A core faculty in the areas of History, Literature, Sociology and Political Science can be hired or recruited from the present faculty. This core group would have the following duties:

1. To teach basic courses on an undergraduate level in the areas of their specialization. This core curriculum will begin in September 1969.

2. To work with the planning committee on planning the structure and complete curriculum of the department.

3. This core faculty will begin the search (with the director and committee) for a permanent director, administrative officer and faculty.

. . . On Naming a Department

WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT DUBOIS (1868-1963) is one of the intellectual giants of our time. He was born in Great Barrington, Massachusetts and in a lifetime that spanned nearly a century, waged an unceasing scholarly offensive against the intellectual underpinnings of racism and western cultural imperialism in the modern world.

He is the founder of the NAACP, the first editor of CRISIS Magazine, the initiator and editor of Atlanta University's STUDIES OF THE NEGRO PROBLEM (1897-1910) which is the pioneering scholarly project in this field. He is known as the intellectual father of Pan-Africanism. Brother Dubois received his doctorate from Harvard in 1895 and his dissertation, THE SUPPRESSION OF THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE TO AMERICA, was published as Volume I of the Harvard University Historical Series (1896).

Among Brother Dubois' works which number some twenty volumes are to be found such classics as: THE PHILADELPHIA NEGRO (1896), SOULS OF BLACK FOLK (1903), THE NEGRO (1915), THE GIFT OF BLACK FOLK (1915) and BLACK RECONSTRUCTION (1935).

He is also the editor of THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE NEGRO (1931-1946) and the author of AN APPEAL TO THE WORLD, ON THE STATUS OF THE NEGRO IN THE U.S.A., which was presented to the United Nations in 1945.

Despite -- or because of -- a lifetime of accomplishment and service to humanity, Dr. Dubois was a victim of the McCarthyite hysteria of the 1950's in his own country. He died in exile in Ghana in 1963.

For all these reasons it is appropriate and fitting that the department in the scholarly area which was pioneered by Dr. Dubois at the public university of his native state should bear his name.

Vanderbilt Grad School to Open Next Fall
Representative to Visit Campus on Feb.20

Dr. James V. Davis, Associate Professor of Management at the new Vanderbilt University Graduate School of Management will be on the UMass campus February 20 to discuss the new graduate program with interested faculty and students.

Now in its formative, experimental first year, the Management School will enroll the first regular class of Masters students in September, 1970. This class will play a major role in developing the program and curriculum beyond the first year.

According to Dean H. Igor Ansoff, the School will be inter-disciplinary, multi-institutional, international and deliberately innovative. "In some respects, we are going out of our way to be innovative and creative, but we feel that the potential payoff for our program, as well as all graduate education, justifies the risk and effort," states Ansoff.

The faculty is drawn from diverse fields such as theology, hospital administration, the behavioral sciences, university administration, management consulting, business and industry, mathematics and computer technology. A group of ten "experimental" students have worked closely with the faculty since September, 1969 to develop the foundations for the school.

The School's main themes, according to Ansoff, are responsive to current social, economic and political trends and pressures.

Students interested in talking with Dr. Davis during his visit to the campus should contact the University Placement Office.

Cunningham Dancers Appear Tonight, Dance Class and Coffee Hour Planned

The Merce Cunningham Dance Company began a three-day residency at the University Tuesday under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council. This brilliant ensemble will perform an evening program in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Wednesday. The Council Box Office reports that the performance is a near-sellout.

As part of its visit, the Company will offer a special technique class to ticket holders in the Studio, Women's Physical Education Building at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday which will be followed at 12:30 p.m. by an open house coffee hour in the Lounge, Memorial Hall. The coffee hour has been arranged by the Council so that students, faculty and staff members at the University will have the opportunity to meet informally with Cunningham and his Company. The coffee hour will be open without charge.

Merce Cunningham and Carolyn Brown are the two principal dancers of the Merce Cunningham Dance Company visiting UMass this week.

Reading Dynamics is not only speed reading...it is better reading

You'll read more, understand more, remember more and enjoy more when you learn how to read dynamically. The world-famous, time-tested Evelyn Wood method has proved its lasting value to nearly 450,000 men and women . . . and especially high school and college students who use it daily in their reading assignments. Come to one of our FREE Orientation Sessions. See a film demonstration of the Reading Dynamics method. Have an Evelyn Wood expert explain our unique, easy-to-learn system to your complete satisfaction. Be a dynamic reader . . . you'll have more free time and you'll be a conversational leader and an original thinker!

OUR POSITIVE GUARANTEE OF TUITION REFUND

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute will refund your tuition if you do not at least triple your reading index (reading rate multiplied by comprehension percentage) during the Course as measured by our standardized testing program. This policy is valid when you have attended each classroom session and completed the minimum daily assigned home drill at the level specified by your instructor.

"When you're a Jet, you're the top cat in town"... and when you're in West Side Story you're dancing singing, acting, swinging from a monkey bar, working and loving it.

Three departments of the University are cooperating in the production of West Side Story, scheduled to open March 4th. Music, Dance, and theatre faculty and students are involved in creating the musical which has been called "a ritual of urban violence".

The leaders of the opposing gangs settle on terms for a gang war in this scene from "West Side Story". The University Theatre production is currently in rehearsal stages, readying for a March 4 opening.

Carol Roth as Maria and Jay McAuliffe as Tony are beautiful against a montage of dance that is also rumble, and music that is also a cry.

Dramatic direction is by Marvin Zeinerick (Theatre), choreography by Janet Craft (Dance) and musical direction by Larry Weed (Music).

Tickets for West Side Story will be on sale beginning February 23 in the University Theatre Box Office, Bartlett Hall, 545-2579.

S.U. to Sponsor Weaving Show

The Student Union Arts Committee has procured a series of eleven weavings by Mrs. Helen Klekot for a two-week exhibition in the Reading Room. A resident of 227 Bridge Street, Northampton, Mrs. Klekot has been involved in weaving for seven years, and is a member of the Massachusetts and the New York City Artists-Craftsmen.

She originally studied weaving with Mr. Peter Collingwood of England, and tapestry with Miss Eva Antilla of Finland. Her works have been included in an invitational exhibition of crafts at the DeCordova Museum at Lincoln, Mass., and in a show at the Contemporary Crafts Museum of N.Y. C. She has also participated in a travelling exhibit sponsored by the Smithsonian Institute. Locally, Mrs. Klekot has taught backstrap weaving at the Leverett Crafts Association and weaving at the Amherst Art Center. The exhibit currently on display is strikingly complex in texture and design. Prices of the pieces may be ascertained by contacting Mrs. Klekot at 584-7756.

McLain Missing, May Be in Fed Probe

DETROIT (AP) - The whereabouts of Detroits Tigers pitcher Denny McLain remained a mystery yesterday when speculation continued as to the role he might be playing in a federal probe of gambling centered at Detroit.

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he met with McLain Friday in New York to discuss certain "off the field activities" of the pitching ace who led the Tigers to the American League pennant in 1968 with 31 victories.

Kuhn declined to amplify, but said McLain's activities did not involve baseball.

The prosecutor of Genesee County, Mich., Robert Leonard, said Tuesday that he has turned information on McLain over to federal authorities.

"We're cooperating with the federal task force and we've turned over all of our information concerning the alleged activities of McLain while he was here in Flint."

McLain played the organ and entertained during 1967 in a Genesee County supper club, the Short Horn Steak House, at Flint.

Leonard would not describe the information he turned over to the task force which is based at Detroit. Its investigation has resulted in a number of arrests.

A business associate of Mc Lain's, Ed Demetrak of Detroit, said Friday that the pitcher had talked to federal authorities in Detroit because their investigation "deals with people Denny may have known."

He insisted McLain has done nothing illegal.

After the first series of arrests were made in Michigan and Nevada on New Year's Day, officials involved in what they described as a probe of a nationwide gambling ring said subsequent disclosures could involve well known names in professional sports.

Fifteen persons were arrested but charges against three have been dropped. Leonard's investigation of McLain's activities in his Genesee County, some 60 miles north of Detroit, could be connected with the pitcher's involvement in a court suit which alleges he and another man failed to repay a $7,000 loan received in 1968 from the Citizens' Commercial & Savings Bank. A court hearing on the matter was scheduled for Monday, but McLain failed to appear.

Efforts to reach McLain for comment have been fruitless. Spring training for the Tigers is scheduled to begin this week in Lakeland, Fla. McLain was at the Tiger camp last week to pick up his mail but has not been seen in Lakeland since then.

Johns Top Frosh, 6-2

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

The Little Redmen hockey team ran into a juggernaut known as the Harvard freshmen Monday night at Orr Rink and gave a good account of themselves before bowing 6-2 to the Little Crimson.

The teams skated fairly evenly in the first period as was evidenced by the 2-2 score after the first stanza. McNanna opened the scoring with a shot from a tough angle that beat UMass goalie Peter Erickson to the far corner, with the assist going to Elliot.

Wall tallied shortly after to make the score 2-0 for Harvard as he beat Erickson from in close. Hampe assisted on the play. UMass came storming back after the second Harvard score and actually dominated play as Lonnie Avery beat Harvard's Bertagna on an unassisted play.

Don Riley then tied the game on a beautiful play as he picked up the puck near center ice, skated around two Harvard defenders, and drove a shot past Bertagna who had come way out of the net to cut down the angle.

Then, as time was running out in the period, Riley again broke in on the Harvard goalie and again put the puck past him only to have the goal nullified by the refs who said that time had run out.

The second period was all Harvard. It was as simple as that. The Little Crimson put on an unbelievable display of passing and position hockey. Erickson constantly found himself with two opponents standing unguarded right in front of him waiting for passes from the corners.

And the passes came often as Harvard scored four times in the second frame, all scores coming off passes in front of a beleaguered Erickson. Two goals came off the stick of Corkery, and Mc Nanna and Hynes each had single tallies in the lopsided period.

The third period was also controlled by Harvard, but some great goaltending by Erickson kept the visiting team from making the game a complete runaway as the final stanza remained scoreless.

Considering the raves the Little Crimson sextet has been getting this year, UMass made the contest more of a game than perhaps most people expected.

BoSox Prep

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) - Veteran right hander Vicente Romo was the only player unaccounted for yesterday as the Boston Red Sox opened an early training camp for pitchers with arm trouble history.

Eddie Kasko, the Red Sox' new manager, greeted 10 pitchers and three catchers who are getting a jump on other battery men due to work out for the first time Saturday.

The Red Sox weren't disturbed by Romo's absence although he had been due to check into a motel Monday night. The team's only word is that Romo was en route from his home in Mexico.

UMass Girl Gymnasts Split

In one of the most exciting girls' meets held on University of Massachusetts campus, the girls Gymnastics Team narrowly lost to Vaudreuil Silhouettes, but solidly won over Southern Connecticut. The Canadians displayed a high level of skill and jumped into a 3 point lead after the first two events.

UMass girls came in strong during the second half of the meet, but could not overcome the lead. The final team scores were:

Vaudreuil Silhouettes	93.15
Southern Connecticut	81.70

The floor exercise event was won by Lise Arsenault from the Silhouettes, who scored a seldom seen 9.0. Sally Espe from Southern Connecticut came second scoring 8.8, and Linda Seikunas from UMass third with a 8.55. In vaulting, UMass had a hard time. Only Sue White placed among the top 5 competitors, taking a second with 7.9. The event was won by Sally Espe, who scored 8.15

On the balance beam the UMass girls had their best scores ever earned by the team in this event. Marina Rodrigues won the event with an 8.4 Ruth Morse came third, scoring 8.15. Despite a fall off the team, Linda Seikunas placed fifth with 7.95.

The uneven bars were won by two UMass girls. Barbara Holt came first, earning 8.1. Lynne Lamarche placed a close second with an 8.0. Third place went to Sally Espe, who scored 7.95.

The next meet for UMass girls will be held on Saturday, February 21st at 1:00 p.m. This time the opponents will be girls from Salem State College.

Redmen Ravage Rhody, 83-74, In Key Conference Tilt

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

KINGSTON, R.I. -Playing great team basketball, the UMass Redmen tipped Rhode Island 83-74, after falling behind early, but struggling back to battle the Rams and finally topping them in a tremendous hoop contest here last night.

Forty seconds into the game Julius Erving put UMass up 2-0. John Fultz made it 2-2, with a long jumper and the lead began to seesaw. With 14:30 left in the helf, the score was knotted 10-10.

At that point Rhode Island started to show signs of exploding. The Rams put in 6 points and the Redmen answered with only two, for a 16-12 count with 12:51 to go.

An Ed Molloy foul basket off-set by an Erving lay-up put URI ahead by three, 17-14, but that was momentary. The Rams began to move and canned seven straight points for a ten point, 24-14, advantage.

This state of events put the Redmen in a crucial, do or die, situation. Before such a rabid Rhody crowd, they could not afford to let the home team stretch its lead. They outdid themselves and fought back mightily.

For some time, things stayed at an equilibrium as UMass found it tough to make up for lost ground and, consequently, was behind by nine, 33-24, with 5:29 remaining.

The visitors began to resurge. Dennis Chapman and Mike Pagliara replaced Jack Gallagher and John Betancourt respectively and both of them came through. Ray Ellerbrook got fantastically hot and Erving put in key hoops as the Redmen proceeded to silence the home town partisans for the rest of the half.

An Erving ten-footer, an Ellerbrook base-line jumper, and an Erving turn-around jumper made the score 33-30, with 4:08 on the clock. The Rams just weren't hitting; Pagliara threw in two big buckets for a UMass 34-33 edge with 2:42 remaining.

URI grabbed the lead back but two helpful free-throws and a field goal by Ellerbrook sandwiched arount a great under-the-basket lay-up by Dick Samuelson put the Redmen in front, 40-39, at intermission.

Halftime scoring leaders were Ellerbrook for UMass with 17 and Fultz for Rhode Island with 16.

UMass came out really psyched for second half play, but the Rams were also determined. Action was fast and furious for the first five and a half mintues.

The Redmen had a 47-43 lead but were soon held to a 49-49 standstill with 14:27 to go.

Action then tapered off and became sloppy. The advantage switched hands for the next five and a half minutes. But, with 8:54 left, Ken Mathias hit a lay-up for a 60-58 Redmen edge.

The visitors started their climb to victory. Seven Erving points and two by Ellerbrook put UMass out in front, 69-60, with 5:45 showing. And play did not slow down until the buzzer. Redmen leads the rest of the way were around the five point mark, since as the Rams scored, so did UMass.

Erving, Ellerbrook, Pagliara, and Chapman put it on ice, establishing leads of 78-68, 80-70, 82-74, and the final 83-74 reality.

HOOP NOTES - Erving had 30 points and 20 rebounds. . . .Captain Ellerbrook had his finest scoring night of the year with 28 points and was a mighty factor in the Redman win. . .UMass has three Yankee Conference games remaining on it's schedule.

Icemen, Seeking Playooff Bid, Face Amherst

By STEVE SHAMBAN

UMass hockey returns to the homey confines of Orr Rink this afternoon for a 4 p.m. rematch with Amherst College, currently sporting a 2-10 mark. The Redmen will be after their eighth win of the campaign.

UMass was a 9-2 victor in the two squads' previous meeting at Orr in December. The Redmen did not play a spectacular hockey game in the win but they effectively outclassed the hapless Lord Jeff's who are not likely to be confused with the Montreal Canadiens.

The biggest problem for the Redmen could be a sense of overconfidence which could easily be induced at the prospect of meeting the relatively weak Jeff's. Such an attitude could well act to the disadvantage of UMass.

It's not as if Amherst does not know what a win is. They've defeated Lehigh 7-2 and Holy Cross just a week ago yesterday, 5-4 and threw a scare into Division II power Bowdoin before succumbing 8-2. In that match, the Jeff's were serious contenders until well into the third period.

If indeed complacency does set into the ranks of the Redmen, the longer that Amherst is allowed to stay in the game, the tougher the situation for UMass.

Ted Tombs, from Port Credit, Ontario will center the first line for wings Eric Nelson and Dean Randall. Tombs was last year's leading scorer. Captain Bill Clift, an ex-center and Tom MacKay will see action at the points. Either Tom Viall or Paul Kouloris will see action in the nets.

This will be a good game for the Redmen to rectify the deficiencies which have plagued them of late, particularly on offense as evidenced by the fact that they took 54 shots against AIC Saturday but could only score on two.

Coach Jack Canniff usually does not decide who his goalie will be until just before game time but it is very possible that Bruce Crawford will get the nod. It is also very likely that Canniff will go with four lines in an attempt to give everyone some work.

The Redmen will have four games remaining on their schedule after this one. Interestingly, every one of them qualifies as an important match as does today's. The next game is Saturday at Brown [illegible] the Redmen will have a chance to upset a respected Division I power as they will February 27 at Orr against UNH.

The real important games, however, are Division II contests today, against Holy Cross Tuesday and against Williams March 2 at Orr in the regular season finale. Victories in all three would give the Redmen a very good chance to gain coveted Division II playoff berth.

Thus the Lord Jeffs, aware of the importance this game holds for cross-town rival UMass, could well be inspired to play their best hockey of the year. Such a possibility might well become a fact.

Wrestlers in Action

The UMass wrestling team, after six straight road meets, returns home tonight, hosting Dartmouth in an 8:00 meet at Boyden. The Redmen are riding a five meet winning streak and have only suffered one loss in their last nine outings.

UMass is currently 11-4 on the season and 8-1 in New England. The only loss has been to Springfield and for that reason the Redmen are still number two in the rankings behind the Chiefs.

Dartmouth is currently re - building its wrestling program and shouldn't be any problem for the Redmen. The Indians are in the midst of a losing season and aren't among the top ten in the New England rankings. The Redmen won easily at Hanover last year, due to many forfeits by Dartmouth and although the visitors are putting more emphasis on their wrestling program, they still may be hurt by a lack of wrestlers.

UMass will be using a shuffled lineup due to illness and the effects of three meets over the weekend. Definite starters will be Nick Didomenico, Sheldon Goldberg, Steve Jones, Clay Jester, Tom Young and Bruce Buckbee. Tom Andrewes will wrestle at 177 if he is well and Chris Hodson will probably go at unlimited.

Trackmen Meet UConn, Best in Region, at Storrs

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

The UMass track team travels to Storrs tonight for a seven o' clock encounter with Yankee Conference rival, UConn. In UConn, the Redmen will be facing a team which is considered by many coaches, including UMass' Coach Ken O'Brien, as the strongest team in New England. The Huskies are regarded as the pre-meet favorites in the Yankee Conference and New England indoor track championships. Their credentials are impressive and the Redmen will need a top effort to challenge them

As was the case in their first two meets, the Redmen will be facing a team which has already had a number of meets and has overall team depth. In the Huskies, they'll be facing a team with good depth in every event. Northeastern and Dartmouth had depth where it counted, but had some weaknesses. The Huskies are strong everywhere.

With two meets behind them, the Redmen should be ready for this meet. They are improving with each meet and UConn will find them to be a very formidable foe.

The Huskies have four strong weightmen. Sophomore Art Paliwoda is rated as one of the top 35 pound weightmen in the country. Craig Conners is the top shot putter for UConn. Fast improving Eddie Acaro will be out to challenge these men for UMass. He has improved with each meet and tonight should be no exception.

The sprints and hurdles shape up to be closely contested races. Bob Amaral of UConn will be trying to keep the Redmen from sweeping the sprint as they did in the first two meets. Amaral placed in the indoor and outdoor sprint in the New Englands last year, but will have his hands full with Walter Mayo and company.

Peter Lacillade, who placed in the indoor and outdoor hurdles in the Conference meet last year, will lead the Huskie hurdlers against the UMass tandem of Jim Graves and Gerry Spellman, who placed one-two in their last meet. With Graves and Spellman nearing top form, the Redmen could pick up needed points in this event.

The middle and long distance events could be the top events in the meet, as once again cross country rivals from both schools will be competing head to head in the 1000, mile and two mile.

Steve Flanagan is the top 1000 yard man in New England. He's the defending N.E. 1000 yard indoor champ and captured the 880 yard championship last spring. Dave Evans will represent the Redmen in this event and will keep Flanagan company around the track for the entire race.

UConn has two outstanding milers in Craig McColl, who will also double in the 1000, and John Vitale, who will double in the two mile along with Rich Spurling. Ron Wayne has met these runners many times before and each time the competition has been second to none.

Wayne will be running in only the mile tonight. He'll be joined in the mile by Larry Paulson and in the two mile by sophomores Bruce Blackburn and Don Dunsky. These two distance events could produce some of the top times in New England this year and could be the key races in the meet.

UMass will have to score heavily in the jumping events. The Redmen have the men to do this in cal Carpenter and Ed Shaughnessey. The long jump is a toss-up before the meet. Big Redmen efforts in these events could turn the tables on the Huskies.

Emerson Hiller, who has been steadily improving will have his work cut out for him with the UConn pole vaulters. They are good and have had fine marks on their vaults this season.

Al Mangan will represent the Redmen in the 600 yard run tonight. His opponent will be Peter Hillmar who is one of the outstanding middle distance runners in New England.

Last year UMass trailed by two points going into the last event in the meet. This year UConn is a stronger team than it was last year, and the Redmen have lost seniors through graduation. It takes more than two meets to develop sophomores.

Rent Protest Slated for Today

A sizeable number of students are expected to participate in the day of protest against the administration's proposed room rent increase today.

According to Student Senate Public Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine, the day's events will begin at 1:30 with rallies in all four of the University residential areas. Students will then meet at the Union at 2:00 where they will sign what Levine calls "letters of dissatisfaction over their role with University decision making."

At 2:30 the students will march to Whitmore and will leave the letters with Dean Field.

Then the main event of the day, an afternoon-long teach-in in the Student Union Ballroom, will begin at 3:00. Student power in general will, according to Levine, join the rent crisis as the topic of the meeting.

Slated to speak at that meeting are Student Senate President Cynthia Olken, Vice President Glen Eiters, Levine, Senator Howard Boorstein, Provost Oswald Tippo, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Seymour Shapiro, Dean of the School of Education Dwight Allen, Dean of Students William F Field and alumnus Gil Salk.

Students organizing the meeting according to Levine, asked Treasurer Johnson to attend the meeting, reasoning that he is the central figure in the rent issue. However, Johnson refused to attend because he "is to busy."

This day of protest, according to most of its organizers, is the most important step in the drive to block the rent hike. In Levine's words, "Our greatest weapon in bringing the rent increase down is great student support today."

Senate Reaffirms Chancellor Stand, Votes to Support Trip to Trustees

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate, upon receipt of the recommendation of the Executive Committee, voted to reaffirm its stand against the appointment of a permanent Chancellor in the absence of a student-facuity search; and in favor of the appointment of Provost Tippo as acting Chancellor pending the outcome of such a search at its regular weekly meeting last night. The vote was 23 to 8 with 5 abstentions.

Negative debate centered about opposition to appointing the Provost acting Chancellor. Since both bills were included in the motion to reaffirm, there was no way to vote against just the latter bill.

President Cynthia Olken, in debate over another bill, informed the Senate that a student delegation will transmit the Senate's recommendation to the Monday meeting of the Board.

In other action, the Senate, after lengthy debate, voted to direct the Student Senate Bus Manager to provide from the bus account transportation for students wishing to attend the Monday meeting to protest the general lack of student involvement in the Chancellor, President, and rent hike situations.

In budgetary action, the Senate heard the annual arguments about budgeting special interest groups, but by close votes reversed its position of previous years by striking the budgets of the Precisionettes (22-19), the Flying Redmen (20-18), the Engineering Journal (19-17), and the Amateur Radio Association (voice vote). However, the Senate voted to fund the Rugby Club, apparently in the hope that present Athletic Council Policy will cause the Council to fund that organization in subsequent years.

In other activity, the Senate accepted the constitution of the Central Area Council.

Senate Exec Committee Hears Provost Tippo

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate Executive Committee, after hearing Provost Oswald Tippo respond to questions for an hour and a quarter, voted 7 to 2 to direct the Public Relations Committee to place ads for one week in the Daily Collegian requesting interested parties to submit to the Executive Committee nominations for the post of Chancellor.

Dr. Tippo is widely regarded as the leading, and at present only, candidate for that post. He has already received the support of the Faculty Senate.

The Executive Committee further voted to recommend to the Senate that it reaffirm its stand on bills S130 and S131, which (1) oppose the appointment of a permanent Chancellor until a student-faculty search committee has reviewed the field of candidates and made its report; and (2) recommend that Dr. Tippo be appointed acting Chancellor until the search committee completes its work.

The Provost declined to comment on questions concerning his candidacy for the post, or the manner in which the Board has proceeded in this matter.

The interview was wide-ranging, covering everything from the role of the undergraduate to principles of University governance to the University budget.

Chicago 7 Rally Set

A group of Amherst and Northampton residents will hold a support rally for the Chicago seven next Tuesday in the Student Union Ballroom at 4:00.

UMass Associate Professor and A.C.L.U. lawyer Isadore Sliver will speak about the legal aspects of the trial at the meeting.

A film will also be shown on Bobby Seale, an original defendant, who was jailed at the beginning of the trial for what he called "demanding his constitutional rights."

Five-college Blacks Sieze Four Amherst Buildings Self-Determination Demanded

Members of the five-college black community turned Amherst College's Frost Library into Malcolm X Memorial Library as they seized four campus buildings Wednesday and charged the white community of the Five-College area with refusal to recognize the need for self-definition and self-determination. Each of the four operating colleges were reportedly issued specific demands.

The sudden takeover upset administrators, disturbed bookworms, attracted hordes of newsmen and students from other colleges, and left most Amherst students resigned to a day of disruption and little studying.

The move came unannounced at about 1 a.m. Wednesday. An Amherst College policeman said that a fire alarm turned in at Stone Dormitory may have been a move to distract the two campus policemen while blacks slipped into Frost Library, Converse Hall, College Hall, and the new Science Center. He said that a large group of blacks carrying boxes and bundles was seen while police were investigating.

At 6 a.m. an announcement was made over the campus radio station that the occupation had occurred. Administrators, previously told, had already begun formulating plans to handle the events.

"The specific goal of this action," the announcement read, "is to close the college down. The outstanding feature of this action is to repressnt the ideological and physical commitment of the concepts of a Five College Black Community."

Indicating the five colleges for breakdown in channels of communication and failure to implement programs, the document said that the colleges "are not, and have never been seriously committed to satisfying our needs."

The announcement was followed by bulletins from the administration concerned with the specific demands of the building occupants, and calling for a faculty meeting at 3:00 and a general college meeting at 5:00.

Blacks claimed that between 150-200 students were in the buildings, with about 40-50 in each. While newsmen and College President Calvin H. Plimpton were kept waiting for a black students press conference and redefinition of demands, the administrator said he objected to the demonstrators' prevention of other students from studying, but planned no forced removal or summons of outside help.

During the morning dozens of people tried to get into the buildings. They were met with indifference, smiles, curses and retreat from windows as students peered in. One occupant held up a sign asking "No pictures, please," as photographers pressed lenses to glass.

News of the takeover spread to other campuses, attracting more students from as far as Springfield. They peered into windows as blacks ate oranges, drank soda, and played cards to transistor radio music. Rumors spread through crowds that white students would plan sympathy strikes, that blacks had performed similar takeovers on other campuses, and that state police were to be called in.

But black spokesmen were not to be found until after a two-hour wait, when a group appeared at the president's house, to confront Plimpton.

There, Wilburn Williams, an Amherst junior and spokesman for the blacks, told Plimpton that the "communications set up is meaningless," and that there has been "continued frustration of the black community as a viable force" in the college community.

He said that there were "initial key issues to be enacted following negotiations with the citizens of our (the black) community".

He then handed Plimpton an envelope containing about 150 papers, supposedly containing more specific demands, and left with a handful of black student leaders.

Newsmen, going over Williams' statement on tape, realized that it made no specific grievances to the college. Plimpton then expressed concern after leafing through the voluminous sheets, stating that no specific list of problems addressed to the school was in them.

"It's just a bundle of papers and letters of various black groups," he said.

The blacks returned to their silence and occupation of buildings. Nothing was said by either side as faculty members met to discuss the day's events.

Shortly before 3:30 the group occupying Frost Library removed the chains on the door and left the building. Whites moved back into the library to find it neat and undisturbed, except for copies of "Ebony" magazine on tables. A white-haired librarian said the group had taken various books on black history, claiming that "they belong to us."

"Perhaps we should ask them to come back and check them out," he said.

Those vacating Frost Library were soon joined by those in the other buildings at the Octagon, where they held an hour-long meeting. The move from the buildings was described as a "change of tactics".

The faculty meeting adjourned for a general college gathering at Johnson Chapel at 5 o'clock. Topics discussed reflected the confusion of events and lack of clear-cut issues.

Four motions resolved by the faculty at the previous meeting were announced. The faculty resolution condemned the takeover, recognized the "responsibility" that the community held towards blacks, welcomed the decision to vacate the buildings peacefully, and looked forward to "substantive negotiation."

Dean of Faculty Prosser Gifford told the capacity crowd that the administration recognized four specific issues: the curricular program involving black studies, financial aid to blacks, the admissions policy, and the administration of a summer tutorial program.

White students then assailed the administrators for lack of a specific answer to the various issues. Plimpton countered this with the statement that 150 pages of paper would take some time to analyze before detailed answers could be made.

Other issues raised included the question of other area colleges' involvement in the issues. Gifford said that while the demands will be difficult to act quickly on, it will be considerably more difficult because all colleges will have to move equally towards a uniform solution.

When asked about punishment to be given to the blacks who had occupied the buildings, Plimpton said nothing yet had been decided. Students argued heavily on both sides of the punishment question.

Many students agreed during the day that the whole takeover, while seemingly well-organized among blacks, led to much confusion of everybody, with the end result of a student's statement that "Nothing continued to be said today." Reaction by each college to "all the cloudy questions will probably be more of the same" said another.

Statement of Issues

The black students of the University of Massachusetts are participating in this action along with the brothers and sisters from other area colleges for a number of reasons:

1. to demonstrate to the Five College establishment that the Black Student Community will in the future be acting in a unified manner on all issues affecting any black person in the Five Colleges.

2. to articulate once more the needs and grievances of that part of the black community which is located at the University of Massachusetts.

We demand immediate acceptance and implementation of the proposal for an Afro-American Studies Department which is pending action by the University. There can be no qualifications for further delay.

We further demand the immediate establishment of a cultural center to serve the needs of the Black Community. Negotiations on this question have been dragging on since 1968. We will accept Mill's House for this purpose.

We also demand that the University double its commitment to the CCEBS Program. We call on the Administration and Trustees of the University to double the enrollment of Black Students at the University for the 1971 school year. Even with this action the black student representation at the University will be disproportionately small as a consequence of the history of exclusion of Blacks from that institution.

Jury Finds Five Guilty of Inciting Chicago Riots

CHICAGO (AP) - Five political activists were convicted by a federal jury Wednesday of coming to Chicago to incite riots at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Those five and two fellow defendants were acquited of conspiring to plot the bloody violence that took place in Chicago's streets and parks during the final week of August 1968.

David T. Dellinger, 54; Jerry C. Rubin, 31; Thomas E. Hayden, 30; Abbott "Abbie" Hoffman, 31, and Rennard C. Davis, 29, were found guilty of crossing state lines to encourage riot making speeches to various rallies during the convention week.

Each man could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and fined $10,000. There is no established minimum punishment.

John R. Froines, 31, and Lee Weiner, 31, were found innocent on the conspiracy count and a second count charging them with teaching the use of an incendiary device. The government charged in the five month trial that Froines and Weiner plotted to five bomb an underground garage in Grant Park.

Weiner and Froines could not be charged with crossing state lines to come to Chicago because Weiner was a resident of Chicago during 1968 and Froines, a resident of Eugene, Ore., was spending the summer with his in-laws who live in Chicago.

Of the seven defendants, Weiner and Froines were virtually unknown before they were indicted with the other men in March 1969. Dellinger, Davis and Hayden were leaders of the National Mobilization Committee which planned the antiwar demonstrations during convention week.

Rubin and Hoffman were founders of the Yippies - Youth International Party - which sponsored a Festival of Life in Lincoln Park during convention week as a protest against the democrats' gathering which they called a "festival of death."

The government charged that both groups used these devices to lure young persons to Chicago so they would confront police, foment violence and be "the first step of the revolution."

The U. S. District Court jury of 10 women and two men returned its verdict shortly after noon, ending four days of deliberations and bringing the bitter, tumultuous and often raucous trial to its legal conclusion.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman of U.S. District Court did not set a date for sentencing.

He also denied freedom on bond to the five convicted defendants, saying : "I find the men in this trial too dangerous to be at large."

The five convicted and their two co-defendants are being held in the Cook County-Chicago-jail on sentences ranging from 2-1/2 months to 2-1/2 years for contempt.

Judge Hoffman imposed the contempt penalties Saturday and Sunday, immediately after the jurors retired to reach a verdict.

The judge als o sentenced defense lawyer William M. Kunstler to four years and 13 days for contempt, and his colleague, Leonard I. Weinglass, to 20 months and five days.

Both lawyers are free, however, because the judge stayed commitment of their sentences to May 4.

A legal team representing the two lawyers plans to file a brief with the U. S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals by Thursday.

The verdict was the first legal test of the anti-riot provision of the 1968 Civil Rights Act. The law makes it possible to indict persons on a charge of crossing state lines with the intent to incite a riot.

Strict security was enforced during the reading of the verdicts.

At the motion of the government, the wives of Rubin and Hoffman along with Dellinger's 13 year old daughter, Froines' mother-in-law and Weiner's girl friend were removed from the courtroom.

Anita Hoffman, Abbott's wife, shouted at the judge: "The eight original defendants and the two lawyers will be avenged. We'll dance on your grave, Julie!"

Rubin's wife, Nancy, screamed at newsmen and marshals outside the courtroom: "My husband is being sentenced and they won't let me watch."

Kunstler objected to the government motion. He said: "The verdict of the jury should not be received in secret. . .The last crowning indignity you can possibly do is to let these defendants stand alone divorced from their family and friends and supporters at a moment in their lives when they are about to receive a verdict. . ."

Thomas A. Foran, U. S. district attorney and chief prosecutor, later told newsmen: "People who couldn't control themselves in court might rush the jury box."

He referred to the several outburst of screaming and scuffling that marked the five month trial. On many occasions, including an outbreak during the contempt sentencing Saturday, the defendants' families were involved.

Two of the jurors were visibly shaken during the reading of the verdicts and the subsequent one by one polling of the jury requested by the defense.

Mrs. Jean Frita quivered and was hardly audible when she stood to affirm her decision. Miss Kay S. Richards, 23, the youngest of the jurors, wavered and her voice was broken when she affirmed the verdict.

School of Education Announces Modular Credit Week Feb. 23-27

During the week of February 23-27, the School of Education will present "Something '70 -- A Modular Credit Week." Open to the entire University Community the School will offer a series of educational experiences ranging from panel discussions and lectures to films and workshops on a wide variety of subjects. Students and educators from throughout the state and nation will gather at the School of Education to share their ideas and interests on a variety of educational issues and problems.

No single theme will predominate the week; however, emphasis throughout will be on educational innovations and what is being done in American education.

One of the goals of "Something '70" Week is to demonstrate to the University and to the public the modular credit system in action. The concept of modular credit is founded on the premise that learning takes place in many other places besides the standard course, and that this learning should be institutionally recognized. The Modular Credit Week will offer a myriad of these non-standard educational opportunities, and, at the same time, give those students who desire it modular credit for the learning in which they participate.

Unless otherwise noted, every event during the "Something '70" Week is worth 1 module of credit to any undergraduate at the University of Massacusetts. The minimum which he must do to earn credit is to attend the entire event. Each instructor or leader may require, at his discretion, other things of those participants who wish to receive modular credit. These additional criteria, if any, will be explained at the beginning of the event.

Each leader will have a supply of modular credit record forms. A student who wishes to apply for credit simply fills in one of these forms at the end of the session. The leader then initials it, signifying his approval of the request, and returns the forms to the modular credi t office. Further explanation of the modular credit system will be available throughout the week.

All School of Education classes have been suspended for the week of the 23-27 in order to permit the students to participate fully in the events.

MLK To Hold Conference Stresses Reorganization

Saturday and Sunday, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will hold a reorganization conference. The purpose of the conference is opening the future programs, structure, and philosophy of the King Council to the entire campus. All decisions made by the participants in the conference will be finding upon the King Council.

The first day's program will consist of a series of workshops oriented to specific issues. The first workshop will begin promptly at 11:00 a.m., and will be concerned with the issue of poverty. It will be led by Kenneth Mosakowski. The second workshop, led by Carl Brown, will begin at 1:00 p.m. and will deal with racism. Michael Pollard will lead the 2:00 p.m. workshop on militarism, followed by a 3:00 p.m. workshop on ecology led by Gene Petit and Paul Spegel. The final Saturday workshop will deal with human rights, and will be led by Robbie Chapin. It will begin at 4:00 p.m.

All workshops will discuss issues in relation to the present structure and programs of the King Council. Criticism of the King Council will be sought, as well as constructive ideas for change. Each workshop will be charged with developing a continuing approach to the issue which can be carried out after the conference is complete.

On Sunday, the participants in all of the workshops will come together to discuss future structure and philosophy of the King Council. The discussion will be based on the conclusions reached in the previous day's workshops.

The restructuring conference grew out of a proposal submitted to the King Council Board of Directors by Bob Henderson last semester. The King Council has been struggling with a number of internal problems over the past several months.

It has attempted to deal with charges of elitism by experimenting with several different structural ideas, none of which proved satisfactory. Questions about how membership should be defined have been left unresolved as well.

Democrats Table 'No Confidence' Vote Against McCormack

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Democrats derailed a frontal attack on Speaker John W. McCormack's leadership Wednesday, voting 192 to 23 to table a resolution of no confidence.

But a more moderate motion to study House customs and procedures, including the seniority system, remained alive for action at the next party caucus.

And some younger Democrats who opposed precipitate action against the 78 year old speaker emphasized that he will be challenged if he seeks the top House party post again next year.

McCormack promptly interpreted the vote as one of confidence.

"What do you think?" he asked newsmen. "Even some of those who voted against tabling did so because they wanted a chance to vote directly on the resolution. I ould have preferred that my - self."

Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif., who broke with other McCormack critics to offer the resolution now, agreed this was the case.

But Waldie insisted he made his point. He has acknowledged from the start his motion would be soundly defeated, but he said he has dramatized his view that the leadership is out of touch with the times.

"I can only conclude the House is not ready to vote on the resolution," he said.

FROM OUR SIDE

On the Occupation

The questions must be asked as a result of the occupation yesterday of four Amherst College buildings by black students representing the Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith and UMass campuses.

1) Is the seizing and holding of four buildings, vital to the everyday workings of a college, justified by the ends of immediate institution of black studies programs, increased black enrollment, formation of black cultural centers and determination of the "reality of black presence"?

2) What can be done to resolve a volatile situation that threatens the peace and continued learning process?

Answering the first has been a constant problem whenever a demonstration arises. Maybe a nebulous explanation is the only way. The seizing of four buildings that are of such importance to the education of an entire campus community can not be condoned. Yet it cannot be completely condemned, for, realistically, it is virtually the only way to bring to attention legitimate issues.

Answering the second is just as difficult. Speaking solely from the UMass end, it is a fact that the administration has been in the process of acting on all the demands asked. It is also a fact that decision-making process has been a overly tedious process.

We feel that there is complete justification in the formation of the black studies department without further delay. We also feel there is complete justification in the creation of a black culture center at Mills House, as soon as all residents of that dorm are able to move to adequate housing, even if it be as late as next fall.

We suggest these actions, not because of yesterday's actions at Amherst, not as a token measure to avert confrontation, but as overdue measures for the education of black students.

Issue of the Day is Rent

Despite Treasurer Johnson's gloomy predictions, several top University Administrators admit that if today's Student Senate Rent demonstration draws a large number of students, the school will be forced to at least limit the size of the rent increase next year.

The Senate plans to march to Whitmore where they will deliver "approximately 5000 letters" of protest to Dean Field, and then stage a day-long teach-in in the Student Union.

However, several students plan to discuss the general role of University decision making at that meeting, and while gaining a greater voice in the running of the University is a legitimate rationale for protest, today is not the right time.

A strong show of student support for blocking the rent increase will be effective; a general discussion of student power today will serve only to distract attention from the rent issue.

Students should demonstrate against the rent increase today and they should remember that the issue of the day is rent. Any attempt to broaden the protest can only serve to detract from the rent issue.

Notorious Kangaroo Court

Finally, after 40 hours of deliberation, a comparatively enlightened jury returned with their verdict in the Chicago "Conspiracy" trial. All defendants were acquitted on the charge of conspiracy, five were convicted of inciting violence during the 1968 Democratic Convention, and two were acquitted altogether.

But in this trial, the verdict is almost secondary to the proceedings. "Judge" Julius Hoffman has had the honor of presiding over the most notorious kangaroo court in the annals of American Injustice. From the onset, Hoffman made it a point to structure the trial such that it became a judgment of life styles rather than a question of law. In short the defendants were tried and treated for what they were, instead of what they did.

One may react against the performance of the Chicago 8 minus one, but this reaction does not take into account the very important fact that a court which attempts to ramrod a basically unconstitutional "law" through the judicial system, is asking for trouble -- not only in the courtroom, but the added trouble of frustration and rage in the streets.

God, Mysticism and Mr. Kole

To the Editor:

In answer to the letter printed on Tuesday, I would like to say that Andre Kole did exactly what he was billed to do.

Mr. Kole gave a demonstration of Extra Sensory Perception and then stunned the crowd by admitting that it was a hoax played on a trusting audience.

He then started a discussion of witchcraft and the supernatural in the form of reincarnation and mysticism.

After this expose, with entertaining magic and humor, some very provocative observations about Bible prophecies that predicted events that are happening in the world today. This was in keeping with his discussion of the supernatural. If the 27 signs that Jesus is coming back were actually given 2000 years ago, and all are being fulfilled now, this then is certainly supernatural. That he would talk about these things was stated plainly on the posters that were posted on campus, and on the handbills that were distributed in each room in all the dorms.

The posters stated, "This unusual presentation is sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ. Due to his interest in the supernatural, Mr. Kole will include some observations he made from his investigations of the miracles of Christ from the point of view of an Illusionist."

Since an illusionist is a magician, and an "investigation of the miracles of Christ" is obviously connected with Christianity in anybody's mind, the publicity, stated in different words, that Mr. Kole would be giving "a magician's view of Christianity" was definitely not false advertisement.

I regret that not everyone who attended was completely happy with what they heard and saw. Of the people I have spoken with even those who were disturbed by it were at least caused to think about an issue that most people today have not been exposed to. Mr. Kole did not ask everyone to agree with him. I feel that he was courteous in allowing a time for those who were not interested in his subject to leave.

I think it is significant that almost everyone stayed to hear Mr. Kole explain how a person can have a personal relationship with God.

I hope that the displeasure of a few with the publicity did not keep them from being open-minded to what was said. We need more programs such as this one here at UMass to make up stop and think positively.

MLK Re-Responds

To the Editor:

I wish to reply to the letter which appeared in the DAILY COLLEGIAN of Wednesday, February 11th, bearing the title "We Are Curious (MLK)," since I feel that the writers, Ann Nichols and Judith Tripp (even with their postscript letter published the following day), have misrepresented numerous statements which Carleton Brown and I made at the open meeting of the Martin Luther King Council on Monday, February 9th.

To begin with, Miles, Nichols and Tripp recorded, correctly, my contention that "one of the biggest problems of the MLK in the past has been the personality clashes of the various members of the steering committee which too often interfered with theoretical goals of the Council, i.e., alleviating poverty, ending the war, repealing the draft, etc." Then, they proceeded to comment that during the meeting Carl and I "actually demonstrated the phenomenon" (of personality clashes, I presume) and that the meeting itself was, in fact, 'one long series of personality clashes. . ." which "rivaled the Student Senate meetings for wasting time." As an "example" of my "time - wasting" these critics recalled that I "emphasized dedicated members excluding those people who could only give limited service" and "those whose motives were unselfish and humanitarian, not those on 'ego trips' and those who 'wanted recognition in the yearbook'." As an "example" of "personality clashes" they cited my insistance that anyone who was frightened away by my personality "was not what the MLK needs" as well as Carl Brown's statement that "anyone who was frightened by his blackness didn't belong on the Council either." Evidently in response to these well-justified statements by Carl and me, Miles, Tripp and Nichols queried, ridiculously: "Is this to say that liking Ken and Carl is a prerequisite to productive work on this 'social action council'?" and then concluded that Carl and I were "ego-trippers."

It is unfortunate that these critics drew such incredibly distorted inferences and conclusions from what I maintan were valid statements, both on Carl's part and my own. It is true that personalities of various members of the Interim Steering Committee have consistently interfered with practical goals of the Council. Last December 3rd I voted against transferring the power of Council government from the Council's Board of Directors to the Interim Steering Committee, since I believed that a majority of the new, self-appointed steering committee was less responsible, less knowledgeable, and less committed to realistic social change than even the aloof Board of Directors. Now, over two months later, numerous members of the Interim Steering Committee may be found running about Whitmore capturing General Dynamics recruiters, blowing soap bubbles, pontificating about "revolution," contemplating their "coolness," spewing forth artificial new-left jibe, displaying their New York custom-made hippie-freak regalia -- and alienating an incalculable number of potential supporters who are genuinely serious about social action. But, for the "dirty" unglamorous tasks, like sitting at a table in the Student Union to publicize the approaching Re-organization Conference, these "activists" are hard-pressed to commit themselves.

Thus, I do not feel that I "wasted" any public meeting time describing the nature of TRUE COMMITMENT -- which I feel is incumbent upon anyone who becomes involved in social action, whether it be through the Martin Luther King Council or any other group. I think it imperative that people realize that the Council is not meant to serve as a tea group or a playpen, but rather as an effective instrument of social change. As for my "frightening" potential workers away, I can point to the fact that since the open meeting, five persons have expressed a desire to join the twenty-member Committee on Poverty, of which I am chairman. Perhaps these people are not afraid of real work, unlike so many Council members past and present.

As for Carl's and my "ego-tripping," I feel that these criticisms are devoid of substance. Carl and I asserted our opinions very strongly, and we will continue to attack hypcrites and half-baked activists. I am surprised that Miles, Nichols and Tripp did not, while on the theme of ego-tripping include references about some of the bona fide megalomaniacs who spoke at the open meeting.

I wish to conclude by urging all concerned members of the University community to attend the King Council Re-organization Conference this Saturday and Sunday, February 21st and 22nd, in Mahar Auditorium and selected classrooms in the School of Business Administration. Hopefully, when the Council is re-organized, its membership and particularly its governing body (if any), will exhibit sufficient responsibility and dedication to social justice to warrant use of the name of a leader who died for his beliefs.

No Way Forward

Well, it would seem that the white community has again, following in its age old tradition, put off a potentially explosive problem-situation until it eventually goes off before moving positively to correct or at least make half-hearted attempts at solving these problems which have usually evolved into the impossible by the time anyone in the aforementioned bureaucracys get around to doing anything.

The fact that the Five College administrations knew long before any buildings were occupied of the potentialities of the situation cannot possibly be disputed. And also the fact that these problems were merely thrown into an antiquated machine-like bureaucracy to be sifted and shuffled by baachelorette papered antibodies hired as eternal stop and yield signs to slow up and stop any possible positive action is also an undisputed actuality.

So, with the events at Amherst College yesterday as with most other events in the past, it has taken a major confrontation to affect action on problems essential to the existance of the society. And, as usual, the situation has evolved to a state where nothing less than a miracle will be able to save all from collapse.

It makes sense that people (even white bureaucrats) would learn something from history and having applied same's knowledge would make the events of yesterday a thing of the past. It should be made clear that black students who are occupying the Amherst College buildings are not there on a "humbug". In fact, most would rather be occupying their places in the classrooms at their respective campuses rather than sitting in these buildings in a seemingly futile effort to get what they need and essentially must have to exist as a viable community within themselves.

It is the sincere hope of this writer that the college and university administrations involved will get off of their bureaucratic asses and move to make it possible for these students to quit wasting their time with something that should have been taken care of a long time ago. How many more headlines will these type of confrontations have to make before someone wakes up and moves? How much longer will it be before justice is alloted according to right rather than according to who can best beat the bureaucracy or according to who can best effect a confrontation with same? Right now it seems rather meaningless, if not hopeless.

"Tell The People . . ."

To the editor:

"Tell the people they are threatened. Throw the pacifists in jail for threatening the security of the nation. It is as simple as that and it works in any country."

The above quote is an observation on the effective control of dissenters and followers alike by means of government propaganda. Our government tells us we are threatened by an insidious Communist-inspired plot for world domination. This has effectively united large numbers of people and lulled them into unconsciousness. Pacifists are thrown into prison for refusing to enter the armed forces, America's murder machine, and for refusing to submit to a draft that constitutes blatant involuntary servitude (which our Constitution supposedly protects us against). Other dissenters are thrown into prison after the government associates them (rightly or wrongly) with the previously established "threat". Obviously, the plot is working.

But who made the statement quoted above? It was not Nixon, though he may agree with it and use it. It was not L.B.J., either. Nor was it John Foster Dulles, Spiro Agnew, Curtiss Lemay, or George Wallace, even though they may agree with and/or use it.

The person who made that statement was Hermann Goering, Hitler's top Nazi propagandist.

No Support for Rent Hike

To the editor:

The University Housing Committee, a group of students and administrators, does not support the proposed room rent increase.

We consider the proposed rent schedule unfairly high when measured against the quality of the living conditions. We recommend an external audit of the Treasurer's report, with special attention given to the Debt Service and the new Furnishing Reserve Fund. We further recommend that the University investigate new methods of funding and financing to allow lowering of the debt service and renovation of the Northeast and Central dormitories BEFORE any rent increase in those areas. Finally, we urge the University to begin an intensive campaign to provide for the utilization of dormitories on a year-round basis through conferences and Continuing Education.

Information concerning the increase was not released to the Committee prior to the general announcement to the University Community, although we asked the Treasurer's Office on numerous occasions during the past months to discuss the anticipated increase. This lack of cooperation from Treasurer Johnson is to be deplored, and suggests that his office is not interested in sharing with the students the decision-making process in matters directly affecting the student body.

Human Sexuality Course Openings Available, Smith College Department Leads Seminars

In order to accommodate those who were previously unable to sign up for the Human Sexuality Course at Smith College, there will be another table set up this Friday, February 20, in the Student Union lobby. All those interested are invited. The following information is provided for those who missed the article in last Friday's Collegian.

The course, "Topics in Human Sexuality", is non-credit, and open to any students or non-students in the area who are committed to increasing their knowledge of human sexuality. A lecture-seminar format has been devised which will incorporate the informal aspects of a lecture with the interpersonal aspects of a small group.

A $2.00 fee is charged for the course, to pay for the lecturers. The course is student-funded and student-run. Drayton Grant is the chairman this year. Dan Cash, in 614 Webster (546-7190), is the University Liaison, and is in charge of the registration here.

Most lectures will be held on Thursday nights at 8:00 p.m. in John M. Green hall, where the five college bus stops. No transportation is specifically provided, but the five college bus leaves the Waiting Station at 7:25 p.m., and arrives at JM Greene at 7:55.

The first lecture, "Anatomy and Physiology", will be Thursday, February 26 at 8:00 p.m. in JM Greene. The lectures are scheduled as follows: "Contraception", March 4; "Abortion", March 10; "Pregnancy and Birth", April 2; "Human Sexuality and Psycho-sexual Development", April 9; "Female-Male Relationships", April 16; "Love and Loving", April 23, and an open lecture on some sociological aspects of human sexuality which will terminate the course on May 7.

Lecturers include Ronald Mazur, an ex-clergyman presently involved with sex education; Dr. Jean Anderson, obstetrician and gynecologist in Amherst; and Prof. Leonard Bickman of the Smith psychology department.

In general, students are requested not to sign up for the course unless they are prepared to attend the whole series, which has been planned as a cohesive entity. This commitment applies especially to the seminars, particularly vulnerable to fickle participants, and proportionately responsive to individual efforts to achieve a meaningful experience.

It is possible to attend the lectures individually, at a cost of $ .50 each, once those who are registered are admitted.

Because of the Smith students' preference for a co-educational course, men students from the University are especially solicited.

Dr. Vali Speaks at Carlton U.

Dr. Ferenc A. Vali, University professor of government, delivered the lecture on Hungary in the current Carleton University series "The Communists States in Disarray."

He is one of seven distinguished U.S. and Canadian scholars invited to speak at the series of Friday night lectures at the Ottawa, Canada, college. The lectures, which run from Jan. 16 to March 6, are an annual series sponsored by the Carleton Soviet and East European Studies Program. They will be published later this year by the Johns Hopkins University Press.

Dr. Vali is an authority on international law and a former advisor to Hungarian Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Finance. He was arrested by the Hungarian regime in 1951, imprisoned and released in time to flee Hungary during the 1956 revolt. He came to the U.S. a year later.

Prior to joining the UMass faculty in 1961, Dr. Vali was a visiting professor at Cornell University Law School, and spent three years as a research associate at the Harvard Center for International Affairs, where he completed a book "Rift and Revolt in Hungary: Nationalism Versus Communism", published in 1961. Among Dr. Vali's publications is a standard work, "Servitudes of International Law", eight other books and over 40 articles.

CEQ Sponsors Speech By DDT Expert Tonite

The Coalition For Environmental Quality and the Government Department are co-sponsoring a noted legislative expert on DDT this evening in Thompson 104 at 8 p.m. Robert Wetmore, House of Representatives member from Barre will be speaking on the DDT problem and its effects on our deteriorating environment.

Robert Wetmore has been Vice-Chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee which is instrumental in molding strong conservation bills. He authored the House Resolve for the Pesticide study, and carried it to the Committee of Bills in the Senate in its third reading when the 1969 session ended. He has also filed a bill and a study resolve on the creation of an Environmental Quality Control Council. In addition, he was Chairman on the select Committee on Pesticides in the State legislature, and is called by many Mr. Environment in the House.

Man is violating his environment and the uses of pesticides demonstrates why the threat to life is so serious. Each year, more than 600 million pounds of pesticides of all kinds are sprayed, dusted, fogged, or dumped into the United States - about 3 pounds for every man, woman, and child in the country.

The residues drift through the air, mingle with the waters to destroy precious microscopic life, and seep through the soil to contaminate the environment on a worldwide basis. Pesticide particles have been found in the tissues of reindeer in Alaska, in penquins in the Antarctic, and in the dust over the Indian Ocean. Several species of animal life including the American Bald Eagle, the peregrin Falcon, and the Osprey are on the verge of extinction by pesticides.

The only way to solve the problems created by pesticides is to become informed and convey intelligent information to others. Hearing Representative Wetmore is a rare opportunity to find out what can be accomplished through legislative action.

Dorm Helps Janitor Work

The residents of Butterfield House have drawn up and signed a petition to alleviate the work load of the dorm janitor.

It seems that Frank Goessing, the only full time janitor at Butterfield House has won the support of his dorm, without even asking.

A group of Butterfield residents became concerned that the work load of Frank was almost to the point of hardship, especially since the part time janitor for Butterfield has been placed in other dorms during time that is supposed to be devoted to Butterfield.

Butterfield is supposed to have one and a half janitors to cover four floors and a large amount of public area.

Odetta Not Married To Carmichael, Concert to Go On

The Fine Arts Council received a report on Wednesday that many persons may stay away from the concerts Odetta will give in Bowker Auditorium on Saturday night (7:30 p.m. and 10:00 p.m.) due to the rumor that she is married to Stokely Carmichael and that funds she receives for her concerts are used to further the work of Mr. Carmichael.

Council Manager Terry C. Schwarz telephoned Miss Odetta's New York manager to check on the authenticity of this report and found that it is untrue. Miriam Madeba is married to Mr. Carmichael, not Odetta.

Odetta arrives on Saturday afternoon and is scheduled to perform two programs on the stage of Bowker Auditorium under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council's Concert Association. Reserved tickets for these concerts are priced at $1.50 for UMass undergrads; $2.50 for UMass grad students, faculty, staff and other students and $3.00 for the general public. Tickets may be obtained by contacting the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, Tel. 545-0202 and remaining tickets will be available at the Bowker Box Office at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday and may be reached by phone by dialing 545-2149.

Can any reader recognize the faults on this horse? The UMass Horse Judging Team will teach students how. There will be an open meeting Monday night at 7:30 for any interested students at the Grinnell Arena. Organization for Spring events and trips to Springfield and Columbus, Ohio is planned.

SENIORS SHINE - Redman seniors Ray Ellerbrook (in left photo) and Dennis Chapman (right) played key roles in UMass' clutch basketball win over Rhode Island. Ellerbrook, who hit numerous layups, drives here past URI forward and star John Fultz. Chapman, who was No. 2 rebound man with 11, swings up a hooking layup. Outside of this one, he canned key baskets for the Redman cause. (MDC photos by Bob Mangiaratti)

STOPGAP - Amherst goalie Paul Koulouris comes out to make save as Redman Bill McMann (8) attempts to lift the puck over his pads and into the net. UMass won contest, 9-0, and raised its record to 8-6 overall. (MDC by Gib Fullerton)

Frosh Hoopsters Stumble to Defeat

KINGSTON, R.I. - Playing what has to be their worst half of the year, the UMass freshman basketball team was defeated here soundly Tuesday night by a strong quintet from Rhode Island, 79-55. The loss dropped the frosh's record to a dismal 5-10.

Believe it or not the score at halftime had the Little Redmen trailing by only four, 37-33. But a scoreless spurt of five and a half minutes in the second half more or less decided the issue.

With 15:54 remaining in the game, the Little Redmen were down by ten, 46-36. From that time until Mike Polakoff sank two free throws with 10:21 left to go, UMass's count not put the ball through the hoop.

During this span the Little Rams came through with eleven points to put the game out of reach. They were led in this surge by big number 50 who netted two hoops and two charity tosses. UMass could not even make free throws as they missed five in a row.

To put it simply, the Little Redmen were out-outed at every phase of the game. To make the situation worse, Chuck Olsen, one of the most dependable and consistent performers on the team, injured his leg in the contest and had to be removed.

Perhaps, though, UMass got all of their bad play out of their system and will be ready to play basketball tonight as they entertain the Springfield College freshmen at 6:00 in the Cage.

Hoopsters Host Spfld; Icemen Crush Amherst

Following 3 Game Sweep Redmen Meet Chiefs-8.00

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Coming off of their tremendous three game sweep of Holy Cross, UConn, and URI, the Redmen basketball team can ill afford to let up tonight as they host the Chiefs of Springfield College at the Cage tonight. Tap-off is set for 8:00.

If the Redman bopes for a tournament bid are to be realized, the hoopsters must win all of their remaining five games. A loss in any of these contests would prove fatal. Springfield is more than capable of taking advantage of a UMass let down and has the talent to beat anyone.

The Chiefs come into the contest with a 13-6 record. They won nine of their first ten tilts but have slumped lately as the competition has toughened. Their most recent encounter was a 116-83 drubbing of Westfield State.

Leading Springfield is 6'1 guard Dennis Clark. Clark, named to the ECAC team of the week for the sixth consecutive week, is the floor general of the club and also its big scorer. He comes into the game with a 26.9 per game average including an astounding 50 points against Holy Cross. In that game, the Chiefs lost to the powerful Crusaders by only one point, 89-88. So if Clark gets hot, look out.

Starting along with Clark in the backcourt will be Steve Waterman. Waterman is a 6'1 junior from Hartford, Conn., and has seen action both at guard and up front. He is a fine rebounder for his size, averaging 7.2 caroms a game, and is hitting for 17.7 points. In the Clark-Waterman duo, Springfield will present the Redmen with one of the most potent scoring backcourts UMass has faced all season.

In the pivot for Springfield will be 6'7 sophomore Jud Hunt. Hunt is the team's leading rebounder averaging just under ten rebounds and is considered to be a very good defensive player. He also can be dangerous inside the foul line and averages about seven points a game.

Captain George Yelverton, an All-New England selection last year, will be one of the starters up front. He has experience at both guard and forward and at 6'3 can easily make the switch. Known as a dangerous outside threat, Yelverton has been getting twelve points a contest and the Redmen cannot afford to ignore him.

The fifth starter will be either Darrell Hilbrands or Rich Hundley. Both are sophomores and Hundley was the leading scorer on last year's freshman team. Hillbrands at 6'4 is the better rebounder of the two and will probably get the nod. But 6'3 Hundley is an excellent outside shooter and should the Chiefs fall behind, he should see plenty of action.

Helping out up front will be 6'5 junior Brad Macomber. Although he missed two weeks of the season due to mononucleosos, Macomber has seen a great deal of action lately and is the team's third leading rebounder. Also available for duty is 6'3 sophomore Jim Grassi who is a good inside shooter and crashes the boards well. Chip Dorin, another 6'3 sophomore rounds but the forecourt for Springfield.

Besides having a great starting backcourt, the Chiefs have plenty of depth there too. Fran Stupakevich will probably be the first substitute guard to see action especially if Springfield decides to press. He is extremely quick and is known mainly for his defense and ball handling ability.

Dana Anderson, another of the eight sophomores on the Springfield club, could also get into the game if the starting guards aren't doing the job. He is a fine all-around ball-player and gives the Chiefs good two-way strength. John Dover, a 5'10 junior, and Ken Campbell, a 6'1 sophomore also are available for action.

Coach Ed Bilik is in his fourth year at Springfield and feels his team has the talent to beat anyone. "We could be a year away," he said earlier in the season, "But the talent is there." If the Chiefs play as well as they are capable of, the Redmen will have their hands full.

UMass will probably counter with their usual starting lineup of Ellerbrook, Betancourt, Erving, Gallagher, and Samuelson. Ellerbrook came through with his biggest game of the season against URI scoring 28 points and should be strong the rest of the way. Also likely to see plenty of action are Mike Pagliara, who did a great job of leading the team against Rhody, Dennis Chapman, and Ken Mathias.

The way the Redmen have played in the last month, they deserve another capacity crowd tonight. After falling two games behind early in the race for the Yankee Conference title, they have come back by defeating both URI and UConn on their own courts and are now tied for the lead. It should be some ovation when the Redmen take the court tonight.

HOW ABOUT?? - Sophomore forward Rick Vogeley playing great defense on a low handing chandelier in a Sturbridge restaurant as part of the preliminary warm-ups to the URI tilt? A talented MDC sports staffer (3.8 cume last semester) writing up a rousing account of the frosh contest even though he missed the game?....And, last but not least, how about everybody snappin' on the long ride back to Amherst?

Crawford in for 9-0 Win Playoff Hopes Brighten

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Yesterday afternoon at Orr Rink, the UMass hockey team won the mythical city championship by defeating Amherst College, 9-0. It was the second victory of the year for UMass over the Lord Jeffs.

More importantly, the win raises UMass' Division II mark to 8-5 with two Division games remaining. With selections for the playoffs in the near future, each succeeding win for the Redmen carries increased weight.

Yesterday's game was never really a game. The Out-manned Lord Jeffs just could not keep up with the superior skating and passing of coach Jack Canniff's Redmen.

With the exception of goalie P.J. Flaherty, who was given the day off, everyone saw action. Bruce Crawford, who enjoys watching a good hockey game, was called upon by Amherst to make 11 saves as UMass' goaltender. The action lowered his goals allowed average to a sparking 0.8.

Nine different Redmen had a hand in the scoring as UMass scored two goals in each of the first two periods and exploded for five in the rip-roaring third.

Bill McMann started things off at :52 scoring on a rebound for his fifth goal of the season. Mike Waldron and Dennis Grabowski got assists on the play. Fran Mulcahy tipped in Bob Madore's shot at 9:48 to make it 2-0. Paul Riley also received an assist.

Tom Viall started the game in the nets for the Jeffs but was forced to leave mid-way through the period with a knee injury. Paul Koulouris replaced him as the two goalies combined for 12 saves in the period. Crawford had three.

Jack Edwards scored his tenth goal of the year at :37 of the second period, the result of a fine play by linemate Charlie Donovan. Donovan circled around the back of the Jeff net and hit the speeding Edwards with a pass directly in front. He could do almost nothing else but ram it into the net.

Doug Powling made it 4-0 at 10:04. Assists went to Grabowski and McMann.

Towards the end of the period, the Redmen effectively killed penalties to Waldron and Grabowski which resulted in a two man Amherst advantage for about one minute.

The third period became as much of a basketball game as a hockey game can be. The Redmen scored almost at will.

John Morgonto scored on the power play at 6:53 almost directly off a face off. Paul Riley and Dan Reidy got assists on the play which came with a two man advantage.

Madore got the day's prettiest goal at 14:20. After taking a pass from Paul Riley, he came in on the left side, faked a shot to the near corner and put the puck into the open far corner.

Paul Riley scored on a deflection at 15:09, assists to Mulcahy and Powling to make it 7-0.

Dan Reidy scored at 16:25 assists to Eddie Riley and Bob Bartholomew. On the play, Riley broke in alone on Koulouris who made the save. Koulouris couldn't find the puck however, which was just in front of him and the speeding Reily gathered it in and put it in the net. Fifteen minutes later.

Brian Sullivan was given credit for the final goal at 18:35. He tipped in Donovan's 20 footer. The other assist went to John Hartnett.

In a way, the third period was a frustrating one for the Redmen since it seemed on several occasions that the Jeffs were taking cheap shots at them. UMass refused to retaliate in kind, probably because they are sharing Orr Rink with the main tenants who just happen to be the Lord Jeffs.

ICE CHIPS - Amherst goalies made 43 saves....Inflation is a sign of the times: since this was a home game for Amherst, UMass students were charged the unbelievable sum of one dollar to gain admission....Next opponent is Saturday against Brown at Providence....A good showing would be a definite boost for soph laden UMass....

URI Victory Enhances NIT Chances

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

Before you go down to the Cage tonight to see the Redmen meet the Chiefs in intra tribal warfare, savor the URI win for a minute. It was probably the finest win of the season, and, although the next 11 days will tell the tale, it could be the win that puts the Redmen in the NIT.

It was a team victory in every sense of the word. UMass outshot, outrebounded, outcoached, outdepthed, and even outyelled the homestanding Rams.

Coach Jack Leaman used his bench to great advantage. Three subs, Dennis Chapman, Mike Pagliara, and Kenny Mathias played the bulk of the second half, and scored 19 points among them, some 13 more than the men they replaced, Jack Gallagher, John Betancourt, and Dick Samuelson.

On the other hand URI's Tom Carmody could get but two points from his bench corp of Bill Metkiff, Bud Hazard, and Claude English. English got the deuce on a tip of a Dwight Tilliver miss. Metkiff was so inept that he was all but a sixth man for the Redmen.

Carmody used English in the first half in what would have to be kindly called a bonehead move. English's left knee was heavily taped, and the 6'5 kangaroo never took off his sweat togs during the entire pre-game festivities. Even then the tape was noticeable, and English was hobbling around on the court. He looked like he should have been in the stands, let alone on the bench; certainly not on the court.

Yet, with Rhody leading 28-20, and 7:16 to go in the half, he went in. He did manage the tip some eight seconds later, but at 6:13 was writhing on the court. Ray Ellerbrook drove to the right, and when English moved over to help out on defense, he put all the weight on the left leg. He never stood a chance. Psychologically it did wonders for URI. They were outscored 14-3 in the next 3:31

UMass ended the affair when URI could not stay out of foul trouble. John Fultz, Nate Adgar, Phil Hickson, and Tolliver all had four fouls , and the subs were looking like intramural rejects.

A Mathias hoop at 8:52 gave UMass a 60-58 lead and started an 11-2 streak over the next 3:19. Erving went beserk for the last seven in a row. Rhody did close to 71-66 at 4:45, but a 9-2 UMass spres put the game out of reach.

Ray Ellerbrook and Erving threw in 58 points between them, the highest tandem effort for the Redmen over the season. Fultz's 33 led everybody, yet the URI star had to take seven more shots than Erving.

The lack of team play by the Rams hurt them greatly. They managed only eight assists for the game, far below the 20 assists performed by the Redmen. The prettiest came on a four pass out of bounds play that was completed by Ellerbrook on an assist by Erving at 3:14. It gave UMass a 78-68 lead.

The UMies were out in force again on Tuesday. Some 300 faithful made the long journey, and gave the URI students a lesson in yelling. An ad hoc committee appropriated the cheer leader's garb, and did a far better job than the normal crew that occasionally show up at some of the home games.

Jack Leaman was dazzled by the crowd. "Hell, I wasn't nearly as optimistic as those kids were." "They're screaming 'We're Number 1', and there are five minutes left and we're on top by only five." But Leaman emphasized "These fans are the greatest. They give us a huge lift, and I loved the signs." Numerous placards were displayed.

When the team showed up during the intermission of the frosh game, Leaman was given a hughand by the assembled UMass students and responded with a 'peace' sign. Sitting in the last row of section N was Dr. John Lederle and his son Tom.

Day of Demonstrations Against Rent Hike

UMass Students Exercise Power Through March, Rallies, Teach-in

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

More than a thousand UMass students participated in a day of demonstrations against the Treasurer's proposed room rent increase which included a march through Whitmore, several rallies in residential areas of campus, and a three hour teach-in in the Student Union.

The highlight of the day, protestors said, was the march from the Student Union to Whitmore at 2:30. The crowd of students, estimated by some to be as high as 1500, handed Dean of Students William F. Field letters of dissatisfaction with the increase.

The letters also demanded more student involvement in University decision making.

Organizers of the march said the event was to be a "symbolic representation of the student concern over the rent hike and the lack of student power on campus", and they claimed that it drew the "largest student support for any campus demonstration in recent memory."

The majority of the marchers filed through the building quickly, stopping only to hand Dean Field their letters.

However, about 30 students staged a brief sit-in in Treasurer Kenneth Johnson's third floor office, despite the urgings of Student Senate President Cynthia Olken to keep moving and to avoid any confrontation within the building.

They demanded to see Johnson, who had earlier refused to join other administrators at the teach-in, saying "I'm too busy," but were told that the Treasurer's whereabouts were unknown.

At this point, they shouted slogans which implied that students should remain in Whitmore until Johnson spoke to them, and refused to leave despite the constant urgings of Olken and Senate Public Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine.

They left only after, in the words of a Treasurer's office spokesman, "we ignored them."

The teach-in itself focused on the rent hike as well as "student power in general", and the Senate announced at that meeting that students can continue their protests by traveling to the Board of Trustees meeting in Boston Monday. The Senate will provide transportation for interested students.

The first speaker at the Teach-in was Provost Oswald Tippo.

He outlined the process by which the new president will be chosen. Faculty and administrative committees were asked to submit names which would be considered for the presidency. The Trustees and their subcommittee then shortened the list and established a priority list. These men were then approached concerning their interest.

V.P. Of the Student Senate, Glen Elters, proclaimed that students don't have an advisory role in decision making. He said, "They desire more than this, want more than this and are going to get more than this."

He felt the Board of Trustees should not give orders but should take orders from the faculty and the students since they are the University. Elters declared that it is time to "go into the streets and start blocking hallways."

"We've talked and talked and nothing has come." He argued that what we need is a student-faculty senate with a majority of students which tells the administration what to do.

The next speaker, Dwight Allen, Dean of the School of Education, saw the University as a dehumanized structure acting in an advisory capacity to the people of the state. He views the system as obsolete, but he also doesn't know what to change it to. He remarked that students are good at spotting a phony teacher but are poor at knowing what to do about it.

Although he is dedicated to working within the system, Allen says we must make it work faster so that this seventeenth and eighteenth century institution will be able to negotiate the twentieth and twenty-first century.

Seymour Shapiro, Acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences said many students are not aware of the changes which have been taking place. He added that one year ago 45% of credits in the school of Arts and Sciences were in prescribed courses, but now, that figure is down to 15%.

He also said that many changes are needed, but that going in the right direction is difficult. He claimed that he is very willing to try new things.

Gil Salk, a graduate student, condemned the administration for what he called their terrible job of representing this school in Boston. He strongly urged that it is time to change the feeling of being a cog in a wheel, and promote UMass as a group of individuals working together to throw out the system that he feels is oppressing us.

He then went on to introduce four recommendations which would allow students to take control of their own lives, and set March 11 as a date for a campus referendum for accepting these declarations. A meeting is to be held today at 3:15 p.m. in the Plymouth room for those interested in working for the declarations.

The last speaker, Geoffrey Levine, proclaimed, "The University hasn't let me learn a goddamn thing since I've been here." He pointed out the need for each individual to realize what his rights are in order to achieve a better world, and said students must fight for power to get it.

The Mood

"It Was a Good Demonstration"

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

The new connecting walk in front of the new Campus Center garage opened today and there were also a lot of demonstrations concerning rent hikes, student power, de-humanization, etc.

A "unified body" of a couple thousand students marched to Whitmore. Sporadic chants of "Hey! Hey! We won't pay!" and "Whitmore Fortress has gone sour; students rights for student power," filled the halls of Whitmore.

It was good demonstration, with enough excitement to keep people together; sitting on the floor of the President's reception room was really fine. There were serious moments in which people tried hard to make sense or activate emotions. One student pleaded that he only wanted to meet Pres. Lederle. "I've never seen his face," cried the student. "Maybe he doesn't have one," retorted the ever-present, ever-soothing Gil Salk.

An enthusiastic student in the President's waiting room alleged that the secretary had stated that "She thought" that President Lederle wouldn't come out. The response came swiftly from the somewhat irate secretary, "The secretary doesn't think anything!"

The students retreated to the Student Union, Whitmore none the worse (physically). Several secretaries and staff gazing out the windows to watch the students come and go, talking of . . . nobody knows.

It was a good demonstration.

In the Student Union were assembled on the platform members of the administration, academic heads, student senators and the alumnus.

Each person on stage spoke.

Peter Wagschel, of the School of education showed a slide tape that through song and picture said things like "Let it be."; "like a bridge over troubled water . . I will lay me down." Strange contrast of a beautiful world and our daily world raced through people's minds as the splendor of nature captured by camera flashed before the group. It gave perspective to the rhetoric which inevitably would and did follow.

Dean of the School of Education Dwight Allen spoke of the "whimsical cause of the hour" as being necessary to motivate the students to more things. He spoke of "wish(ing) education could be free" and making the "system work" . . . "make the process personal . . . individual."

Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Seymour Shapiro detailed the "changes" made in requirements and curriculum. "Changes needed to be made," said Shapiro. The past changes do not "preclude future changes."

Gil Sale emphasized things like "a community of individuals. If I don't rule my life, I am a slave. If I am a slave, I have no life."

Arguments from the floor touched upon many aspects of what could be done at the University. Students and administrators had spoken of "potential", "power", and "problems". Every idea had a counte r idea thrown at it. Every argument a rebuke.

The crowd dispersed as dinner time approached. The people on stage left to the dismay of some; the relief of others. A final plea from Gil Salk for those "willing to work" to stay. Small groups formed and subdued arguments continued.

Just as the last people were leaving and only one small group was left, Dean Field started speaking of his "hope" for the growing University. The idea was simple; the only meaningful communities on campus were going to have to develop in the dorms. He cited Greenough, Butterfield and Dwight House as places that are "good to live in." In these dorms there has been some alternative to the monster university. There is community.

The idea of a dorm being the solution to further alienation and de-humanization is emerging. For the last two years these and other dorms have been pulling together.

Possibly, what can be learned from all the discussion and rhetoric which is bombarding the University as a whole is that "community" cannot be voted in on a referendum. Community has to develop from living units. The idea of a campus community with any viability will never come before individuals in individual dorms can pull together a community.

"Once there was a way, to get back home." Maybe UMass can find something relevant in that.

Senate Committee To Slash Budgets

THE Student Senate Budgets Committee is currently considering the 1970-71 budgets of UMass student organizations and submitting them to the Senate for final approval.

Many of the budgets are being cut. Because room rents, the Campus Center fee, and the health fee are all expected to rise next year, - the Student Senate is endeavoring to keep the student activities tax at this year's level ($31.50) or possibly lower it.

The Senate feels that some campus groups are capable of raising their own funds, and that by leaving these groups to make their own money, the entire student body will benefit with a low activities tax.

The Student Senate will provide free transportation to Monday's Board of Trustees meeting in Boston.

Chicago Seven Demonstrators Clash with Police in Boston

BOSTON (AP) - A police squad of 60 men charged a crowd of Chicago 7 demonstrators on Tremont Street Thursday, wielding nightsticks and beating a dozen of the demonstrators to the ground. Several policement were also injured.

The police rushed the crowd of some 5,000 demonstrators who paraded along Tremont Street after a rally at the John F. Kennedy Federal Building a half mile away, smashing windows in several buildings as they moved along the street.

It was outside the subway station at Tremont and Park Streets that the police moved into the crowd.

Four Boston City Hospital ambulances were called, and their crews moved into the Common treating injured youths lying on the ground.

At least a dozen arrests were made.

The demonstration was called in support of the Chicago 7, the group convicted in federal court there on charges of inciting riots during the Democratic National Convention in 1968.

The demonstration began with a rally which drew 5,000 to Boston Common, with the demonstrators then marching to the Kennedy federal building a half mile away. Police said some 20,000 were in the crowd there. There were no incidents until about 5,000 of the demonstrators started back to the Common.

The marchers carried National Liberation Front banners and signs. The y chanted support of the Black Panther Party and the Chicago 7.

Members of the Boston Police Tactical Force, helmeted and equipped with riot sticks, stood by at the Common and along the route.

The demonstrators, organized by a group calling itself the Day After Committee, earlier were denied a marching permit by the city. Police said the planned route would have disrupted rush hour traffic.

But a spokesman for Mayor Kevin B. White later said demonstra-

Conspiracy Trial Sparks Coast-to-Coast Protests

(AP) - There were demonstrations from coast to coast Thursday to protest the verdicts in the trial of the Chicago 7.

The most violent were in Boston and Washington.

In Boston's Hub, police clubbed a dozen demonstrators to the ground when they marched up Tremont Street after a rally of 5,000 persons that began on the Common.

In Washington, police dispersed about 300 persons who had gathered outside the apartment complex where Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell lives. The demonstrators moved into side streets where they disrupted rush hour traffic and pelted police with rocks, bottles and snow chunks.

At least 50 persons were arrested.

In Los Angeles, at least five persons were arrested after they clashed with police near the UCLA campus and smashed windows in branches of the First Western bank and a brokerage house. The five were part of a crowd estimated at from 500 to 1,000.

There was a peaceful gathering of 300 students at the University of Colorado.

About 50 persons, mostly white, gathered outside the Baltimore courthouse chanting "power to the people." There were no arrests.

In Madison, Wis., about 100 students at the University of Wisconsin marched on the state capitol and then to the federal building where U.S. Atty. John Olson met them and told them to "go back and study and see what makes the system work."

Report Urges Mass Extend Aid to Private Colleges

BOSTON (AP) - A report issued Thursday said private colleges and universities in the state will have deficits of $50 million within six years unless they are given "direct financial support" from the Commonwealth.

The Select Committee for the Study of Financial Problems of Private Institutions of Higher Education in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts proposed the colleges and universities be given aid amounting to 15 per cent of the actual cost to the public of educating a Massachusetts resident in a comparable public institution.

By serving a substantial number of Massachusetts residents, the report said, "the private colleges and universities relieve the Commonwealth of the responsibility of educating those residents solely at public expense."

The direct aid proposed by the committee would apply only for Massachusetts residents enrolled at private facilities. The aid would amount to a reimbursement of $800 for a master's degree, $1,200 for a first professional degree, $3,100 for a Ph.D. and $4,200 for a medical or dental education.

This is the "best method for channeling state aid to private higher education," the report said, but cautioned that such aid might require a change in the state Constitution; the constitutional change should not be extended to include those institutions "avowedly engaged in education primarily for religious training."

The committee estimated that the 15 per cent schedule would reimburse private schools some $25 million by 1975-76 - "significantly less than the $50 million deficit projected for that year. Without the aid, the report said, there will be "curtailment of enrollment growth, limitation of student expenditures, continuance of a high tuition growth and reduction of educational resources available to each student."

A decline of private institutions "would place an increasing moral and financial burden on the public institutions of the Commonwealth over a period when Massachusetts is likely to face increasing shortages of educational space, mounting to 85,000 by 1980," the committee said.

The report minimized the importance of federal aid in the next decade.

Federal aid is usually directed toward specific areas such as research "that generates only incidentally financial support for other educational activities."

"As the Vietnam war continues to make demands on the nation's resources - and as the problems of poverty, hunger, urban blight and pollution press for solution - the federal government can be expected to be highly selective in its spending for domestic programs," the report said.

Navy Sec Asks WPI Students To Support Armed Services

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) - Navy Secretary John H. Chafee asked an audience of college students Thursday to help "restore the prestige the respect for those in the armed services."

In a speech at Worcester Polytechnic Institute he urged continuation of Reserve Officer Training Corps programs at the nation's colleges and universities.

Elimination of ROTC, he said, "would have a far reaching and seriously detrimental effect on the Navy and would "lessen the civilian salting of the military." This, he said, would push the military "toward exactly the sort of separate professional clique which is most feared by the opponents of ROTC."

Chafee said accomplishments of President Nixon and defense Secretary Melvin Laird include the de-escalation of the Vietnamese War.

He cited the Navy's success in turning over hundreds of patrol boats to the Vietnamese as an example of Vietnamization of the war.

MLK Invites Campus To Join Conference

Beginning with a 10:00 a.m. convocation tomorrow morning in Mahar Auditorium, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will launch into a weekend-long reorganization conference which is open to the entire community. The conference will leave decisions concerning the future programs, goals, methods, membership, structure, and philosophy to the participants. All decisions will be binding upon the King Council.

In what is termed an unprecedented move, the conference will subject a major existing University organization to the close scrutiny, criticism, and control of the entire University.

Among other projects, the King Council is noted for its involvement in the current fight for student self-determination, the Dorchester County, S.C. poverty drive, N.E.S., the Moratorium and Washington March, Coalition for Environmental Quality, last year's Martin Luther King Memorial Week, and Night of Inquiry. These and other programs will be reviewed at the conference.

The schedule for the two-day conference follows:

Saturday, Feb. 21 - 10:00 Convocation--Mahar, George Child; 11:00 Poverty Workshop, Kenneth Mosakowski; 1:00 Racism Workshop, Cari Brown; 2:00 Militarism Workshop, Michael Pollard; 3:00 Ecology Workshop, Gene Petit & Paul Spigel; 4:00 Human Rights Workshop, Gil Salk.

All workshops will convene in Mahar Aud. and move into subworkshops in separate rooms in S.B.A. if necessary.

Sunday, Feb. 22 - 1:00 Restructuring & Philosophy Workshop in Mahar.

'The Mill River - Pollution Or Potential'

Smith Joins Community In Anti-Pollution Fight

The City of Northampton, the Town of Williamsburg, and Smith College will join together in a "Community Assembly" on the topic "The Mill River - Pollution or Potential."

Participants in the event, to be held Feb. 21 (Saturday) on the Smith campus, will include Northampton and Williamsburg government officials, and the president, faculty members and students of Smith. The morning program will include remarks by Northampton's Mayor Sean Dunphy and City Engineer Francis P. Ryan, Williamsburg's Selectman Hans Nietsche and Smith's President Thomas C. Mendenhall. A series of films on aspects of environmental pollution will be offered the previous afternoon and evening.

The Mill River and its fertile flood plains encouraged the early growth of Northampton and Williamsburg, supplying the power for developing industry. The river flows through the Smith campus, forming Paradise Pond. The future of the Mill River - as a continuing valuable natural resource or as yet another polluted American stream - will be examined in the community assembly.

The public event will open at 10 a.m. in Sage Hall on the campus. Speakers at the morning session will include the civic officials and ecologists. The latter will be Paul Shepard, Smith lecturer in the biological sciences; Andrew N. Ienz, Ph.D. candidate in freshwater ecology at the University of Wisconsin and participant in a botanical and bacteriological study of the Mill River; and Professor Elizabeth D. Robiton of the Smith department of biological sciences.

City Engineer Ryan will describe the increasing complexity of pollution control, to the degree that "only the concerted efforts of all concerned people can bring about the improvement desired."

A student viewpoint will be offered by Smith senior Paula Magnuson. Noting that the dominant industries of this century and the last were developed by plundering the Earth's resources, she believes that "we are now stealing from future generations not just their lumber or their coal, but the basic necessities of life: air, water and soil. It is the burden of my generation to see that a new conservation movement is begun - to preserve life itself."

The community assembly is part of a two-day program at the college on the improvement of man's physical environment. An all-college assembly will open the program Friday morning. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, author "Earth Shine", will speak on "Man and His Environment" and receive an honorary doctor of letters degree from the college.

Gallagher Calls For Media to Unite

DENVER, Colo. (AP) - Wes Gallagher, general manager of the Associated Press, said Thursday that since critics of the news media do not distinguish between newspapers and broadcasters, the media must unite on the issue of a free press.

Addressing the Colorado Associated Press Association's annual meeting here, Gallagher said, "Since newsmen are a competitive lot, they are inclined to sit back and watch with some satisfaction when another's medium is attacked.

"But there is a fundamental area where print and broadcast are in exactly the same boat. They sink or swim together on the issue of freedom to print or broadcast. And they must stand together on this subject."

Gallagher said possible criticism should not be the prime concern of the news media.

"But," he added, "I do think it essential we take the offensive against some of our critics. . .

"We can point out that the news media, far from being monopolized, are serving the American public with more voices than at any time in history."

He noted that in 1900 there were 2,452 daily newspapers and 1,493 magazines, while today there are 1,764 daily newspapers, 9,434 magazines, 767 television stations and 6,349 radio stations.

Additional Violence Feared At Scene of Three Slayings

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) - Frightened residents of a post housing complex armed themselves and reinforced their doorlocks Thursday as police continued an investigation into the slayings of a pregnant housewife and hertwo young daughters.

Investigators sent to a laboratory for fingerprint tests, blood spattered sections of a wall in the apartment where the stabbings occurred.

Army officials said they hoped the sections would provide a clue in the deaths of the family of Capt. Jeffrey R. MacDonald, 26, of Pathogue, N.Y.

MacDonald, the sole survivor in his family, remained in the posts' Womack Army Hospital recovering from a stab wound which pierced a lung and from other less serious injuries.

Meanwhile, military police patrols of the normally placid housing complex, called Corregidor Courts, were stepped up sharply.

"People are scared out here, especially the women," said one resident, Lt. Walter Johnson, 24, of Scio, Ore. "Everybody is making sure they have weapons at hand.

Mrs. MacDonald, 26, from Brooklyn, N.Y. and the MacDonald's daughters Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 2, died of multiple stab wounds.

Mrs. MacDonald and Kimberly also suffered fractured skulls and Mrs. MacDonald's arms were broken, apparently in trying to ward off blows.

MacDonald, a doctor in the Green Beret forces, told police the predawn attack was carried out by a hippie type band of three men and a blonde girl who carried a candle and murmured, "Acid is groovy; kill the pigs."

Senate Installs New Soph Officers

The Senate swore in the new President and Vice-President of the class of '72 Wednesday night. Past President Ernie Lepore recently resigned because of personal reasons amd plans to attend summer school and return in the Fall.

Former Vice-President Steven Driscoll was elevated to the Presidency by class Executive Council action. Sue Horowitz was elected Vice-President.

Another vacancy was created by the resignation of '72 Senator Bob Nims, who plans to devote more time to class, SWAP, and SUG Board activities.

The Executive Council chose Michelle Stuart to fill this position. However, because of a discrepancy between the Class Act (which provides for Executive Council filling of vacancies), and the SGA Constitution (which provides that Senators must be popularly elected), the Senate declined to swear in Miss Stuart. Plans are underway to bring the matter to the General Court of Justice for adjudication.

Sign-Up Today For Senate Buses To Trustee's Meeting

Anyone going by car and having room for riders are asked to pick up students needing a ride also on Monday morning.

The meeting is at the Statler Hilton in Boston and will begin at 2:00 p.m. Those who live in Boston and are going home for the weekend should stay for the meeting instead of trying to get rides.

Springfield College Hit By Censorship Attack

(CPS) -- The spirit of Spiro Agnew has apparently penetrated the state of Massachusetts, which already holds the record for censorship cases in the country this year. Springfield College triggered another college press battle last week.

Lawrence Libow, a columnist for the Springfield STUDENT, received notice of his dismissal from Dean of Students John Costello in early February after he wrote a series of articles questioning college involvement in a local community development project. Included in some of the columns were sprinklings of graffiti from students desks around the college. A later editorial in the STUDENT, which has given no support to Libow, noted that the grafitti might be construed as "obscene."

During the weekend over a hundred students continued a constant sit-in vigil in the college administration building to protest Libow's dismissal. Springfield College President Wilbert Locklin's only comment was "the students have permission."

The letter of dismissal from Dean Costello referred to the Joint Statement on the Rights and Freedoms of Students and the Springfield College dismissal policy as reasons for Libow's dismissal. Costello's letter to Libow stated:

"It is appropriate to indicate that your attacks on personal integrity and the techniques of harassment and inuendo in earlier articles, culminating with the objectionable language in your article in the Springfied College STUDENT. . .is not consistent with the ideals and ethical standards of the College and of the professions to which preparation is being given. . .Infact, such action is considered PREJUDICIAL TO THE WELFARE OF THE STUDENTS AND THE COLLEGE." (Capsours)

Libow and his attorney, Steven Silvermann of the local American Civil Liberties Union, appealed Libow's dismissal to the Springfield Faculty Hearing Committee in closed session Feb. 17. Silvermann had made request to the Committee chairman that his stenographer and Libow's parents be allowed to attend the meeting.

Committee chairman John Meumann refused Silvermaun's request on the basis that "it would be inappropriate and inconsistent with the confidential nature of the hearing." No one from the press was allowed admittance to the hearing.

For a number of weeks the Springfield STUDENT carried a series of Libow's "On the Left" columns that dealt with both community and academic aspects of student life. In one column Libow mentioned that Charles Schaaff, Chairman of the College's Board of Trustees, was possibly involved in "hanky panky" with the Bay State West development project.

Democrats Set to Take Campus For State Convention in Summer

By GEORGE LaCHANCE
Staff Correspondent

In the middle of June, between Spring and Summer semesters, the UMass campus will change from a haven for serious students to a haven for serious conventioneers. For the first time in the nation, a college will be used for a state partisan convention.

The new Lincoln Campus Center will be the focal point of most activities. With the completion scheduled for May, it will be fresh for the more than 1,600 Democrats. The new hotel's 120 rooms will be reserved for the more important party members; Southwest will handle the others. The new restaurant and ballroom will also be put to use by the guests.

State Democratic chairman Harrison is pleased about the site committee's accepting his recommendation unanimously. Of the two advantages of the location, he said, one is cost. The party spent about $17,000 on the '68 convention, while the anticipated cost at UMass is $6,000. The cost to the individual also will be less. Fifteen dollars each day will cover room and three meals.

Harrison also thinks the campus will be good for the party's image. Democrats would like to be thought of as sympathizing with the same issues that concern students, and the placidness of the campus will provide a business-like atmosphere, he said.

The University has taken the position that all expenses that are incurred will be paid for by the convention. The Cage will be supplied free, as it is with all conventions. Any extra labor supplied by the regular UMass work force will be done in overtime.

Liquor will be allowed in the rooms of the conventioneers, but extra police will be on patrol to maintain order. The liquor license has already been granted by the Amherst selectmen to the Top of the Campus Corp. so, with state approval, there will be a lounge available at the new Campus Center.

Promises Cost Nothing

To The Five College Community:

Are you surprised at the events of Feb. 18? You shouldn't be. Anyone with an ounce of intellect should have seen what was coming. Promises cost nothing and delaying tactics are old hat, as any politician can tell you.

As one of a very silent minority (black, over 30, and a commuter at that) I serve notice that no longer shall I be silent. If educational texts were written truthfully, from primary grades upward, we Blacks would not have to stage sit-ins and make demands.

How long can we watch ourselves portrayed as ignorant, less than human? Yes, we do need a Black Studies program; if only to raise our esteem in our own eyes.

How great would this country be without our forefathers' contributions? You might have a lesser amount of money tucked away, if your great grandfathers' had had to pay for all their slave labor.

I for one, will not permit my children to be miseducated and brainwashed into believing they are first class citizens, when in fact the only time they are considered as such is for taxes or military purposes. I want them to be taught by people who are aware of them as human beings first, and to have pride in their past.

We are different yes, but is our difference (aside from skin tone) any greater than the fair-skinned Swedish-American from the dark-skinned Greek-American? I think not.

The continent of Africa had culture and a flourishing civilization when Europeans were still wearing animal skins and living in caves. The white man did not bring us civilization, only his interpretation of it.

Black Studies would do much to close the gap between truth and fantasy. White students too might find that although God created the world in six days, it took all men to help develop it in whatever capacity each contained. If the black man's contribution of late hasn't matched others, who's to blame, him or those manipulating his environment?

Further, we are voluntarily leaving the treasurer's office displeased once again without seeing Treasurer Johnson's face. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Where? Oh, Where?

After the students protesting the proposed rent hike by marching to Fort Whitmore had handed their letters to Dean Field, many of them walked upstairs, down the corridor and past the plush office complex of the mysterious Kenneth Johnson. Most of the students kept walking but approximately seventy students dropped in on the Treasurer for a mid-afternoon rap.

Despite the urgings of Student Senate President, Cynthia Olken and Senate P.R. Committee Chairman, Geoffrey Levine to keep walking (they probably thought there was going to be a sit-in demonstration, heaven forbid), the students walked casually around the office, talking with each other about the issues of the day. A few of the students were concerned over the possibility of the police barging in on them, night sticks flying; others worried over the possibility of getting "trapped" into a makeshift riot (isn't the men's room in here). But most of the others simply wanted to rap with Johnson, just to see if "he's with us" or "to see where he stands" or, as one curious student put it, "Just to see him."

But the controversial Treasurer of the controversial Office of the Treasury was not available at the time. The reasons for his unavailability ranged from "I'm too busy" to an allusion by someone who looked like he worked there that Johnson was in danger, physically in danger, that is. And everyone just kept walking around, some of them were really getting into the disgustingly modern office, with its wall to wall carpeting which soon became an ashtray for, as one person put it, "the whole world is an ashtray."

All the while someone would ask to see Johnson; someone would demand to see Johnson. Before long, everyone demanded to see Johnson. But, I ask you, where was Johnson? Is there really a Johnson? Somebody, some place is pulling a fast one. Not since "Masked Marauders" have so many people been fooled by so few. Is Kenneth Johnson alive and well and living in Quasiland with Howard Hughes? "He died with Paul McCartney, and his double has taken over the Office of Treasurer", said one frustrated co-ed. The public should not be subjected to this. Ken Johnson is in league with Deity Records (let me know if anyone gets that one).

Now, the method that the "infamous seventy" used to meet with Johnson could be questioned. And their perseverance in the matter, and their occasional rudeness could also be questioned (in another century), but the overwhelming fact remains, Johnson did not come out of his office. After a while, students didn't even want to talk to him, they just wanted to see him. It was a bad move on Johnson's part, and it decreases his credibility by about 100%.

Keep on Truckin'

Yesterday more than 1,000 UMass students marched on the Whitmore Administration building to protest the recent rent hike proposed by the Office of the Treasurer. While it should be ventured that the turnout was only 15% of the total number of students affected by this hike; it could also be surmised that maybe the majority of these same nonparticipants are affluent enough not to be affected that much by the hike.

It should be remember that when the term "silent majority" is employed in the media; it is not always a reference to those southern and mid-western hicks upon whom the term is so often unappropriately placed.

There is no doubt that the administration will be little swayed by this less than austere turnout. Those bureaucrats over there on the mound, peered out of their windows and saw a few well-organized activists carrying the burden of a whole society. They saw 1,000 students marching where there should have been thousands in the plural sense. It would appear that these same bureaucrats had the latter wrapped around their little fingers while they screw them.

Hell, why should they even consider the rent hike with such a whisper of protest? How can they assume that the rent inflation is hurting anyone unless they hear screams? It is really inconclevable how people can stand, blind, deaf, and dumb, like cattle while a few Whitmorians screw them. There are fewer exploiters than there are those who are exploited. The real power is with the exploited; if they just get of their asses. How much longer will the cattle nonchalantly march in unison to the slaughter house instituted for their exploitation before they finally realize that they can just a easily take that slaughterhouse and transform its production for the benefit of all instead of the few?

All Kinds of Music

The Santana album finished, and my Black friend put on Coltrane. "The way it is now", he told me, "if I want to take a course in Black studies, they're scattered in like the sociology department and English department. A lot of them are taught badly, a lot of them are white oriented; I don't have to be taught what it's like to live in a ghetto. Even so, I'd like to take a lot of the courses, but I have to take the requirements, and then I have to major in something which is not Black studies."

Coltrane was at Newport, just playing his horn.

"Now we've been trying to beg Black studies for years. Even though Whites will take and benefit from the courses, we haven't had support from them. Although we demonstrate against the administrations and not the students, some of us are beginning to wonder if the students are for or against us, if they really give a damn."

As we talked, we had been listening to John Coltrane. That record ended and we heard Led Zeppelin coming through the walls from another room's stereo.

"That's a down," I said liberally, "going from Coltrane to Zeppelin."

"Hey," my Black friend said, "you gotta have all kinds of music."

I hope the Presidents of the Five Colleges are listening to both Coltrane and Zeppelin.

Stay Out of Randolph

To The Editor:

I swallowed a couple of bite-sized chuckles when I read the article, " 'Smoke Out' Campaign organized in Randolph" in Wednesday's, Feb. 18, Collegian. It immediately brought to mind another campaign waged in that town last summer, a sort of "Get Out" campaign. This colorful little town, nestled among the towns of Braintree, Canton, and Milton seems to be puffing out its chest over a clever, and progressive plan to help humanity. The news media shouldn't be so quick to pump air into that inflatable chest. It should first take a whiff of the air already there. It stinks. This colorful little town is dark brown. Its only interest in humanity is mercenary: to raise some bread to send its own high school students to college.

Last summer I saw, heard, and smelled the "Get Out" campaign many times in Easy Rider-like episodes, even though this campaign wasn't officially declared or publicized. Once a friend of mine named Bill and I were walking down Randolph's main street towards Zack's, a pizza place where we planned to have lunch. Even though the street was full of people, a cop, who'd been chatting with someone in a parked car, lifted his head and shouted for all to hear, "Look, girls, if you think you're gonna stay here, you got another thing cummin'. If I see youse so much as stop, I'm gonna lock you up. Hear me, you faggots? Just keep movin'." We'd never seen that cop before. The only thing that could have caught his attention was our long hair. When we got to Zack's, we had a less than pleasant lunch. That's the best treatment I got in that town. At least the cop didn't detain us or threaten us with physical violence.

Another time three of us were waiting for another friend in front of his house on the main street. We were sitting in the car when a small, unmarked car pulled up alongside our Cadillac and some guy with close-cropped, white hair yelled, "C'mon, move along." My friend Steve, who was driving said, "Pardon me, but how come we have to move, and who are you?" That's all it took. In a second this hulky, dumb-looking cop, his T-shirt clad belly poking through his unbuttoned uniform (apparently he was off-duty), was at the car window. First thing he said to us was, "Look, you fuckin' long haired creeps, I said beat it." We knew what he'd said, but none of us dared tell him that. Then when I told him we were waiting for a friend who'd be along in a couple of minutes, he came over to my door, opened it, and said, "If you don't want that punk face punched in, shut up." Next he said to Steve, "Lemme see your papers." I wonder how many Jews were asked for their papers in Nazi Germany? He took down Steve's name, address, and registration number, but when Steve asked for his name or badge number, he only threatened him. It was about eleven o'clock at night, and there wouldn't have been any other witnesses, and so to avoid getting beat up and arrested, we got the hell out of there.

My last enchanting experience in Randolph happened rather late in the summer, and Bill was with me again. We were hitchhiking from our friend's house in Randolph at around midnight. Suddenly one, then two unmarked cars converged on the scene followed by the arrival of a marked car with a blinker and everything. They started really trying to bother us with questions like "Where are you from?" We told them we were from Braintree, and that we were going to Boston to visit some people, and they wanted to know who we were going to visit, we told them it was none of their business. Then another unmarked car converged on the scene. The scene of what? Of the converging of the town's entire nocturnal police force! Out of this car stepped a rather tall black cop. Oh! I remembered all the black persecution stories, and figured that this guy knew what it was to be persecuted, and might help us out. First thing he said was, "I'm the man, and this here is mah beat." O.K. So he established his status. Then he asked us what business we had being on his beat. We repeated that we were hitch-hiking to Boston. Then he started telling us how we didn't look civilized with our long hair. He obviously didn't know what "civilized" meant. I thought his friends were barbaric, but he was a living aboriginal anachronism from some headhunting tribe. There they were, black and white headhunters from Randolph telling us if we were civilized, we wouldn't be out at this late hour. When I made the irresistible comment that they, too, were out at this hour, the intellectual among them, a small, skinny cop, who spoke like Barney Fife, poked me with his finger, and said, "I wanna know what you meant by that?" When I looked at his hat to see the number of the one poking me, another cop asked me what I was doing. I told him, and they all made a circle around me. One of them said something about picking my teeth up off the street. I was really scared. Luckily they didn't do anything to me, but they told us to get going and that if we were not past a certain street in ten minutes, they'd lock us up. Since they'd detained us for close to an hour, we decided to abandon our Boston excursion and go back to our friend's house, but they wouldn't let us go in that direction. So it wasn't until we went in the direction they ordered us to go in, and sneaked back through backyards and bushes as if we were criminals that we made it back to our friend's house at about four in the morning. And we were scared the whole time that the cops might find us sneaking back and arrest us for whatever crimes they could imagine.

Anyone reading this might be tempted to disbelieve it, but a few more incidents can be better substantiated about Randolph. For instance, during one of the moratoriums, the town (not unlike Ware, if you'll recall) refused to grant a parade permit to moratorium demonstrators until the court ordered it to do so. Then after the small, harassed anti-war parade, Randolph staged a bigger pro-war demonstration. If you go through Randolph now, you'll see evidence of the Neanderthal, America-love-it-or-leave-it patriotism in the American flag patches worn on the shoulders of the Randolph police uniforms...It's too bad I had to read about Randolph in the paper today. My experiences there have warped me to some degree by creating hostile feelings in me which I can still feel.

Randolph's campaign asserts that smoking cigarettes may be hazardous to one's health. In fact the article quoted a pledge the campaign is using. Well I have my own pledge. It goes like this, "I believe that going to Randolph may be hazardous to my health. I will think of this if I go to Randolph again."

Growing Disgust

To The Editor:

This letter has been spawned mainly through a growing disgust for some people on this campus. Here we sit in our little haven downing society with every breath and then turning our actions against our words. You curse the greed of our imperialist nation and yet you yourselves are little better. How many chances have you had to do something worthwhile that you passed up? The March on Peace, the demonstrations against the war recruiters, The Coalition, Aid for Biafra (to name a few); did you give any help? Yet now the University has threatened to raise the cost of your precious education and out come the arms. The only move you make is to save yourselves a little money. I'm self-supporting, have no money; yet I'd sooner quit school before I'd join the likes of you.

Of course, if you've done all you can then you're far more blameless than I. So save yourselves a little money. I thought I'd find a little hope on this campus; I suppose I'd better look elsewhere. Maybe the world had better also.

RICK TAUPIER

(Editor's note: Amen!)

The maximum length for all Letters to the Editor is two pages, typed at 60 spaces, and double spaced. Each letter must carry the writer's signature, address and telephone number. The deadline for all Letters to the Editor is 5:00 p.m. the day before intended publication. Letters that fail any of these requirements will not be printed. The policy of a two-page maximum length is effective today, and is not retroactive. We want everyone to have room to speak. Peace.

More on M.L.K

To The Editor:

I am writing in reference to Mr. Carleton Brown's letter of Feb. 17, on his views on the M.L.K. Council and what he states and implies are true qualifications to being a member of the King Council.

He responded to the two letters by Judith Tripp and Ann Nichols, in a sarcastic tone which suggests obvious bias against members critical of the King Council. Also, whether the accusations of Miss Tripp and Miss Nichols are exactly true or not, is not the most important point. I suggest that there are many people who feel exactly as they do about the Council.

There is a definite lack of large student participation in the Council. There are many students who drop out of active participation in the King Council. Why is this? Is it because members are "timid and insecure", or "white plastic shells" as Brown insists? I doubt it. The students who join the King Council genuinely want to be a part of changing our society, helping the unfortunate of our society and using the Council as a vehicle of change. However, the attitude of Mr. Brown and Mr. Mosakowski impair the Council. They expect that members give the same devotion (i.e. entire life) to the Council, as Dr. King gave for the "people", as the criteria of being a member of the Council. I suspect what Mr. Brown really wants are copies of Brown and Mosakowski. Of course, this may be very commendable, but as the King Council is a student sponsored and paid for group, it is opened to all and should not deny a student who has only several hours a week to help, the opportunity to do so. The Council needs as many students as possible and I predict it will die if only a small elite and ego clashing group dominates it. To ask that each member devote his "entire" life for the Council sounds as pompous and dogmatic as some religious moments which have died or became irrelevant.

As far as your statement about personality clashes and ego-envolvements having no place in the Council, I would agree. However, just as the two young ladies noticed, the King Council is very much in the whirlpool of personality clashes.

Obviously your attack on two potential workers for the Council is exactly the attitude that keeps the Council from achieving broader participation from students on campus. If the trend should continue the Council may find it difficult to request and receive student monies for its support.

And Still More

To the editor:

I feel that recent letters regarding King Council reorganization deserve comment. The reorganization process is not meant to be a purge, as some have implied. The basic, fundamental purpose of the reorganization as originally proposed by Bob Henderson is to open the King Council to the entire community, so that it will have the opportunity to become relevant to the community.

Some of us have already defined "relevance" in our own heads, and are talking about the end result of the conference in those terms as if it were a fait accompli. I am as guilty of this fault as those who will be most upset at reading this letter.

Constructive criticism should be the order of the day at this weekend's conference. I expect to come under a great deal of attack at the conference, and believe that I should be challenged. I also expect to defend myself vigorously. It is only in this way that any of us can learn about our faults and strengths and improve ourselves.

This should be a time to discuss new ideas and new methods without resorting to pettiness in defense of our own preconceived notions of "the way things should be". Nobody at the conference will have any more power or automatic claim to "rightness" than anyone else.

Those who favor past or present King Council programs should be on hand to defend them and urge their continuation. Those who oppose everything the King Council has done should come to tell why and offer their ideas for improvement.

Carl Brown and Ken Mosakowski have both expressed their views about commitment. My views differ in that I feel that the King Council should also provide room for those who have not yet found their commitment. None of us have the power to enforce our views. We will talk about them, but the final decision is in the hands of those who participate in the conference.

The decision is yours to make. You can be a part of an organization which you helped create, or you can sit back, abdicate all responsibility and get left behind.

I urge every student who is concerned about the inseparable questions of race, poverty, war, illegitimate authority, environment, and self-determination to attend and participate in this conference.

Peace,
GILBERT J. SALK

"Action Courses"

Dear Editor:

We were the only two people who showed up on Tuesday for Free University's course on White Racism. The turnouts for F.U.C.'s other courses haven't been much better. Where are all the people who have been screaming about irrelevant courses? Out of 18,000 people there must be more than a dozen who are interested in learning, discussing, and eventually doing something about the problems in this country. A different course meets every day in 320 South College from 1:30 to 3:00. The topics are: Monday, Ecology and Environment; Tuesday, White Racism; Wednesday, Vietnam; Thursday Student Rights and Student Power; and Friday, Military Industrial Complex. Anyone who has been looking for relevance and doesn't have a conflict will be making a mistake if they don't go to at least one of these "Action Courses."

ARHS Sponsors National Theatre's Production of "A Thousand Clowns"

The National Theatre Company, a professional theatrical company touring the eastern section of the nation, has been transforming school auditoriums into legitimate playhouses.

On February 19th, 20th, and 21st, 1970 at Amherst Regional High School Auditorium, they will present Herb Gardner's play, "A Thousand Clowns." The program is the result of joint efforts by SGP Productions of Amherst and The National Theatre Company to bring live professional entertainment to the community of Amherst.

The company began five seasons ago when Barry Weissler and Fran Weller, now co-producers of the company, noticed that there was very little professional theatre going directly into the schools.

"What we did see we felt was skimpy," said Mr. Weissler. "We wanted the students to see a full production, something comparable to what they would see in New York or at a resident company. This is why we travel with a full complement of sets, costumes, lights sound, etc.

The actors in the company are all professionals with training and experience in all the media and especially in classical theatre. Most of them have worked in the various Shakespeare festivals, including the Stratford and New York Shakespeare Festivals.

The company's repetoire is firmly based in the classics - the Greek dramatists, Shakespeare, Moliere, Chekhov, and Shaw. Past presentations have included EVERYMAN, ANTIGONE Moliere's THE PHYSICIAN IN SPITE OF HIMSELF, and two complete programs called THE WORLD OF THEATRE and THE WORLD OF SHAKESPEARE.

"Probably the most valuable contribution we make," said Miss Weller, "is to take the great plays out of the classroom and put them on stage where they belong. We hope to give the student an idea of the original impact of a classic. After all, we call a play a 'classic' because it has retained its original excitement and meaning for all ages."

Tickets for this production are now available at 102 Draper Hall on the UMass campus, and at The Listening Post, 25 South Pleasant Street, Amherst. They will also be on sale on the nights of performance at the door.

Two members of the National Theatre rehearse "A Thousand Clowns", coming to Amherst Regional High School February 19th, 20th, and 21st.

Northampton Talkie Theatre Opens With N. E. Premier of "Prologue"

A new movie theater, "The Talkie" opened last Friday night in Northampton with the New England premiere of "Prologue", produced by the National Film Board of Canada. Though filmed from the viewpoint of a young Canadian couple, played by John Robb and Elaine Malus, "Prologue" features a remarkable performance by Abbie Hoffman and several fine shots of Allen Ginsberg at the 1968 Democratic Convention. Complementing the feature is a short, uninhibited "Yippie Movie", also based on the Chicago Debacle of 1968.

As for the theater itself, Dale Atkins, a former UMass art student, and his assistants have put together an intimate and comfortable place for watching movies. "The Talkie" seats one hundred people, and there's not a bad seat in the house. Dale wants an old-fashioned sort of theater, where the film and viewer are of prime importance. Though attractively laid out (and scrupulously clean), the theater is uncluttered with decorations or commercial promotions. However, the lobby does offer a variety of soft drinks and bags of little candies that girls especially will love. Popcorn, etc. is in the offing, and Dale is completely responsive to public demand. With some financial success on the film end, he plans a snack bar upstairs for hungry patrons.

So, "The Talkie" is decidedly student-oriented, and located in the heart of Northampton, within easy access of the five colleges. Plans are to feature high-quality foreign, experimental, and "straight" films not available at other theates. Dale also welcomes submissions from local film-makers, and may feature some of these. "The Talkie" is, then, the first theater in this area created by and for young movie-lovers.

NFS Funds Research; Summer Positions Open

AMHERST, Mass. - A program of undergraduate research participation sponsored by the National Science Foundation will be conducted in the department of physics and astronomy at the University of Massachusetts during the summer of 1970.

The aim is to provide a genuine research experience at the undergraduate level which will allow the participant to develop his independence in scientific endeavors. The participant will be expected to play a major part in the definition and solution of the research problem. Participants may associate themselves with any of the research efforts in the department.

Seven positions as undergraduate research participants will be available. NSF stipends are at the rate of $60 per week for up to 12 weeks. These stipends will be supplemented by funds made available by the University. Eligibility is restricted to seniors who wish to continue a research effort already in progress, and juniors of promise and ability. Only under special circumstances will sophomores be invited to participate.

Students wishing to apply for the program should forward a letter giving their academic backgrounds and possible research interests. A copy of the student's undergraduate transcript would also be helpful, as well as a letter of recommendation from a faculty member or other person qualified to judge the student's potential for success in such a program.

Further information is available from Professor Allan R. Hoffman, Department of Physics and Astronomy, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002.

Art Show Intriguing

By GRACE LACHANCE

The free art show at 123 Herter will remain open until the end of February. It is worth a few minutes of a student's time to stop and look through the exhibition of sketches, bronze works, sculptures, and other forms of contemporary art.

One display combines a visual as well as touch experience. From a distance it appears to be a cardboard-plastic model of a tall building. Covered holes are found randomly placed about the six-foot structure. Instructions nearby encourage the observer to "thrust hand through hole and explore inner space."

After the participant overcomes the fear of the unknown, he is in for some unusual experiences. One plunge into inner space may find another hand put into the Touch Box from the other side. Another allows an exploration of various shapes built into the box. Perhaps the strangest of all is thrusting one's hand into a soft warm mound that feels spongy; on top is a slightly firmer protrusion.

Smith to Offer Film Series On Environmental Pollution

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. - A series of films on environmental pollution will be offered at Smith College Friday (Feb. 20) throughout the day.

The film showings are part of a two-day program to be held at the college this weekend focusing on aspects of pollution on the local and national scene. Among films to be shown is "The Beautiful River," which deals with pollution of the Connecticut River. All the film showings are free and open to the public.

From 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Wright Hall on the Smith campus, three films will be shown. These are "Automania 2000," "The Population Explosion," and "Up to Our Necks." At 3:30 Friday afternoon in Wright Hall, five films will be screened. These are "Two Yosemites," "Canyon Voyage," "Bulldozed America," "The Problem with Water is People," and "Automania 2, 000."

Also at 3:30 p.m. in McConnell Hall will be showings of "The Beautiful River," "The Majestic Polluted Hudson," "The First Mile Up," and "Science and Foresight." At the same time in Sage Hall, "Who Killed Lake Erie?", "The Drag" (an animation), and "The Water Famine" will be shown.

In Sage Hall at 8 p.m., five films will also be shown. These are "Motor Gas" (an animation), "The Myths and Parallels," "The Noise Boom," "Our Vanishing Lands," and "The Beautiful River."

Other events in the two day program include an all-college assembly address by conservationist and author Anne Morrow Lindbergh on "Earth Values." A 1928 Smith alumna, she will be awarded an honorary doctor of letters degree.

At 2 p.m. Friday in Wright Hall, two lectures will be open to the public on environmental pollution. Smith Assistant Professor of Religion Thomas S. Derr will speak on "Man against Nature." "The Quality of our Environment" will be the topic of a lecture by University of British Columbia Professor of Zoology Deanis Chitty.

On Saturday at 10 a.m. in John M. Greene Hall, a community assembly will be held on the topic "The Mill River - Pollution or Potential." Among speakers will be Northampton's Mayor Sean M. Dunphy and City Engineer Francis P. Ryan, and Williamsburg Selectman Hans Nietsche.

MHC Seeks Realism Education Outlined

With quiet determination and very little fanfare, a group of concerned students has compiled and distributed an ambitious "Working Paper on Education at Mount Holyoke." The publication takes a hard look at current educational practices and offers a number of alternatives toward making a liberal education "more realistic in today's rapidly changing world," according to Janet C. Hall '70 of Lowell, Mass., president of the Student Government Association and one of the authors.

The authors contend that the individual is the key to the educational process; the individual is a total person and not a compartmentalized being whose classroom life is separate and distinct from her extracurricular existence; and that education must be meaningful now, not at some future date.

Among the more dramatic changes suggested by the document are a new curriculum, or rather a new way of attacking the body of knowledge; a dossier system of evaluation instead of grades; and a method for students to construct their own field of concentrated study.

In the proposed curriculum, which stresses flexibility, six types of courses would be offered: 1) concept courses, which may be oriented towards a particular problem, theme or method of inquiry to acquaint the learner with common academic themes and different divisional approaches to the themes; 2) departmental courses, similar to those already in existence; 3) third tier courses, conceptual or problem-oriented courses for studeats who have acquired competence in their area of specialization; 4) group independent study; 5) individual independent study; and 6) whartisie units which would provide academic credit for pre-planned and pre-announced educational experiences which do not fit into a typical academic course.

The paper also includes a group advising system proposal, the elimination of comprehensive examinations, and a system of student self-evaluation at various times during their academic experience.

Miss Hall emphasized that the working paper is not an end but hopefully the beginning of an intensive study of education at Mount Holyoke by the whole College community. She feels that "the most drastic change will be a change of attitude within the College - a new sense of responsibility towards education if the intentions of the authors are to work."

"The paper does not express so much a dissatisfaction with what is occurring at Mount Holyoke now but rather a positive excitement about how good education could be.

Students Present Anti-War Letters To Pres. Nixon

WASHINGTON (CPS) - While President Nixon vacationed in Florida's 70-degree temperatures last weekend, a group of about 400 young people gathered in the snow outside the White House to present him, IN ABSENTIA, with some messages.

But Nixon isn't likely to publicize them as he did the "silent majority" telegrams supporting his Vietnam policy, for these messages -- 37 cartons of them, containing 420,000 signatures--were brought by the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, and they represented popular sentiment against the war.

Presentation of the cartons filled with antiwar postcards, letters and petitions followed a Feb. 15 rally called by the moratorium committee.

DuBois New Music Rep, Action Plans in Future

Dr. Richard du Bois, associate head of the department of music at UMass has been appointed by the Massachusetts Music Educators Association as the state representative in a new national project of the 58,000-member Music Educators National Conference (MENC).

Dr. du Bois will represent the state on the national committee established by MENC to make a thorough study of "Music in Higher Education" related to music education in the United States.

The Goals and Objectives project (GO) of the MENC is a major undertaking during the current year to study critical problems in many aspects of music education and to reexamine the role and responsibility of the organization regarding these problems. Dr. Herbert Philpott, president of the Massachusetts Music Educators Association, reported that the GO project is a significant new thrust of the conference to establish directions for the 70's.

He added that the culminating activity of each national committee studying these various problems of music life and education in America today will be to present specific recommendations at the biennial national convention in Chicago in March.

Following thorough discussion, recommendations will be passed by the assembled educators as specific action plans to be carried out in the coming years by music educators on the national, state and local levels.

Phi Kappa Phi Funds Up 25% Awards Increased $15,000

TOLEDO, Ohio - The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi has announced a 25 per cent increase in the amount of money it will make available for fellowships to be awarded to college seniors and recent college graduates in 1970.

Fellowships will total $60,000 in 1970 compared to $45,000 in 1969.

Twenty fellowships of $3,000 each will be awarded, according to Dr. Archie N. Solberg, vice president for research at The University of Toledo (Ohio) and chairman of the Phi Kappa Phi Fellowship Committee.

Students to be honored will be selected from the honor society's chapters at 117 colleges and universities throughout the nation.

The funds will help finance one year of study on the graduate level. No restrictions are placed on what field of study may be pursued, Dr. Solberg said.

The deadline for nominations by Phi Kappa Phi Chapters, which may submit one candidate each, is March 1, 1970.

The Fellowship Committee will meet at 9 a.m. March 14 in Toledo, Ohio to consider nominations. Alternate awardees will not be selected as has been the policy in the past, Dr. Solberg noted.

The society also will continue to award its $1,000 memorial fellowship award named in honor of the late Dr. Roswell C. Gibbs, who served as president and as supervisor of fellowships for the society.

Phi Kappa Phi has awarded more than $200,000 in fellowships since establishing a fellowship fund in 1932. Phi Kappa Phi was founded in 1897 and is hedquartered in Los Angeles, Calif.

UNH Hosts Track Championship

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Durham, New Hampshire is the scene tomorrow for the Yankee Conference indoor track and field championships. All indications point to this meet being one of the outstanding championships in New England this year. The caliber of athlete is outstanding, each event will be hotly contested, and with the fast UNH track, there appears to be a good chance for many fast times and many records to be set.

Coach Ken O'Brien says of the meet, "The fields are so strong in the Yankee Conference meet, that three out of the top five places in each event in the New Englands will be from Yankee Conference athletes, with possibly four out of five in a couple of events."

Connecticut, on paper and past performances, is the clear-cut favorite to take the team title. The Huskies were undefeated in dual meets this season and are coming off an extremely hot performance against UMass in which they set five new indoor records.

New Hampshire is their biggest opposition. The meet is on its home track and this is the last meet for the UNH coach. These two factors are intangible in sports and work in favor of a team.

UMass, Rhode Island, and Maine will be battling it out for third place, with the Redmen having the best opportunity of these three teams for moving up to challenge UConn and UNH. The reason for this is that the Redmen have good individual performers. The team on a whole has been defeated by lack of depth in dual meets, but on an individual level the Redmen have the performers to compete head to head with the best the other schools have to offer.

UMass is the long shot in this championship and an extremely hot performance by the Redmen and a below par performance by both UConn and UNH could cause a juggling in the pre-meet predictions when the final scores are in.

In a meet of this sort, there are always those individuals who stand out from the rest of the performers. Connecticut, New Hampshire and UMass have the majority of these individuals.

Two-miler John Vitale, miler Craig Mccoll, 1000 yarder Steve Flanagan, and weightman Art Pallwoda are the Connecticut standouts.

New Hampshire has as one of its performers Jeff Bannister, who is one of the top decathaloners in the country and has competed in international competition. He will be competing in probably three events in the meet. An individual such as Bannister could change the complexion of the entire meet. Mark Smith in the sprints and Steve Pregent in the 600 are the other UNH standouts.

UMass has as its top individual performers the familiar names of Ron Wayne, Dave Evans, Walter Mayo, Jim Graves, Eddie Acaro, Emerson Hiller, Al Mangan, Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey. A high finish in the final standings will depend on the performances of these men.

The meet gets underway at 9:30 a.m. with the jumping events and the trials in the springs and hurdles. The running events and other finals begin at two o'clock. It all shapes up as an outstanding morning and afternoon of outstanding track and field competition.

tors would be permitted to march to Government Center, about a half mile from the Common.

The decision was made after a meeting between representatives of the mayor and Tony Temple, a spokesman for the Day After Committee.

Mayor White's spokesman said the permit was issued after slight alterations in the route were agreed upon.

Earlier in the day, Richard G. MacEachern, 34, a Boston policeman and president of the National Police Patrolmen's Association, said members of his 20,000 member association would counter demonstrate the demonstrators.

MacEachern spoke to newsmen Thursday after an incident he reported in which he barely escaped a shotgun blast fired from a passing car Wednesday night as he stepped from a store.

Pucksters Travel to R.I., Face Tough Brown Squad

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

The Redmen go hunting for Brown Bear this weekend, when they travel to Providence, Rhode Island, to engage the Bruins of Brown University. Face-off is 8 o'clock Saturday night.

Coach Jack Canniff feels the Bruins, currently 9-6-1 in Division I play, are capable of defeating any team in the East, including perennial powerhouse, Cornell. The Redmen have nothing to loose and everything to gain in their upcoming battle. The final outcome will have no bearing in Massachusetts' position in Division II and their fight for a playoff berth. An upset victory would be quite a feather in Canniff's hat and a great motivating factor for the team. Canniff feels "whether or not we win or lose, the fact that we are playing a team of Brown's caliber will be good experience for our sophomore laden team."

Brown coach Jim Fullerton has 16 lettermen returning, plus 11 sophomores from last year's freshman team. Leading Fullerton's list of returnees is senior Curt Bennett, al All-Ivy and All-east selection a year ago and a possible All-American candidate this year. Fullerton has moved Bennett, from defense to center, taking advantage of Curt's offensive ability. Bennett will center for two sophomores, Dick Ferriter and Dave McCoy. Ferriter paced the freshman scorers with 15 goals and 19 assists, while McCoy produced 17 goals with 7 assists.

The second line consists of seniors Rich McLaughlin at center, Frank Sachele and Captain Bob Fleming at wings. Sachele was Brown's leading scorer last year with 20 goals and 20 assists, while McLaughlin had 35 points, including 11 goals. The third line is centered by the Bruin's (the Boston Bruins) executive Milt Schmidt's son, Connie. Schmidt, a junior, is a fine skater and an excellent defensive player. He centers for the Radomsky twins Warren and Wayne.

Defense seems to be Brown's strongest point. Fullerton has nine players to choose from. Lately he has used four seniors, Bill Gilbane, Gary Peacock, Dave Broadway and Bob Clifford, while spotting his four sophomores, hoping they will gain the necessary experience to take over next year. The fifth defenseman for either group is junior Bob Gilbane from Providence, Rhode Island.

Canniff expects to counter Brown's explosive attack by using four lines. This tactic has proved successful against UConn and Amherst, as it wears the opposition down, while the Redman skaters have plenty of energy left. Wednesday afternoon the Redmen scored five goals in the third period as the Lord Jeffs hardly had enough energy to skate out of their own zone. P.S. Flaherty is expected to start in the nets.

Saturday's varsity game will be preceded by a freshmen battle between the Little Redmen and the Brown Cubs. Wednesday night the Little Redmen beat Deerfield 5-3 at Deerfield. Freshmen sensation Pat Keenan scord his 18th goal of the season, but Don Riley has been playing excellent hockey of late. Against Harvard, Monday night, Don scored the little Redmen's first goal and assisted on their second. Wednesday Riley had three points, scoring two goals and assisting on Lonnis Avery's goal. If Keenan, Riley and Avery have their scoring touch Saturday, the Redmen have a good chance to upset the Cubs.

ICE CHIPS - Bruce Crawford registered his second straight shutout of the year against the Lord Jeffs. Crawford's goal against average is now 0.8, best in Division II, but unfortunately he has appeared in only five games not enough to qualify him for the "Net Title". The "Fickle Finger of the Week" award went to Amherst College for charging a $1.00 admission to the game.

Wednesday night Middlebury beat Vermont, 5-3, to remain one game ahead of the Redmen in their battle for the fourth playoff position. Middlebury has three games left, against Williams, Norwich a d Bowdoin while the Redmen only have two Division II games remaining, Holy Cross and Williams.

Trackmen Routed by UConn, 67-37, as Huskies Set 5 Marks

Opening up their big guns Wednesday night, the University of Connecticut set not one or two but five indoor records in routing the Redmen, 67-37. The Huskies opened up a fairly close meet near the end of the evening by taking all three spots in the pole vault, nabbing one-two in the two mile and winning both the thousand and the relay.

Ed Arcaro, UMass only varsity weight man, opened the scoring for the Redmen with thirds in both the 35 pound weight and the 16 pound shot, heaving both objects over 50 feet. High jumpers Ed Shaughnessy and Cal Carpenter both cleared 6 feet to take the top spots in their event with little opposition provided by UConn.

The running events then began with the mile, and the Huskies runners began their assault on the record books. In UConn's Craig McColl and UMass' Ron Wayne, two of New England's best milers hooked up and produced the best college dual meet mile in New England this year. McColl took off from the gun and set a fast pace going thru the quarter in 60 seconds with Wayne following on his heels.

The race turned into a two man battle with McColl in the lead for six laps of the eight and a quarter lap race. Then Wayne made his move past McColl but could only hold the lead around the corner as the Huskie runner came barreling back and opened up a small lead which he held to the tape, running a record 4:08.8 setting a UConn and track record. Wayne finished second in a UMass school record of 4:10.2.

UConn continued ravaging their records as Pete Hilmar broke the tape in the 600 yard run in 1:12. He was closely followed by Redmen captain Dave Evans who ran the 600 for the first time in over a year, clocking a 1:13. UMass' Al Mangan picked up third place by winning his heat in 1:14.9.

UMass speedsters stopped the deluge at this point by outpointing the Huskies in the dash and hurdles. For the third straight week, hard working Walter Mayo flew to victory in the dash, leading teammate Dave Marble across the line. The officials gave third place to UConn's Bob Amaral in a very close decision over the Redmen's Ron Harris, preventing another sweep by the sprinters. Sophomore hurdler Jim Graves, showing great improvement, churned out a smooth victory in the hurdles in a quick 7.6. Jerry Spellman grabbed third in this event for the Redmen.

Entering the two mile the Redmen trailed only 40-32, but UConn then broke the meet open and set three more records along the way.

John Vitale took the two mile in a record 8:56.9 leading teammate Rick Spurling the whole race as both runners lapped the field at least once. Bruce Blackburn picked up the third place point for UMass running 9:46. Steve Flanagan went record hunting too and pulled away from the Redmen's Ron Wayne early in the 1000 and sped on to a very fast 2:11.8 record. Wayne collected second for UMass in 2:15.3 with Bill Donaldson taking third in 2:20.7.

UConn set their fifth record in the last event, the mile relay. They were pushed to their new record of 3:23.9 by a UMass squad of Spellman, Marble, Mangan and Evans which improved the Redmen mile relay time this season by six seconds, running 3:24.4. Evans highlighted the race by almost pulling off an impossible comeback closing a 35yard lead to only a couple of yards in his quarter mile which he covered in an extremely fast 48.8 seconds.

The frosh also met defeat, 73-30, getting three first place finishes from Barney Schneider in the shot with a throw of 46 plus feet, bill Clark in the hurdles in 8.2 seconds and Tom Jasmin, with his third straight two mile victory in 9:27.9.

Cagers Voyage to Maine for Sat. Tilt

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

They run and they gun, but they don't play much defense. "They" are the University of Maine Black Bears and "they" are the next team on UMass' basketball schedule Saturday night at 6:45 all the way up in Orono, Me.

Maine is coached by Gib Philbrick and own a 4-14 record. The team scores an average of about 72 points per game but also surrender around 85 points to their opponents.

Leading player for the Black Bears (Hey! How about the UMass basketball team traveling to play the "Black Bears" on Saturday while the Redmen hockey squad plays the "Brown" Bears also away and also on Saturday???) oh, yeh, is Marshall Todd.

MARSHALL TODD

Todd is a 6-foot senior guard who averaged 13.5 points last year and who is also a dean's List student. Another senior of note is Mike Hanson, a 5'11 guard and former transfer from Gannon College, the team the Redmen beat for the Gem City Bowl title in December?)

Top forwards for U of Maine include 6'5 junior Robert Chandler, 6'5 sophomore John Sterling 6'4 soph Craig Randall, who played for Rockwood Academy a few years back and 6'5 junior Richard Blake.

Pivot men for the B. Bears are sophs Bruce Stinson, 6'6, and Dominick Susi II, 6'5 who, according to the Maine brochure, "may become a mortician". Maine was 10-13 last winter but lost half the team when high-scoring Jim Stephenson graduated and another quarter of the squad with the graduation of solid center Hugh Campbell.

From here it looks as though the toughest challenge facing the Redmen this weekend will be the looney six-hour drive to the Orono campus.

Redmen Five Down Springfield in Close One, 82-76

Ellerbrooks 24 pts. Pace Victory, Despite Clark's 37 pt. Performance

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Led by the usual great performances of Julius Erving and Ray Ellerbrook, and the clutch rebounding and defense of Ken Mathias, the Redman basketball team withstood a last minute surge by the Chiefs of Springfield College to ho'd on for a thrilling 82-76 win before 4200 cheering fans at the Cage last night. The win upped UMass' season mark to 14-6 and was their sixth straight.

Erving was immense of the boards pulling down 24 caroms (18 in the first half) and scoring 22 points. He was especially strong on the offensive end keeping the ball in play and allowing his teammates to pick up many easy hoops underneath.

Ellerbrook came through with his second straight game over twenty points, hitting for 55% of his shots. He ended up with 24, many of which came on the end of long passes from Erving.

But in the late going, when the game was still up for grabs, it was Mathias who was the difference. Not only was he pulling down his share of rebounds but he made four clutch free throws in the last three minutes to help put the game away.

Leading the Chiefs, as expected, was guard Dennis Clark. The 6'1 senior came through with 37 points 22 in the crucial second half. He made all of his fifteen free throws although he only hit 11 of 32 from the floor and was the whole Springfield offense in the last six minutes.

In the game itself, it looked as if the Redmen would be in control all the way until midway through the second half. UMass took a 5-4 lead on a layup by Dick Samuelson with 16:50 left in the half and never trailed the rest of the way. Gallagher extended the lead to four, 11-7, on a beautiful pass from Erving but Clark came back with a three point play to close the gap.

With Mike Pagliara leading the team, the Redmen extended the lead to five with 12:43 remaining as Pagliara converted from an in bounds pass. After Clark made a free throw, UMass ran off nine straight points to give the Redmen the biggest lead they would enjoy all night.

The spurt was paced by Ellerbrook and Erving as they accounted for seven of the points between them. Erving hit on an 18 footer and also a charity toss after missing on three tap in attempts. Jack Gallagher followed with a rebound hoop of his own sandwiched in between two Ellerbrook bombs.

But Springfield would not quit and started to chop the lead apart. The comeback was led by 6'4 forward Darrel Hilbrands who hit six crucial points in the last three and a half minutes of the half to all but erase the UMass bulge.

With 4:13 remaining, the Redmen had a comfortable 31-18 edge after an Erving 16 footer. But Clark hit a jumper and a layup and Hilbrands made a jumper and two charity tosses while UMass could only counter with an Ellerbrook free throw. The score was 32-26 with 2:21 left.

Dennis Chapman made a clutch jump shot with 2:06 to go after two straight Redman turnovers to stretch the lead to eight but Hilbrands, Fran Stupakevich, and Steve Waterman all made baskets to make it 34-32 with only 0:13 left on the clock.

Erving took the ball down court, dribbled around for a few seconds and calmly sank one from fifteen feet after the crowd reminded him that there was no time left. The hoop game the Redmen a 36-32 halftime edge.

For the first fifteen minutes of the second half, it looked as if UMass was well in control. The highlight of this period was the play of Erving and Ellerbrook who consistently set each other up for easy hoops. The twosome brought the crowd to its feet at 14:35 of the half when the senior captain dribbled to the top of the key, stopped, and threw the ball up towards the hoop. Erving caught it in midair and layed it in to the delight of the crowd and the dismay of the Chiefs.

That hoop made it 52-39 and everything was looking good for the Redmen. But Springfield began to press and UMass started throwing the ball away. At the same time, Clark heated up and hit a bucket with 7:26 left after a steal to make it 65-59 with the Redmen still on top.

The press was bothering UMass and the whole Springfield team began finding the range. Sandwiched around three Pagliara free throws were five points for Brad Macomber, and hoops by both Waterman and Clark.

With 5:22 still left to go and the score tied, Ellerbrook hit a big basket for the Redmen and Mathias followed with a free throw to put Springfield down by three. Clark followed with another bomb but Ellerbrook got those two back with a layup.

The team's traded free throws the rest of the way, with UMass making eight of their nine attempts to ice the verdict. Pagliara made a charity toss with 0:17 left in the game, ending the scoring with UMass ahead, 82-76.

The win was especially satisfying since the Redmen were able to beat a talented Springfield quintet even though UMass did not play well.

REDMAN RANTINGS - UMass shot an exceptional 49.2% from the floor. . .However, they managed only 58% from the free throw line. . Erving's floor length passes constantly had the huge crowd on its feet. . .The Redmen committed nineteen turnovers with Erving leading the way with seven. . .The most ironic event of the evening was the Springfield fans calling the UMass fans "bush" after the visitors acted like they'd never seen a girl before and balked everytime a foul was called against the Chiefs. . .

Freshmen Fall to Spfld.

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshmen suffered their eleventh defeat of the season last night at the hands of the Springfield freshmen. The score was 63-60, but don't let the closeness fool you. It is not indicative of the kind of action that took place on the court from six o'clock to seven thirty.

Springfield was a well disciplined ball club and it moved the ball well throughout the game. The Redmen had their usual amount of turnovers and mistakes and only the hot hand of Mike Polakoff and the sour foul shooting of Springfield near the end of the game kept the final score within reason.

The score was 41-26 at the half with Springfield clearly in control of the proceedings on the court. In that first half a Springfield freshman by the name of Kelley Paton scored 21 points. He finished the game with 31 and is definitely a name to remember for the future.

The only bright spots for the UMass freshmen in the first half were the reboundin, of Charlie Peters and the shooting of Polakoff and Chuck Olsen.

Springfield kept their point spread for the first ten mintues of the second half. The Redmen made a bid to come back. The lead swayed back and forth around a ten point margin for Springfield. It was here that UMass began to foul. Springfield kept missing, Polakoff hit for three hoops and a foul shot and there's your margin of victory for Springfield.

Paton received scoring support from Garry St. Jean who had 12 points and Burt Barker who scored 10.

On the other side of the ledger Polakoff lead all Redmen scorers with 21 points. Olsen had 16 points and seven rebounds. And Charlie Peters contributed 10 points and had another fine night on the backboards, hauling down 19 rebounds.

The freshmen travel to Hanover, New Hampshire on Saurday for a three o'clock encounter with the Dartmouth freshmen.

Gymnasts Host Navy Sat.

The UMass varsity gymnasts will face a tough Navy squad Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym. Navy has a 3-3 record so far this season.

The meet should be close as both teams appear to be evenly matched. Last week Navy beat Southern Connecticut, scoring over 157 points, about the same total UMas s produced in its victory over the same owls.

All-around performer Bob Mackey is the big gun for the Midshipmen. Mackay recently scored a 9.4 on side horse against Pittsburgh and has accounted for 13 first places this season. He has yet to be beaten on side horso in league competition.

Other Navy standouts are team Captain Steve Koltz and Darryl Getzlaff. Koltz has taken two first places and Getzloff one this season.

UMass will go basically with the same starting lineup it has used all season. Joe Reed and Norm Vexler will represent UMass in the all-around event.

In the specialist department, Mike Peloquin has earned himself a starting berth on still rings with his performance against Pittsburgh and his scores in recent practice routines.

In the long horse vault, either Bob Henry or Scott Stover will get the nod for the open 5th position. Stover looked impressive as he scored an 8.9 last week against Pitt in this event.

Prior to the varsity meet, the UMass frosh will meet Andover High School at 4:00 p.m.

Sports Notices

All intramural wrestling rosters will be accepted up until 5:00 p.m. today.

A wrestling clinic will be conducted by Head Coach Homer Barr and his squad on Feb. 23 and 24 at 7:30 p.m. in Boyden wrestling room for all intramural wrestlers.

The varsity wrestling team travels to New Hampshire tomorrow for an afternoon match with the Wildcats.

Ski Team Travels to Tyrol

The UMass ski team will be looking to boost it's win-loss ratio to 47-1 as it travels to Tyrol Mountain in Jackson, this weekend. On Saturday, Northeastern will host a slalom and on Sunday Bently will run the Dr. Benjamin Trophy Giant Slalom. The first team to win this race three times will win the trophy permanently. The Redmen have won it once and will be looking for their second win on Sunday.

In Saturday's Slalom UMass will be relying heavily on the talent of two newcomers; John Gray and Jim Latimer. Slalom is their strong event and both skiers should turn out fine performances. By training with the team this past weekend at Haystack where the Redmen received the red carpet treatment and picked up an invaluable amount of experience, Gray and Latimer should have a fine racing weekend. Chuck Walker and Jerry Curran, whose slalom experience showed three week - ends ago at Middlebury, will be needed to ensure a team victory. Walker, an extremely powerful slalom skier has saved many wins for the Redmen. Curran, who gained invaluable racing experience last summer skiing in Oregon, has played an important role this year, helping the team to be on top in the N.E.I.S.C. Twice this year Curran has come through for the team to ensure the win.

Should the team need to use one of the two backup men, John John Gennari or Steve Kurkoski, they will have no problem in winning as both skiers are currently in the top two positions of the B-teams. If co-captains Ted Martin and Jim Garstang continue with their fine performances the Redmen will capture first place.

On Sunday the Redmen will be going after their second win in the Dr. Benjamin trophy race. Should they win this year, next year they will have a chance to bring the trophy home for keeps. It will be a giant slalom which is the team's strong event. Twice this year they stunned the league placing their entire team in the top fifteen,one of those times the Redmen had all six men in the top 11, a performance unequalled by any ski team in UMass or N.E.I.S.C. history.

If the Redmen can keep up their winning ways they will have no trouble in bringing the N.E.I.S.C. trophy back to UMass.

Acclaimed Hebrew Film To Be Shown at Smith

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. - A film starring the lead role actor in the film version of "Fiddler on the Roof" will be shown at Smith College Tuesday (Feb. 24).

The film, "Sallah," produced in Hebrew with English subtitles, features Hayim Topol, one of Israel's leading actors and directors. It will be shown at 8 p.m. in Wright Hall on the Smith campus. The screening is being sponsored by the B'nai Hillel Foundation at Smith and Amherst Colleges, in cooperation with the Northampton Jewish Cultural Center.

The event is open to the public. There will be no admission charge.

Topol will play Sallah, a typical Oriental Jew with a family of seven children suddenly uprooted from a centuries-old civilization and thrust into the 20th century Israli maelstrom. He departs from the plane with family in tow viewing Israeli life with an inherent distrust of bureaucracy.

Instead of the plush future he has visioned, Sallah is sent to a one-room ramshackle house in a Maabara (transit camp). He immediately assumes that "they" - like the "theys" everywhere - are out to get him, and he won't have it. In the end, Sallah wins his new house by adhering to his new philosophy: "You always get what you don't want."

Using this new idea, Sallah leads the people of the transient community in a demonstration against the government's new housing project. This the officials cannot tolerate and they move the whole camp via police, trucks and escorts to their new homes. The wiles of Sallah finally gain him his end and he returns happily to the "work" he knows.

"Sallah" has won a number of awards including two Golden Gate Awards from the San Francisco Film Festival, two Golden Globe Awards as the outstanding foreign film and received an Academy Award nomination as best foreign film.

Former VP Humphrey At Coffee Hour, Tuesday

The campus community will have an opportunity to meet former Vice-President Hubert Humphrey Tuesday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union.

The success of the open coffee hour during Mr. Humphrey's visit to campus last Spring has prompted the organizers of this year's visit to schedule a similar event.

Co-sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program and the Pillsbury Company, Mr. Humphrey will deliver a major address on the subject of foreign policy in Curry Hicks Cage Tuesday night at 8:15.

Mr. Humphrey has been commissioned by the Pillsbury company to deliver a number of lectures at selected Colleges and Universities across the country to commemmorate the Minneapolis firm's 100th anniversary.

As the Pillsbury Centennial scholar, Mr. Humphrey will arrive on campus in late afternoon with his wife Murial, attend the open coffee hour, a press conference, dinner with students and faculty and deliver the lecture.

Undergraduates have been especially urged by the lecture committee to take advantage of the open coffee hour to meet Mr. Humphrey.

Trustees Meet in Boston Students to Protest

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

Two Senate-financed busses will today transport a student delegation to the Board of Trustees meeting in Boston to protest the continued lack of meaningful student involvement in institutional decision-making, specifically the rent hike, the appointment of an Amherst Chancellor, and the selection process for a new President.

The Senate last Wednesday financed the busses on a close voice vote despite reservations voiced by Senate President Cynthia J. Olken about the effectiveness of the tactic.

Of the three specific issues with which the protest deals, the Board is slated to take up only the appointment of a Chancellor. Speculation is widespread that the Board will name Provost Oswald Tippo to that post, despite objections to be voiced by a five-member student delegation headed by Senate President Olken and Vice-President Glenn Elters. President Olken has expressed her intent to publicly record her vote in opposition to the Tippo appointment.

The demonstrators are expected to be admitted only to the afternoon meeting of the Board, which is public; the morning and luncheon meetings are executive (closed) sessions.

A manifestation of the growing student concern about and awareness of the lack of student influence, the series of protests culminated last Thursday in a massive peaceful demonstration featuring a march to Whitmore and a teach-in in the Ballroom. Leaders of the protest, most prominently Senate Public Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine, have consistently tried with some success to link student dissatisfaction with the rent hike with more fundamental issues of the place of the student in institutional governance. The most frequently offered solution to the current state of student impotence has been the suggestion that a University Senate be created, and be given by the Board of Trustees final say over certain matters.

The Army Doesn't Like GI's Who Don't Dig the Army

WASHINGTON (CPS) - Back when Eugene McCarthy was upsetting the political apple cart, things started getting together. July 1968. It seemed like Mc Carthy's "Keep Clean for Gene" campaign would come to nothing, but Republicans and Democrats, McCarthy-ites, Student Mobilization people, housewives and even a few generals were beginning to join the popular anti-Vietnam movement.

That's when GI's started making their feelings known. The first two antiwar GI papers appeared - one at Fort Knox in Kentucky and one at Fort Hood in Texas.

GI's needed papers that talked their language and the Army right away seemed to see the new phenomenon as insubordination if not downright subversion.

The "authorized" military press had been - and still is - doing things like listing bronze star recipients. In Green Beret, an "authorized monthly publication for personnel of the 5th special forces group," Colonel Michael D. Healy writes to the men, "Your sensitivity to human suffering and the yearnings of our fellow man is well known and magnificantly reflected in your outstanding accomplishments in the service of our nation and others less fortunate than ourselves.

"Your dedication and sacrifice in furthering the cause of 'De Opresso Liber' defies description and cannot be materially equated. As is that gift of liberty you so strongly desire to help all men achieve, your contribution in this noble cause has been priceless."

Green Beret is one kind of reality. Most GI's aren't Green Berets. Most GI's think getting out of Vietnam is more of an "accomplishment" to liberty than is being a Green Beret.

Newspapers are good at least for editorializing and advertising. The GI underground press doesn't go around jiving about things like 'De Opresso Liber,' but all GI editors talk about Vietnam, most talk about the military, some talk about how American society fits together. A few even get into how the world fits into American society.

In the GI underground press, what is editorialized about is also advertised about. Some print ads for the American Servicemen's Union. GI's know newspapers and publicity are probably the best weapons they have.

In the case of eight antiwar Ft. Jackson soldiers, for example, officers finally gave up on court martial charges and issued discharges for the men. The eight GI's attributed their victory to having their own paper to tell "The GI's side of things."

"Everyone knows whose side the Army Times or the Stars and Stripes tells," they said. "The guys at Jackson realize that they can't depend on these papers to tell the truth about their case. Also, a GI newspaper keeps guys informed about what's going on in other parts of the post." For the Fort Jackson 8, publicity was the ultimate weapon. "Without publicity there is no way the story of the GI struggle can reach civilians and other GI's. Publicity is especially important in defending yourself against the vicious attacks of the brass."

Educational Scholarship

The Rotary Club of Amherst will conduct interviews with candidates for a Rotary Foundation Fellowship toward the end of February. The award will be given for graduate study abroad (in any field) to begin in the fall of 1971. The Fellowships provide for one academic year of support. It covers the cost of round-trip transportation between the awardee's home and place of study, registration, tuition, laboratory and other school fees, necessary books and educational supplies, meals and lodging, incidental living costs, limited educational travel during the study year, and, in some instances, intensive language training in the country of study prior to the beginning of the academic year.

Candidates from Amherst must be single, somewhere between 20 and 28 years old as of July 1, 1971, and must have a permanent residence in Amherst OR BE ATTENDING SCHOOL IN AMHERST.

Those interested in applying may obtain detailed information and forms from any member of the Rotary Foundation Committee: Kenneth Cuddeback, Minot Grose, Edgar Lindsey, Glen Shaw, Alfred Southworth.

Events of the past few weeks suggest that communication among students, faculty and administration is less than perfect. In an effort to exchange ideas in groups of reasonable size we suggest that individual dormitories and individual departments invite specific administrators to meet with them to discuss matters of mutual concern. The Provost's Office for one will make every effort to meet such requests.

The Nation and The World

Nixon's Volunteer Army Not Possible by Mid '71

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Sen. John Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, agreed yesterday an all-volunteer army would not be possible by the July 1, 1971 date suggested by a presidential commission.

"I don't think it's possible at all," said Stennis, a Mississippi Democrat. "In the longer years ahead, it certainly is desirable."

Stennis, appearing on the CBS TV program "Face the Nation," noted "we're in war and we have other uncertainities, and I don't believe it can be worked out or used for several years to come."

Laird also said that the speed with which the fighting in Vietnam could be turned over to the South Vietnamese would play a large part in the timing of a volunteer army service.

He said congressional action would be necessary, especially to increase the budget to pay servicemen enough to attract volunteers. A lowering of current manpower requirement - projections would also be needed, he said.

Laird appeared on NBC TV's "Meet the Press."

He pointed out that the commission's recommendation was based on a projection of 2.5 million men in the armed services in July 1971, whereas the Pentagon's projection was for 2.9 million.

"I don't want to set any date," he said but recalled that "volunteerism" was the Nixon administration's goal.

Laird said that the process of Vietnamization was going faster that had been expected and that, as regards North Vietnam, "instead of the threat going up, the threat is going down." That threat, he said, "is less than it was nine months ago."

Turning to the situation in neighboring Laos, Laird denied that B-52 bombers had flown close support missions to aid Laotian troops battling North Vietnamese on the Plain of Jars. "It wouldn't be technically possible," he said.

Laird said there had been no American ground troops in Laos since 1962 and "our involvement in Laos is tied in with the safety and security of American forces in Vietnam."

He said that the United States was "using air power in Laos to interdict support in connection with the war in Vietnam."

Weinglass Hits Hoffman Chides Crime Rate Theory

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) - Leonard I. Weinglass, one of the two defense attorneys in the Chicago 7 conspiracy trial, said yesterday night that some judges feel "it is their job to put away criminals rather than to try cases."

Weinglass said Judge Julius J. Hoffman had made it clear he had "his own theories about how to stop the increasing crime rate... that is to clamp down on defense counsels."

Weinglass was found guilty of 14 counts of contempt of court during the 20 week trial. He was sentenced to one year, eight months and 13 days in jail by Hoffman.

Weinglass, who spoke to news men at Pittsfield Airport prior to a speaking engagement at Williams College, said much of what happened in the courtroom was provoked by Judge Hoffman.

Weinglass said he did not believe "anarchism" should be permitted in the courtroom and added that such occurrences in the Chicago court were "grossly exaggerated."

For example, he said, defendants were cited for such things as laughing and on the "four occasions out of 400" when they failed to stand as the judge entered or left the room.

In his own case, he said, all 14 contempt citations stemmed from attempts to introduce "pieces of evidence during the trial."

Weinglass further charged that the jury was picked in less than three hours, and the defense had no chance to question the jurors.

Nixon to Ask for New ABM Sites

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration is expected to ask Congress this week to approve two new Safeguard defense missile sites in Missouri and Wyoming, informed congressional sources said Sunday.

The sources said the program to be outlined Tuesday by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird will stress protection of the U.S. strategic deterrent by providing antiballistic missiles-ABM- for Whitemore Air Force Base, Md., and Warren Air Force Base, Wyo.

Both are sites for offensive Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles-ICBMs-as are the two sites approved last year, Grand Forks Air Force Base, N.D., and Malmstrom Air Force Base, Mont.

While President Nixon indicated at his Jan. 30 news conference a desire to proceed with other ABM sites including those designed to provide for defense of cities, sources indicated any request in this area might be limited to site acquisition.

The minuteman site protection is basically a defense against a Soviet missile attack, while area defense is designed more in case of an accidental launch or a Red Chinese attack.

By confining the request to the two new ICBM sites, the administration is trying to fight this year's ABM battle along the same lines as 1969 when the program cleared the Senate on the 50 50 defeat of a move to limit it to research.

ABM opponents are known to feel they can score points against any shift in rationale that would stress the need for area defense against the Chinese. This was the approach used two years ago by the Johnson administration in seeking approval of the Sentinel ABM- the system scrapped by the Nixon administration for Safe guard.

But Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., signaled the line of attack opponents will take against extension of the system to the two additional ICBM bases when he noted recently that even Pentagon scientists now doubt the Safeguard as presently envisoned, can defend ICBM bases.

Laird indicated that the Pentagon plans stepped up research on ABM radars, an area many experts cited last year as one of the weakest aspects of the Safeguard system.

At the same time, he hinted at the possibility of expansion of the Safeguard system, which in addition to the four ICBM bases is envisioned as eventually including eight other continental sites, including one covering Washington, D.C., with possibly Alaska and Hawaii sites.

"If the current Soviet buildup continues," Laird said, "we will need additional costly steps to preserve an effective deterrent."

And at another point, the secretary said "it must be recognized that the threat could actually turn out to be considerably larger than the Safeguard defense is designed to handle."

Julius Student: Tell me O great oracle, what say you today?

More-Wit: I will return your dreamhouse to you next year if you place your biggest tooth under the pillow and sign on the dotted line. You know how privileged one can be if he plays ball with me.

Julius Student: And this campus is improving . . . is it not? You know these dreamhouses that me and my comrades live in should be good, seeing that between them and the great meeting house you are building for us in the center of campus, the paths are so unappetizing and oh so raunchy. I worked hard all summer for my pesos. I can hardly afford this increase but tell me - - will I get my money's worth?

More-Wit: Si senor . . . but seeing as your peso is so devalued and due to extra operating costs beyond our powers to control, we will have to increase our sustenance. We need more daily break to keep our lawns clean and beautiful around the impressive structure, our administrative center . . . surely you want to take pride in your campus . . . surely you will pay the extra park fee and keep off the grass . . . surely you will give us your best efforts . . . and we shall give you full rights to our continued blessings!

Julius: What is this all about?

More-Wit: An increase . . . you will be happy once you have gotten it out of the way. Just one lump sum for a half a year will do the trick. Take either one from column a, column b, or column c . . . give it to us and we will take care of your needs.

Julius: Which are?

More-Wit: Keep your present room for next year and . . .

Julius: That's no bargain!

More-Wit: You should be happy we are not thinking of tripling you up like last year . . . now if you will kindly accept our proposals we can move on to other improvements.

Julius: You ain't gonna get my fat tooth, good fairy! I worked hard all summer and . . .

More-Wit: (muttering under his breath) ungrateful wretch! . . . Here, take a few rubles back . . . and you should be thankful you have gotten this far.

Julius: I'll speak to my congressman about this. I'll go to Washington if I have to!

More-Wit: Don't get yourself stabbed young fella!

Student representative Julius Student makes the trudge home through the sleet and the snow, and the mud. More-Wit continues printing up leaflets and catalogues with pictures of serenity coined for future Julliuses all over the state . . . pictures taken years ago when the scenery was simple and the stage was silent.

Apathy

Whoever thought I'd lose a little faith in people while standing in the doorway of Franklin Dining Commons? I found out that there are some people who just refuse to get involved, who refuse to care, who refuse to take a little time out just to read something which affects not only themselves, but a whole college campus. It is quite sad when there are leaflets being passed out regarding the rent increase and the march on Whitmore and one hears comments like "I don't give a shit about that," or "I'm graduating this June anyway, so what does it matter?" Just because it doesn't affect him, it is considered meaningless and worthless. All that was being asked of anyone was merely to read something. They weren't being asked for any money, nor for work, nor for any great length of time, except a few seconds to read the flyer and then decide what their actions, if any, would be. It is bad enought not to care about what is happening on the UMass campus--but to refuse to even read something is to me, appalling. My feelings turned from puzzlement to anger when, walking up the ramps of the Dining Commons, I saw the papers scattered all over. These flyers took a great amount of people's time and effort.

One may look at it a little humorously, though. It is kind of funny in a way to see the people come slowly down the stairs looking a little embarrassed and quite doubtful as to how he should tactfully get rid of you and the flyers. Should he walk quickly by and mutter, "Already got one." Or should he saunter past you, head averted, and mumble, "Never mind." Or perhaps he should stuff his hands in his pockets, and head down, stammer, "Uh-huh." There are various ways of dealing with the situation. Take your choice.

At the end of an hour and a half, my feelings were mixed. But what really clinched them were the words, "They get you coming in, and they get you going out. You can't get away from them!"

If this isn't apathy, then what is?

As I See It: Chancellorship

As I See It: The Chancellorship

In an action fraught with serious consequences for every member of the University community, the Board of Trustees at its meeting today in Boston is widely expected to name Provost Oswald Tippo to the newly-created post of Chancellor for the Amherst campus, over the objections of the student delegation, which will convey to the Board the Student Senate's stand in favor of a temporary appointment pending a student-faculty search, which would assess in depth the qualifications of Dr. Tippo, and compare them with those of other available candidates. It would appear that the Board is prepared to reject this eminently reasonable process in favor of naming, in the words of Senate Vice-President Glenn Elters, the "most convenient candidate", Dr. Tippo.

Following the Senate's first articulation of its Chancellorship stand, Board Chairman Healy arranged a meeting between Dr. Tippo and the Senate Executive Committee, in the apparent hope that the basis for discussion could be transferred from the principle of a community search to the question of Dr. Tippo, yes or no.

The Executive Committee heard Dr. Tippo for over an hour, failed to be overcome with a burning desire to see Tippo Chancellor, refused to be diverted from the previously-endorsed principle, and voted unanimously to recommend to the Senate that it reaffirm its stand, which the Senate later that night did. It now appears that the Senate's attempt to procure a meaningful student role in this vitally-important appointment will come to naught, as the Board once again demonstrates its fundamental inability to grasp what it is students are talking about.

The Senate's impotence in this matter is symptomatic of a deeper malaise, infecting the governance of this institution, which allows the Board to override at will and with impunity the "recommendations" reaching it. In the ballroom Dr. Tippo pointed with pride to the various advisory means through which students are to be or had been "consulted" in the matters of the rent situation (Lederle's new Co-Ordinating Committee on Rents and Fees), and Presidential selection. One wonders whether Dr. Tippo fully comprehends the sheer inadequacy of the advisory approach, to which administrators have been pointing with pride for some years. In any case, the Provost received an immediate, direct and compelling reply from the next speaker, Senate Vice-President Glenn Elters (who refused an appointment to Lederle's rent committee): "Since 1863 students on this campus have had an advisory role. We want, we deserve, and we will have more than this. The whole philosophy of a Board of Trustees is out of date. Whom does the administration take orders from? It should not be the Board, but the students and faculty in some sort of union. History is passing us by. We are at least three years behind. The answer is some kind of University Senate that directs the administration. This is the only way that this institution is going to change, the only way that we are going to humanize this institution."

Passing later in his speech to the Chancellorship appointment, Mr. Elters, noting the virtual nonexistence of student participation in the appointment process, stated: "I have the highest regard for Provost Tippo. I think he'd make a fine acting Chancellor. He might even make a fine permanent Chancellor. I don't know at this time. The mechanics of the appointment process force me into not being able to support a permanent appointment at this time."

We might do well to investigate those factors which militate toward the appointment of Dr. Tippo at this time. Perhaps the most compelling, though least publicly discussed, reason is the fear that if Dr. Tippo does not receive a permanent appointment at this time, he will resign. The Provost has certainly done nothing to discourage this rumor. The threat of resignation is nonetheless difficult if not impossible to counter. I would say only this: given the Provost's unquestionable commitment to this institution, given his continued good prospects for the permanent appointment if he accepts the acting post, Dr. Tippo would be foolish indeed if he cast away his chances by resignation. And Dr. Tippo is not a foolish man.

Another factor supporting a permanent appointment at this time is the Board's perception of a pressing need for administrative reorganization, for a clarifying of the lines of authority. Dr. Tippo at the Senate Exec Committee meeting spoke of a number of Vice-Chancellors - for Academic, Fiscal, and Student affairs - as the likely shape that such a reorganization would take. The Board allegedly holds the belief that only a permanent Chancellor would have the authority to undertake such a reorganization. One must approach this contention with considerable caution. The questions that come immediately to mind are: if the need for reorganization is indeed so compelling, as it undoubtedly is; if such reorganization were to receive the vigorous support of the Student and Faculty Senates, as is reasonable to expect; if the workload of Chancellor is such an overwhelming burden, as it unquestionably is; and above all the appointment of such sub-officers is implied in the Trustee job description of the Chancellor, as it is, then would not all of these factors compel such a reorganization regardless of the status of the person who is Chancellor? I think they would, and further believe that reorganization as an argument for a permanent appointment at this time is at best mistaken, at worst a fabrication.

Regardless, it is infinitely more important that whoever is appointed Chancellor have in advance of his appointment the faith, support, and confidence of the entire community, not simply a portion thereof. If Dr. Tippo is in fact appointed today, that is precisely what he will lack, to his detriment and the detriment of the University community.

Turning from the largely procedural but nonetheless vital question with which this column has been concerned, to the substantive question, that is, is Dr. Oswald Tippo qualified by his beliefs and his abilities to be Chancellor, I should like to, here, clear away the doubts and conjectures regarding my personal position by saying this: I have no doubt but that Dr. Tippo would assist this University generally in the direction that it ought to go. Whether he has sufficient vision and foresight to help bring this University as far as it must go in the immediate future, is quite another question, a question which this columnist is not prepared to answer in the affirmative, a question which must attend for its answer upon the kind of in-depth comparative examination which only a student-faculty search committee can provide.

Soph Frustration

To the Editor:

In Feb. 13's Collegian, page 13, there appeared an announcement which read, "Important Exec Council Meeting '72, Class Reorganization and Future Events to be Discussed. Also, Class Officer Elections. All Members Must Attend. . .Tues. Feb. 17, 1970 at 8:00 p.m. in S.U. Commonwealth Room." As members of the Council, six of us from James House trudged up to the Union on Tuesday night to attend this meeting, only to discover, to our dismay, that the meeting was on Wednesday night. In Wednesday's Collegian we read the new notice - "Class of '72. . .Meeting at 9 p.m., Commonwealth Room. ." So Wednesday night we trudged back to the Union; on our way to the Commonwealth Room, we noticed one of our officers walking in the opposite direction - to the Berkshire Room; so we followed him there, and THERE found the meeting being assembled - didn't he want anyone to show up for the meeting???

At any rate, the outcome of the meeting was startling! "All members must attend" read the announcement - 27 members out of 148 showed up! Isn't there something wrong when only 18% of the members go to an "important" meeting? We'd say so!

Good old Fred started the meeting by giving a proper eulogy on former President Ernie Lepore's resignation - a real tearjerker! Needless to say and in accordance with our expectations, he also added a few words of self-pity for himself, crying about the pressures of being both class officer and student - if the pressure is so strong, then why doesn't he give up one role and play the other role full-time? He then asked for a vote to establish Steve Driscoll as our new President - what a fine show Steve put on for us - he sat back on his laurels and let Fred do almost all the talking! That's our President?????

Further on in the meeting, after the elections of two new officers, we came to more important issues and we were all quite shocked to hear about this: how many of you sophomores are aware that our class has a deficit of almost $15,000, and because of this we probably won't have a sophomore banquet? All because of one concert - the James Brown farce of S.E.N.D.O.F.F. Weekend. O.K. - we can't really blame the officers for a flop concert - Brown himself was largely at fault here. But how can an officer, a representative of the whole class, have been, in his own word, "taken" for over $1000, by his own stupidity - he gave the Woodrose Ballroom's "manager" or whatever he was - the man's role was not made too clear - $1000 too much; - Fred's explanation was really very ambiguous. Then he went on to say that there were only about 1500 people in attendance at the Brown concert. But he had also mentioned that "we gave away more tickets than were bought." This would mean that over 750 tickets were GIVEN AWAY FOR NOTHING????? And then he wonders at the severe loss of the concert??? Plus the fact that at the Brown concert one of the officers was overheard asking one of the ticket takers to slip her some tickets for some of her friends (the beauty's request, however, was refused).

We don't think that we need say anything more about the loss at this concert - nor about our class "officers" - our representatives - our honest (?) leaders. . . But we would like some comments from other members of our class who are of the opinion that the class is not being run as it should be - and, how can we change it?

Some of My Best Friends . . .

To the editor:

I constantly ask myself "am I prejudiced?", and until now, the answer has always been "no". I was brought up well. I was never taught to hate people because of their color or creed. I learned throught my parents, teachers, and friends, to respect people for what they are.

I've never been in any direct contact with my white brothers of the South. But if they are what they have been shown to be, then I can hate them as much as any black person, but for a different reason. I can hate them, because they have apparently ruined any chance I might have had to show that I am not prejudiced. I know white constantly stereotype blacks but I don't think that that is as common as blacks stereotyping whites.

I haven't gone out of my way to befriend any black people. But I have never been given reason to dislike them. If I thought I could influence thousands of prejudiced people, I would try. I haven't seen any cases of displayed prejudice on campus, I haven't SEEN any. I'm sure there's more than a handful of prejudiced people here, but I think a large majority of the people on campus have been brought up as I have.

If you want my help in trying to change prejudiced people, I will gladly give it. But I cannot like anyone who hates me simply because I'm stereotyped as being a white bigot.

So go ahead, soul brothers, Sit in that library at Amherst. While you're there, do a bit of reading. Learn how to reason with people, you've learned how to hate them so well.

History's Bunk—Sometimes

To the editor:

I would like to express my dissatisfaction with the present methods employed by some departments in granting tenure to professors at this university. It seems that the criterion used to judge the worth of a professor include almost everything about him except his ability to teach, and to inspire students toward original and creative thought. It seems to me that if the primary function of a university is toward educating its students, a professor should be judged mainly by his ability to educate, and not on other grounds which have no effect on his interaction with his classes.

Dr. Gruman, of the History department, is one professor who is quite effective in educating students toward original thought. His classes confirm his ability in this respect. He has been denied tenure due to what appears to be departmental politics, and this decision is being brought to question before the Tenure and Grievance Committee. The decision reached by this committee should take into account the interests of the students seeking an education at this university, and should transcend the petty politics of the History department.

Cooperation, Not Paranoia

To the editor:

The alienation that many students faculty members, and administrators feel is due to the lack of community at UMass. "Community" implies a certain trust and cooperation between the members in decision-making that effects the group. This participation is enhanced by communication between all members of the community. Clearly, we are not a community, for important decisions effecting the future of the university are made without any participation by students (room rents and the selection of our chancellor are only two examples). Because students do not find out about decisions until after they become policy, because there is no communication beforehand, there can be no trust between students and administrators. We need to have concrete structures established that will guarantee the right of students to join in decision-making and goal formation from the outset.

Faculty members also suffer from the lack of participatory democracy at UMass. The Faculty has only one member on the Board of Trustees, and he can't vote. Moreover, decisions regarding tenure are often made arbitrarily; Dr. Gerald Gruman's appeal for tenure to the Tenure and Grievance Committee is a case in point. Dr. Gruman feels that he has been arbitrarily denied tenure by the History department because he has called for reforms within the department. These reforms would have allowed more participation by students and younger faculty members. Dr. Gruman does not lecture, because he feels this to be authoritarian; instead, he encourages class discussion. The reasons for the denial of his tenure have never been given.

All members of this shaky community suffer from the arbitrariness of crisis decision making. Even good administrators over in the Fort cannot be trusted when they exercise power arbitrarily. Let us learn from the the mistakes of Columbia and Berkeley! Let cooperation and communication replace confrontation!

Kudos to Construction

To the editor:

Now that the end of winter approaches, and the salt, snow, and traffic have obliterated the land markings on local highways, I believe the time is at hand to congratulate the intrepid group of individuals responsible for the design and construction of the signal-governed intersection near the Newman Center.

This modern day wonder, apparently designed by a frustrated cost accountant, must surely represent an all time low in the questionable art of highway construction in the Commonwealth.

The unmarked northbound merge land provides constant amusement for pedestrians and motorists alike as the yield sign only a hundred feet beyond the light backs up traffic through the intersection, and southbound motorists, many apparently unaware of the existence of the unmarked northbound land, deftly avoid pedestrians and hill traffic approaching from the left in order to place themselves squarely in the paths of the merging traffic.

Certainly the completion of this intersection must rival in significance such high points in Massachusetts highway history as the mass slaughter of motorists on route 140 and the patenting of the frost heave by the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority.

Of even greater significance than the achievement of a place for this intersection in Massachusetts highway history is the sound knowledge that nothing will be done about this masterpiece until somebody of importance is killed there.

FINE ARTS

James Taylor Lacked "a whole lot of soul"

In our age of musical drugs, when Tim Hardin is beer, Pete Seeger, vintage wine, James Taylor, aspirin, and Judy Collins, grass, ODETTA is a refreshingly, mind-blowing tab of acid. It is unfortunate that the numbers of people who were afforded a trip at her Fine Arts Council concert at Bowker Auditorium last Saturday were relatively small.

It's hard to criticize near perfection. Odetta hypnotized. She played with the audience, yet rarely lost them. She chided them, yet loved them. Odett'a sing-alongs could have been trite, but she taught her audience to look at old standards with a new vision. "This land BELONGS to you and me", she explained about America's next national anthem. "only the arrogant say that is was MADE for you and me." "Home on the Range" was an exciting harmony of soul and tradition. Only music itself can describe her voice and simple, yet transporting, guitar accompaniment for "The Sound of the Sea."

There are some songs that can be sung only by one special person. Only Nina Simone can sing "Suzanne", only Melanie can interpret "Mr. Tambourine Man" only Linda Brown can feel "I Shall Be Released". Singing a capella, Odetta immortalized a "Strawberry Fields Forever" that neither the Beatles or Richie Havens can surpass. For an encore, Odetta sang "Hey Jude". The Bowker Auditorium audience could not come down.

Odetta cannot be found on Top 40 radio; she is too sophisticated and demanding for that conglomeration of trash and hope. It is to the credit of the Fine Arts Council that it does not hire performers on the basis of gold records or fleeting popularity. It is to the shame of the various class concert committees that it does not recognize the Odettas of this world.

Indescribably Odetta

"There are a lot of groups", James Taylor said, "with a l-" ... noise, but not a whole lot of soul." Unfortunately, this was much of the problem at the Mt. Holyoke concert last Friday.

James Taylor is the most prominent male folk singer to develop since Arlo Guthrie in 1967. He is an entertaining performer, considerate to his audience (unlike Tim Hardin). His comedy bits are amusing, his love songs moody, his ballads interesting, his blues adequate, James Taylor is a content man. He's happy with himself and the world, cautioning that everything will be alright in the Seventies if no one makes a sudden move. But personal contentment and musical solidness do not make a great performer.

On stage, James Taylor was incapable of feeling anything that came close to sorrow or conflict. "Yesterday" was sung in the style of Andy Williams. Taylor could not make up his mind about "Little Help From My Friends", and so imitated Jose Feliciano. "Free" by Joni Mitchell sounded discordant and rough. Because Taylor was so monotonous, I found myself spending most of the evening wondering how long the people sitting on the railing of the balcony could sit there before they fell off.

There were a few songs, however, that gave the evening some merit. Taylor sang an innovative arrangement of "O, Suzanna". His hit song, "Caronina on my Mind" was excellent as was an encore, "Isn't It Nice To Be Home Again." His comedy songs, the "Coke commercial", "I'm A Steamroller" (pick it, Jim), and Tea-rose Snuff" are equal to those of John Hartford.

On the whole, James Taylor is a soothing, somnolescent performer. He has achieved prominence because (1) The Beatles and Apple Records discovered him, and (2) He is one of the few professional purist folk singers in a time of folk-rock and country-folk. The tragedy of the last five years and of the coming decade is that James Taylor alone has been recognized, while Len Chandler, Happy and Artie Traum, Jerry Jeff Walker, and even Bernie Kapland and Rich Iacovelli are ignored. I do hope that James Taylor prospers and keeps alive a pure folk music; I hope he does so without pretension, without gimmicks, and with a lot of soul.

Fr. Hockey Team Tips Brown, 5-4

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

PROVIDENCE, R.I. - Pat Keenan's tip-in of Bob Shilalie's long shot from the right point at 19:36 of the final period gave the UMass frosh icemen a heart-stopping 5-4 victory over the Brown University frosh Saturday afternoon at beautiful Meehan Auditorium. The Little Redmen now stand 7-3 on the year while Brown falls to 7-6-1.

This game was a see-saw affair in which the depth-shy Little Redmen were just able to outlast the deeper Cubs. Frosh coach William Richards could muster only enough manpower to send out two lines and three defensemen. As the score indicates, however, UMass showed enough mettle to emerge with a highly satisfactory victory over its Ivy League rivals.

UMass jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead at the end of the initial period. Paul Whitney started the festivities at 5:39 scoring on Keenan's rebound, the other assist to Don Lowe. Bob Shea lit the lamp at 10:43 with a six footer into the open corner, assists to Keenan and Dick Anderson.

In the period, UMass goalie John Kiah made several fine saves on plays which could well have knotted the score.

The Little Redmen extended their lead to 3-0 on Whitney's second goal. He scored at 6:59 of the second period on a breakaway after taking a pass from Shea.

UMass showed some good backchecking in the period, which prevented the Cubs from taking advantage of several potentially dangerous situations. After two periods, Kiah had 15 saves to Brown goalie Floyd Jaros' 12.

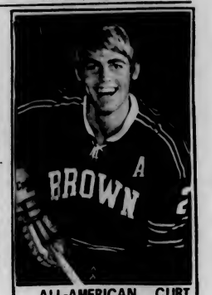
The third period was a real humdinger as suddenly fired-up Brown came out flying, to score four goals on the fatigued Little Redmen who needed two markers in the last six minutes to do the job.

Forechecking well, Brown came up with two quickies during the fourth minute of the period. At 3:29 John Brieg banged in Don McLane's slow center pass into the right corner. Twelve seconds later, at 3:41, Pete Menard scored off a scramble, assists to Dick Lay and Ray Tierman.

Mike Powers, who has the makings of an outstanding college player, tied it up for Brown at 10:26. The goal came on a rink length rush along the left side which set up a shot into the right corner.

Don Riley put UMass ahead temporarily with a power play goal at 14:35 which found its way between Jaros and the post. Brown came back at 17:15 in its bid for the tie as Lanny Chapman ripped a backhander into the right corner after taking a pass from Mike Cunning.

Then came Keenan's goal on the power play, assists to Shilalie and Riley, with only 24 seconds left.



ALL-AMERICAN CURT BENNETT - Saturday the varsity hockey team faced this star and his Brown University teammates, but came out on the short end of a 5-2 decision. The Redmen, however, showed great desire and hustle. The complete story is on page 12.

UCLA Loses 3rd in 116 Hoop Tilts

(AP) - Oregon stepped into exclusive company by upending top ranked UCLA Saturday night, but at the same time have made it more difficult for any other team to join them this season.

"The pressure is off us now," commented John Wooden, the UCLA coach, after Oregon had snapped his Bruins' 25-game winning streak with a convincing 78-65 victory, the worst defeat suffered by UCLA in four years.

"Our remaining opponents are talented enough so that the least sign of complacency could prove disasterous," added Wooden, indicating that maybe a loss now might keep his Bruins, 21-1, from taking too much for granted in their bid for an unprecedented fourth straight national collegiate basketball championship.

Rusy Blair, a 6 foot 8 sophomore, supplied the fireworks for the Ducks at Eugene, Ore., as they became only the third team to beat UCLA in 116 games and the first to do it decisively since Duke walloped the Bruins 94-75 in 1946.

UCLA didn't win the NCAA title that 1966 season, before running off three in a row under Lew Alcindor. The loss to Oregon was its first without Alcindor as the Ducks joined Houston and Southern California as the only teams to beat the Bruins since 1967. Houston won 71-69 and Southern Cal won 46-44.

Blair scored 19 points, same as teammate Stan Love, but 17 of Blair's points came in the second half as the Ducks thwarted an UCLA rally similar to those earlier this season that pulled out one or two-point victories over Minnesota, Princeton, Oregon State and Washington State. This rally, however, fell short.

"They whipped us on offense and defense," Wooden said. The victory was Oregon's eighth straight and moved the Ducks within two games of the Bruins in the Pacific 8 Conference with four games left.

We've never announced a car at this time before. But then nobody's ever announced a car like this before.

Super Hugger

If it were an ordinary sportster, we'd have introduced it at the ordinary time.

Instead, we took the time to build a whole new Camaro.

We started with a sleek new shape and a low road-hugging stance.

And added more hood. A faster fastback. Wider doors. And new deeply contoured bucket seats.

The instrument panel wraps around you. With enough dials to make you think you're piloting a 747.

There are four transmissions. And six power plants up to the Turbo-Jet 396 V8 that you can order.

Pick the one that best suits your driving. Then go pick on an open road.

And make it one with plenty of twisting turns. Because Camaro has a remarkable new suspension. And standard front disc brakes for a leech-like grip on the road.

New Camaro. The Super Hugger.

Other sportsters always feared it might come to this.

And they were right. Only their timing was wrong.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

Redmen Gymnasts Topple Navy, 159.65-157.00, for Great Win

Scoring their most impressive victory of the season, the UMass varsity gymnasts downed Navy 159.65-157.00. UMass, led by all-around men Joe Reed and Norm Vexler, captured five of the six first places in bringing their seasons' record to 5-1.

Reed had his best night so far, winning two first places, tying for another, besides taking a second and tying for a third. Joe, competing in the last home meet of his career, scored 52.75 all-around points to finish second behind Bob Mackey of Navy who scored 53.05. Reed had three scores of 9.0 or better, an 8.95 in floor exercise and an 8.6 on high bar.

In floor exercise, UMass jumped to a 26.65-26.10 lead as Reed came through with an excellent 8.95 performance to capture 1st. place. The second spot was a deadlock between Tony Vacca and Navy's Bob Mackey at 8.9. Mike Kasavana was UMass' third highest scorer with an 8.8.

The side horse event saw UMass' slim lead vanish as the Redmen dropped behind, 52.55-52.45. Vexler, who also enjoyed his best night in the all-around event with 51.40 points, placed second with a 9.0.. Pete Haring was first and John Worthington third for Navy with scores of 9.05 and 8.85, respectively.

Vexler became the first opponent to outscore Navy's Bob Mackey on side horse in league competition this season. Mackey suffered a major break near the end of his routine and scored an 8.55.

UMass evened the meet score in the still rings event by outscoring Navy 26.70 to 26.60. Reed notched his second first place of the meet scoring a 9.15. Fred Klein was second for Navy with an 8.95 edging out UMass' Vexler at 8.9. Mike Peloquin was the third highest scorer for the Redmen with an 8.65.

The second half of the meet saw UMass take the lead and increase it in every event.

Vacca and Reed came through with brilliant 9.2s in the long horse vault to tie for 1st. place. Mackey of Navy took third with a 9.1. Steve Cary padded UMass' point production in the event with a 9.0. In this event the Redmen outscored Navy 27.40 to 26.40 to take a commanding one-point lead in the meet.

UMass further increased its lead in the parallel bars event as Cary placed 1st. with a 9.2. Cary's effort, his best on parallel-bars this season, edged out teammate Reed, who took second for the Redmen with a 9.0. Mackey placed third for Navy with an 8.9. Sophomore Vacca was UMass' third highest scorer with an 8.7.

On horizontal bar, the Redmen had problems with a number of major breaks. However, Tom Mysticki, who scored a 9.0 against Penn State, repeated the accomplishment to win the event. His effort left Navy's Mackey two-tenths of a point behind in second place. The third spot was a tie between UMass' Scott Stover and Reed at 8.6. On high bar, the Redmen outscored Navy, 26.20 - 25.40, to bring the final score to 159.65-157.00.

JOE REED
"His best night so far..."

The victory is of particular importance to the Redmen in that the outcome could have gone either way. To defeat Navy, UMass needed a strong team effort and that is exactly what the Redmen gymnasts put forth. It is interesting to note that UMass had eight scores of 9.0 or better in the meet besides their highest point production of the season, 159.65.

The Redmen are now preparing for an equally important meet against undefeated Springfield College next Tuesday. The outcome of the meet will be instrumental in determining the League Champion as a Redmen victory would give both UMass and Springfield identical records with one meet remaining for the Redmen. Meet time will be 8:00 p.m. at the Springfield College field house.

The UMass freshman gymnasts remained undefeated and brought their season's record to 5-0 as they toppled Andover High School, 123.25-107.40.

The Little Redmen took all six first places in the meet despite the fact that they operated without the services of all-around performer Dan Spier, who is out with a broken finger.

Steve Scuderi led the frosh with first places on high bar and parallel bars. Al Mancini was first in the long horse vault with an 8.8. Jay Aronstein won the still rings event with an 8.55 and John Berner floor exercise with an 8.15. Steve Nelson captured 1st. place honors on side horse with a 6.8.

The Little Redmen meet the Springfield College frosh Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in Springfield.

Fr. Pucksters Bop Deerfield

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

DEERFIELD - Don Riley scored the winning goal at 10:35 of the third period here last Wednesday night as the UMass freshman hockey team overcame a tough Deerfield six, 5-3.

The goal came on passes from Dave Branche and Don Lowe with the Little Redmen on a powerplay.

UMass constantly seemed on the verge of breaking the contest wide open, but each time Deerfield came storming back to make it an extremely tough affair.

After the first two periods had elapsed, the game was tied at 3-3. UMass goals came off the sticks of Pat Keenan, Rich Ryley and Bob Shilalia.

The third period was filled with many anxious moments for the Little Redmen until Riley was able to put them ahead to stay with his powerplay goal. Shortly after Riley's goal, UMass narrowly averted disaster when Redman goalie John Kiah, thinking a delayed penalty had been called against Deerfield when it actually had been called against Riley, came skating out of the net leaving it wide open. Fortunately, Deerfield could not control the puck and did not take advantage of the open net.

Riley gave the UMass frosh a little breathing room at 13:45 of the final frame as he shot off the face-off and then stuffed his own rebound under Ciresi, who had made the initial save.

FROSH FROLICS - Although the Little Redmen were a little raged at times, it was still an excellent win against a good-skating Deerfield team.....Not to be overlooked in the win were solid defensive jobs turned in by Branch and Lowe, who were both on the ice for most of the game.....Pat Keenan, who had just returned to the lineup after sitting out the Harvard game, was hit by a deflected puck late in the game and had to be removed for some stitch work.

Redmen Score Eighty-Four

UMass Drops Bears, 84-66

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

ORONO, Me. - Saturday night, the Redman basketball team defeated the Black Bears of Maine in an unexciting and uninspiring game, 84-66. UMass led all the way and, although it played poorly, the outcome was never in doubt. The win listed the Redmen's record to 15-6 and dropped Maine to 5-15.

From the opening tap it was obvious that Maine was simply outclassed. After five minutes had passed, UMass already had built up an eleven-point bulge. Julius Erving had 18 points and 15 rebounds in the first half while Ray Ellerbrook hit for 13 points.

The second half was as poorly played as the first. But Maine simply lacked the talent to make any sort of run at the Redman lead. UMass got into foul trouble with both Ken Mathias and Dick Samuelson fouling out, but Chris Coffin and Bill Kesgen came off the bench to pick up the slack.

The game finally ended with UMass ahead by 18 points. Leading scorere were Erving with 22 points (although he did not score a field goal in the second half) and 28 rebounds, Ellerbrook with 21, Jack Gallagher with 13, and Mathias with 12. But as a former, now famous, MDC Sports Editor once said, "the less said about the game, the better."

REDMAN RANTINGS - The win upped UMass' Yankee Conference mark to 6-2 and, if it can win the rest of its YC games, it will guarantee itself of at least a tie for the title... Providence College defeated Holy Cross by seventeen points over the weekend, thereby greatly improving UMass' chances for a No. 1 New England ranking and an NIT bid... The Associated Press has finally realized that there is a Julius Erving and described him as the best in New England in an article seen in a Sunday Maine paper. Now that AP knows about Erving, and Springfield knows, and Worcester knows, when is Boston going to find out? UMass had a reversal of form Saturday night as it shot poorly from the floor (37%) but well from the charity stripe (83%)... Thanks to their usual amount of turnovers, the Redmen actually outrebounded Maine by 27 but took five less shots... Stars of the game had to be sophomores Coffin and Kesgen who both shot 100% from the floor (They each took one shot).

HOW ABOUT??? - How about Betancourt's beautiful rendition of "Windy" into a bull horn (a la Rudy Vallee) on the bus after the game.... Bill Kesgen trying to grin a dog to death in the parking lot of Yoken's in the tradition of Davey Crockett?... The team celebrating Erving's twentieth birthday on the bus with a cake after having tried to lock him in the bus' rest room?.... Getting served steak in the dining room of the Orono University Motor Inn by waitresses who looked like they just got through scrubbing the floors?... Dennis Chapman getting the top utility player award from his teammates after demonstrating in the game the correct way to commit an up-and-down infraction?... The thrilling halftime show put on by the "honey bears" and the fire twirling majorettes, most of whom looked more like bears than majorettes anyway?..... Hitch-hiking a ride to downtown Westbrook, Me., and getting picked up by a drunk who was trying to get to New Hampshire before the bars closed?... The staffs of both the Collegian and WMUA sitting in Pat's

Pizzeria Saturday night watching Samson and Delila, cheering for Samson all the way?... The fine Maine crowd cheering their team throughout the whole game even though the Black Bears trailed all the way?... Icemen Shine in 5-2 Loss To Division I. Power Brown

Redman Hustle Silences Critics

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

PROVIDENCE, R.I. - "Massachusetts who?" "They lost to Pennsylvania, 9-3, and we beat Penn, 6-0." "Curt (referring to Curt Bennett, Brown's All-America candidate) will probably score more than their whole team." These comments were among many such statements buzzing through the sell-out crowd at Mehan Auditorium Saturday night when the UMass hockey team took on Division I powerhouse Brown University. When the game was over, little was said about the 5-2 score which Brown had won by but the spirited play, desire and hustle the sophomore-laden team had displayed.

The Redmen, obviously tight during the opening minutes, settled down and began to play sound, fundamental hockey. Coach Jack Canniff's plan to use four lines, hoping to keep his team fresh in the hot arena and disrupt Brown's offense, was extremely effective.

UMass was forechecking effectively, while the wings did a good job of backchecking. The Bruins had come out flying but the Redmen were skating step for step with them. At the ten-minute mark Eddie Riley dumped the puck into the Brown zone to the left of goalie Don McInnis. Dan Reidy beat the Brown defensiveman to the puck and circled the net, sending a centering pass to Eric Scrafield. The Red Baron gathered the puck in and flipped a backhander past McInnis at 9:56.

Brown came roaring back as the Redman defense broke down and was unable to clear the puck from its zone. For over a minute UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty kept the Bruins from scoring. But the pressure was too much. With two or three Bruins constantly in front of the net, Bennett deflected Bill Gilbane's shot from the point past Flaherty, tying the score, 1-1, at 11:15.

The Redmen regained their poise and continued their close checking, nullifying the Brown offense. Flaherty amazed the crowd when he stopped its "mighty" Bennett in the closing minute of play. Bennett had managed to split the defense and broke in alone on Flaherty. P.J. came out slightly to cut down the angle, then did the splits to block Bennett's shot.

The second period was almost a carbon copy of the first. Canniff continued to employ four lines, playing defensive hockey and hoping his team could score the go-ahead goal. Brown took the lead, 2-1, at 5:06 when the referee called a delayed penalty against the Redmen.

Brown coach Jim Fullerton pulled his goalie and put a sixth skater on the ice. UMass was unable to gain control of the puck, which would have stopped play and taken the sixth Brown attacker off.

A pile-up ensued in front of Flaherty as defensiveman Gary Peacock's shot from the point was screened and slipped past Flaherty. The Redmen didn't quit, as Dennis Grabowski took a pass from Bill McMann, went by the defensivemen and beat McInnis with a shot to the far side of the net, tying the score at 2-2.

UMass was getting a bit weary, as Redman checking wasn't as effective, and Brown began to put more pressure on Flaherty. At 10:53 Brown broke in, three-on-one, against Flaherty with only Al Nickerson back to help. Nick played the rush perfectly, blocked the shot and covered it up but, unfortunately, got sent off the ice for two minutes for delay of game. The Bruins made the most of the opportunity when Bennett set up Gilbane out in front for the third Bruin goal.

Inspired play by Paul Riley, Bob Madone and Fran Mulcahey ignited the Redmen, but they weren't able to score the tying goal against McInnis. The period ended with Brown leading, 3-2.

The fast pace and heat had taken its toll on the Redmen as the third period began. At the 18-minute mark, Bob Fleming gave Brown a 4-2 lead when he scored from a face-off to the left of Flaherty. To UMass' credit, it managed to contain the Bruins during the period. Flaherty had many excellent saves, including a dozen or so from close in.

Bennett scored the last Brown goal and his second of the night when he deflected Gilbane's shot past Flaherty. UMass disputed on the grounds that there was a man in the crease preceding th puck. It was a judgement call on the referee's part and he didn't agree with the Redmen.

DENNIS GRABOWSKI

ICE CHIPS - Flaherty ended with 38 saves, while McInnis had 29 for Brown.... Hockey is king at Brown and everything is first class there.... Ten years ago they built probably the finest arena in New England and, for that matter, one of the finest in the East for only one million dollars.... Because of the tremendous interest in hockey there, plans are being made to build a new 10,000 seat area... Every game is sold out at Brown; school hockey spirit is so high that the students have to come two hours before game time.... During the course of the game, it is not uncommon to see the students get up and start singing the Brown fight song.... The assistant athletic publicity director thought UMass has one of the upcoming teams, based on the number of sophomores on the varsity and the fine showing of the freshmen..

UMass Wrestling Machine Rolls Past UNH, 34-5

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Continuing to roll onward, the UMass wrestling machine beat New Hampshire, 34-5, Saturday at Durham. The win upped the Redman record to 13-4 and was their seventh straight victory and tenth in their last eleven outings.

As has been the case in most of its recent meets, UMass far outclassed the opposition. UNH forfeited two weight classes to give the Redmen an easy ten points.

Nick Di Domenico started things off for UMass by defeating Scott Ordway 10-2. Both wrestlers are veterans in the 118-lb. class and will probably meet again in the N.E. tourney.

Dave Reynolds took only 1:22 to beat Jim Dunbar in upping the UMass lead to 8-0. Barry Godowsky lost at 134, but the Redmen bounced back by way of two straight forfeits to take command of the meet.

Bruce Buckbee topped Jack Starr of UNH in the second period at 190 lbs. in the only other pin of the meet. Other Redmen winners were Tom Young, Tom Andrewes, and Chris Hodson.

Mike Brauner came up with his best effort of the year in the 158-lb. match. His opponent was New England champ Don Stahlman who had defeated Mike twice in meets last year. With the score tied going into the third period, Mike got Stahlman on his back twice but received only two points and this proved to be the difference in the 6-6 tie.

Coach Homer Barr was pleased with the team's performance. The team has three meets coming up this week before heading to Springfield for the tourney. The Redmen face WPI at home on Wednesday and then travel to Boston this weekend for meets against MIT

Humphrey Speaks Tonight On U.S. Foreign Policy

This evening at 8:15 former Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey will speak at Curry Hicks Cage. The speech will be open to the public with undergraduates being admitted first.

Mr. Humphrey has been commissioned by the Pillsbury Company of Minneapolis to deliver a series of lectures at selected universities and colleges throughout the country to commemorate the Pillsbury centennial. His appearance at UMass is co-sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

In his only appearance in the Northeast, Mr. Humphrey will lecture on foreign policy. He will arrive at UMass late this afternoon and will attend an open coffee hour from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge of the Student Union. There will also be a press conference and he will have dinner with students and faculty.

Mr. Humphrey's previous visits to the University were on April 18 of last year to deliver the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Lecture and in 1964 when he was a commencement speaker and received an honorary degree from UMass.

Mr. Humphrey, now a political science professor at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minnesota and the University of Minnesota, began the four-lecture series last October 16 at the University of Minnesota and will deliver the last lecture on March 10 at the University of Arizona. On completion of the series Pillsbury Company will publish his lectures in book form.

Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey will speak tonight in Curry Hicks Cage at 8:15 on American foreign policy. The lecture is one in a continuing series sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program. He is shown here talking with students on the occasion of his last visit to UMass in 1969. Andre Kole Revisited

For those students who were interested by the Andre Kole lecture, there will be special college life meeting by the Campus Crusade for Christ. "Come Help Save the World", a half-hour documentary film of the student spiritual revolution, will be shown at this meeting on Wed, Feb. 25 in the Colonial Lounge at 8:00 p.m.

This film depicts some of the recent activities of student groups involved in this spiritual revolution. It includes the sponsored activities at Daytona Beach, training conferences, and the project "Beach Outreach" over spring vacation.

After the film, there will be refreshments and an informal discussion. In addition, plans for Operation Sunshine, in which busloads of students will be going to Daytona for spring break, will be presented. All interested students are invited.

For any student who is a history major or who is interested in history, there will be an open meeting of the Student-Faculty Liaison Committee on Thursday, February 26 at 7:00 p.m. in the sixth-floor lounge Herter Hall. Through the Liaison Committee, students are able to take decisive action in all policies of the History Department. The subjects to be dealt with at the open meeting will be: requirements, courses, evaluations of teachers and courses, academic freedom, and the Handbook for the History Major.

Protesters Convicted

WASHINGTON (CPS) - The seven remaining members of the "D.C. Nine," the group that ransacked the offices of the Dow Chemical Company here as a Vietnam War and napalm manufacturing protest March 22, 1969, have been convicted of illegal entry.

They face sentences of up to 20 years in prison. The other two members pleaded no contest when their trial opened earlier this month.

Several of the nine are clergymen, including one Catholic nun. The seven were acquitted of burglary charges.

The defendants did not deny they entered the Dow offices, but termed it a morally correct form of civil disobedience.

In his closing argument, Defense Attorney Addison Bowman said "the D.C. Nine had acted in a great tradition of civil disobedience...of Jesus, Martin Luther King and those patriots who maliciously destroyed tea in Boston harbor. Would you convict them?"

The prosecution argued, "This was not courage. This was the result of arrogance...they know what is right for you."

The week-long trial was marked by heated exchanges between defense and the judge and one fist swinging incident in which the court room was cleared. A youthful gallery observed the proceedings through the week.

Rally in Ballroom To Support Chicago 7

This afternoon at 4:00 in the Student Union Ballroom there will be a rally to protest the verdict of the Chicago Conspiracy Trial. Five of the eight original defendants were given five-year sentences for "crossing state lines with intent to riot." All eight were given up to four years for contempt of court. Defense lawyers Kunstler and Weinglass received sentences of four years and 13 days, and 20 months and five days for contempt of court.

UMass Associate Professor Isadore Silver will speak at the rally. Silver has been active in protecting the civil liberties of people in the Amherst area. A new film of Black Panther leader Bobby Seale speaking from jail will be shown also. Seale was denied counsel at the Conspiracy trial, shackled in court, and is now serving a four-year sentence for contempt of court.

All those who wish to show their concern for the sentencings are urged to attend.

Springfield Mayor Slated to Speak

Springfield Mayor Frank H. Freedman will speak at a seminar on Urban and Regional Development at the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration Wednesday, Feb. 25, at 4 p.m. in Room 120.

The seminar is sponsored by the business school's Center for Business and Economic Research. Mr. Freedmen's topic will be "Urban Problems: Challenges to Municipal Government and Higher Education." Associate UMass Provost Jeremiah Allen will be chairman of the session.

Ode to Nixon

Bob Zelman, a graduate student in philosophy, will offer an informal reading of the poem "Tyrannus Nix?" Tuesday at noon in the Colonial Lounge, Student Union.

The poem, by Lawrence Furlinghetti, is an "epic" poem to and about President Richard Milhous Nixon.

Free coffee will be served and discussion will be encouraged after the reading.

A delegation of UMass students travelled to the Trustee's meeting yesterday to protest the lack of student involvement in the selection of the chancellor. They had a short meeting with the Trustee's. See full details on page 3. (Photo by McArdle)

Trustees Appoint Tippo Over Senate Protest

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

BOSTON - The Board of Trustees appointed Provost Oswald Tippo to the newly created post of UMass Amherst Chancellor, effective immediately, at their meeting here yesterday.

Student trustee Cynthia Olken cast the lone dissenting vote in the balloting.

In his first public statement as Chancellor, Dr. Tippo announced a Thursday afternoon meeting with the student, faculty, and graduate student Senates to discuss in general the issues confronting the University.

The Board opened a portion of the informal morning session to the Amherst student delegation assembled to protest the lack of significant student influence in the overall University decision - making process. But press coverage of the session was not allowed.

Chairman Joseph P. Healey, in delivering the report of the Executive Committee in favor of Dr. Tippo's appointment, noted that he was "well aware of the reasons motivating the Amherst student objections, and respected the students for them."

Mr. Healey then noted that Dr. Tippo "is an outstanding educator and administrator (who has) helped along with Dr. Lederle to build an excellent faculty. He does have the confidence of most people; he has received the support of the faculty and graduate student Senates."

Mr. Healey speculated that "If we took up the question of Dr. Tippo instead of the procedural question, he would be overwhelmingly applauded by the student body at large. We did not see any individual or organized student opposition to Dr. Tippo."

A press release issued by Senate President Olken stated in part: "This appointment has been made over the objections of the undergraduate Student Senate, which has on three separate occasions, as early as late last October, endorsed the principle of student-faculty search committee to assess the qualifications of Dr. Tippo with those of other candidates. On two occasions the Senate has requested that the Board name the Provost Acting-Chancellor pending the results of such a search.

"Today's action by the Board... seriously contravenes the fundamental principles of community. To appoint the chief administrative officer of a campus without meaningful prior consultation with the student body, and in opposition to the reiterated will of the student legislature is unwise."

Tippo has served as University Provost since 1964, after four years as Provost and executive dean of arts and sciences at the University of Colorado.

He graduated from UMass in 1932 and received an M.A. and a Ph.D. in Botany at Harvard University.

Board Hears Budget Request

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

BOSTON - The Board of Trustees yesterday heard President Lederle outline the Governor's budget request for fiscal 1970. The University's disadvantaged students program which will admit 250 freshmen in the fall (compared to 125 in 68-69, and 185 in 1969-70), was cut from a request of $750,000 to $450,000. The President indicated that the University would seek restoration of these funds by the legislature.

The President noted that the cut in federal work-study funds occasioned by President Nixon's veto would require an increase in state support. The Governor's budget request was the same as last year, $850,000 as opposed to a request of $1,290,000.

In an overall comment, the President noted that the Governor's budget request provides for no new programs whatsoever.

A student delegation of about 35 from the Amherst campus brought the arguments and dissatisfactions of the past two weeks to the Board of Trustees' meeting yesterday in about an hour of dialogue. The Board seemed to be uninformed but showed genuine concern for the students' views. Though the dialogue produced no direct results, it paved the way for future communication and student participation.

A portion of the Board's afternoon session was devoted to complaints from a student delegation from the Bostom campus concerning the tenure and reappointment procedures on that campus. Chairman Healy announced that the matter had been referred, following the presentation of a faculty petition at last month's Board meeting, to the Committee on Faculty and Educational Policy. Chairman Healy stated that "this is an area that needs the thorough review of the Board." The complaints center about contentions that tenure and reappointment decisions are made in an arbitrary and vague manner, and for political rather than educational reasons.

The Board heard its delegate to the Board of Higher Education, Louis Lyons, report that, contrary to previous publicity, Chancellor of the Board of Higher Education Edward Moore (formerly Dean of the UM graduate school) did not support the "Rogers bill" for the reorganization of state higher education, which provides for a number of "University centers", each with a separate Board of Trustees.

Open Letter from Trustees

The Board of Trustees today appointed Oswald Tippo as Chancellor of the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts. In his new capacity, which is effective immediately, Dr. Tippo will be responsible for all operations on the Amherst campus. Dr. Tippo is an alumnus of the University, which also granted him an honorary Doctor of Science of 1954. Upon completing his undergraduate work, he went to Harvard, where he took his doctorate in Biology. Subsequently, he went to the University of Illinois where, starting as Instructor in Botany, he ultimately became chairman of his department and then Dean of the Graduate School. From Illinois he went to Yale, where he was chairman of the Department of Botany, to the University of Colorado as Provost, and to New York University as Executive Dean of Arts and Sciences. He then returned to his alma mater as Provost in 1964.

Our decision to appoint Dr. Tippo was based largely upon three factors. The first was the University's experience with him as Provost. During the six years he has filled this office, students, faculty members, and the Board of Trustees have been in close and frequent contact with him and have developed the highest regard for his abilities, dedication and achievements. His leadership and untiring efforts as Provost have resulted in a distinguished faculty, stronger and more varied academic programs, a much improved library, greater educational opportunity for minority groups, and a start on curricular reform and innovation. He has consistently advocated that students exercise broader responsibility for regulating their own lives.

The second factor is related to the first. While everyone associated with the University justifiably may be proud of the progress achieved under the President and Provost, we are also aware that the process of improving and adapting the University's educational program to new human and social needs is just beginning. It seems essential to the Board that the momentum of progress at Amherst be maintained during the University's system-wide reorganization and search for a new President. In our view, this appointment is essential to provide strong, coordinating leadership and to avoid intensification of problems which critics of the University believe need immediate solution.

Last, the Board is impressed by the broad respect, support, and confidence in Dr. Tippo's leadership on the Amherst campus. Throughout his tenure as Provost there have been repeated demonstrations of this confidence by students and faculty. Our formal consultations with representatives of the faculty and of the student-bodies on the appointment of Dr. Tippo as Chancellor have shown that he commands wide-spread respect and support among all parties. Indeed, even those who would have preferred that the Board proceed differently on this appointment have made it plain that are motivated solely by convictions on how university officials should be selected. We acknowledge and respect these convictions, but have elected to act on the appointment at this time in the belief that further delay would be contrary to the interests of the University.

There is much still to be done to make the Amherst campus a distinguished academic center and a pleasant, exciting place to live and study. To achieve this will require a united search for solutions and the whole-hearted cooperation and participation of the entire University Community.

JOSEPH P. HEALEY
Chairman

TEL AVIV (AP) - Thirteen Israeli Arabs went on trial today on charges arising out of bombing and sabotage incidents in the country last year. The man said to be their leader is reported to have taken orders from Palestine guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat in setting a series of bombs in Haifa.

Swiss planes have resumed flights to Israel under a careful watch from the government, following Saturday's crash of an Israel-bound Swiss plane with 47 persons on board. The jet was rocked by an explosio before the accident. Air France is resuming freight and mail service to Israel.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Amid growing U. S. concern over France's role in the Middle East, French President Georges Pompidou says the points of agreement between the two countries far outweigh their differences. Pompidou arrived this afternoon for an eight-day state visit.

He made his remarks in a copyrighted interview in "U. S. News and World Report."

Pompidou will officially arrive at the White House tomorrow morning. In an apparent effort to re-emphasize the U. S. desire to extend cordiality, the White House announced President Nixon will attend a Wednesday night state dinner that Pompidou is holding at the French Embassy.

BONN (AP) - West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel reports that his government has sent messages to all the Arab countries condemning terrorist attacks on civilian airliners. The announcement comes after a meeting in Bonn with Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Eban said today that Israel does not want to interfere with German-arab relations. Most Arab countries broke relations with West Germany when it recognized Israel back in 1965.

JERUSALEM (AP) - Guerrilla terrorists opened fire on a bus carrying tourists just outside Hebron in Israeli-occupied Jordan. One American woman was killed. Two others and an Israeli guide were wounded. There were 37 Americans on the Baptist-sponsored tour of Bible lands.

The U.S. Has It's Problems Too

ATLANTA (AP) - The American Bar Association has reaffirmed by a 130 to 126 vote its opposition to an international treaty banning genocide. President Nixon had asked the group to approve the treaty And former Attorney-General Nicholas Katzenbach had warned that rejection would be seen as proof that the United States knows it has committed genocide in Vietnam.

An affirmative vote might have spurred action in the Senate. The Senate has not ratified the treaty during the 22 years following its signing under President Truman.

MIAMI BEACH (AP) - AFL - CIO President George Meany and Labor Secretary Shultz renewed threat of a nationwide rail shutdown. But Shultz declines to say whether the President might ask Congress for special legislation if necessary to prevent such an occurrance.

Shultz told a meeting of the Federation's executive council in Miami Beach that the administration believes training and job opportunities must be provided for the unskilled and unemployed. He responded to labor criticism of the "Philadelphia Plan" involving quota hiring of minorities on federal construction jobs. Shultz said: "Passive nondiscrimination is not going to do the job." And he asked Labor's help in providing training and jobs while fighting inflation.

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (AP) - A 19-year-old who strolled through town with an American flag sewn to the seat of his pants has been sentenced to a year in jail. He was convicted and sentenced under an 1899 State Law that forbids treating the flag in a contemptuous manner.

NEW YORK (AP) - The latest Harris Poll indicated President Nixon's popularity with the American people has slipped four points from 62 to 58 per cent - since December. The decline is attributed to public dissatisfaction over the state of the economy and administration measures to stem inflation.

Auto makers have been among those who have most severely felt the effects of the nation's economic woes. Today Ford Motor Co. reported its net earnings fell nearly 13 per cent last year. Sales however, reached a record high.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Armed Services Committee meets in closed session tomorrow. And Defense Secretary Laird is expected to ask for Congressional approval of an expanded anti-missile system. Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield today said Laird will be questioned carefully. He'll be asked about the system's cost, necessity, accuracy and reliability.

The Montana democrat today gave his view on another controversial issue...He urged Congress to pass the revised 19-and-a-half billion dollar Health and Education money bill. President Nixon vetoed it the first time around-and might do so again.

NEW DELHI (AP) - The Indian government is reported to have asked the United States to close its information agency libraries in five state capitals within 90 days.

The libraries are in the state capitals of Trivandrum, Hyderabad, Bangalore, Lucknow and Patna.

There were established in 1952 following a verbal agreement between then-ambassador Chester Bowles and Prime Minister Nehru.

It's said the Indian government bowed to communist and left-wing pressure in making the request.

DVP Offers Dramatic Presentation, Fletcher Portrays Bernard Shaw

The appearance of Bramwell Fletcher at UMass this Thursday, February 26, marks an entirely new venture by the Distinguished Visitors Program. Mr. Fletcher as Bernard Shaw is the first dramatic presentation to be sponsored by DVP.

The performance will be at 8 pm in Bowker Auditorium and is free of charge as are all DVP programs.

"Bramwell Fletcher as Bernard Shaw" was a smash hit in New York and Dublin as well as in a limited tour last season. It is a fully rounded theatrical portrait of Bernard Shaw. It is not merely a reading, using a minimum of props and setting, and ingentously staged, Bramwell Fletcher fills the stage with Bernard Shaw the man - outrageous, witty and wise.

"The only predictable thing about me," said Shaw, "is the unpredictable. Many people today regard me as general consultant to manking on the questions of SEX, RELIGION, MUSIC, DRAMA, PROCREATION, EDUCATION, POLITICS, WAR, CRIMINAL HUMAN STUPIDITY, THE DESTINY OF MAN - AND EVEN AMERICAN BASEBALL!"

A symphony of ideas compiled and dramatically presented by Mr. Fletcher from comparatively unknown works - Shaw's autobiographical sketches, essays, speeches, etc., "Bramwell Fletcher as Bernard Shaw" has proven to be one of the most popular autobiographical entertainments now touring.

Brammell Fletcher was last seen on Broadway as "Henry Higgins" in "My Fair Lady", playing opposite Julie Andrews and Sally Ann Howes. Since then he has turned away from the increasingly commercial New York theatre and created an entirely new career for himself performing one man shows of his own devising at colleges and universities across the country.

He began with BERNARD SHAW. While still a juvenile in the British theatre, Fletcher met Shaw, who made a deep impression on him, Thinking about the extraordinary character, humor, and prophetic genius of Shaw during MY FAIR LADY, he conceived the idea of recreating him on stage and set to work compiling a dramatic portrait. After at last receiving permission for the use of the Shaw material, published and unpublished, from the Shaw Estate, he presented the show to impresario Sol Hurok. Hurok undertook to produce it in Dublin and in New York, where reviewers gave Fletcher's performance the highest praise, ranking it with Holbrook's recreation of Mark Twain.

BRAMWELL FLETCHER

Bramwell Fletcher has performed leading roles in 32 Broadway productions, appeared in nearly every major dramatic series on television and, in the early part of his career, completed 25 motion pictures.

Fletcher has also been a very successful producer. His production of REBECCA (the Daphne du Maurier story of Alfred Hitchcock fame) toured for two full years, and honors for his all-star production of OUTWARD BOUND included a Command Performance in Washington for F.D.R.'s birthday. THE NEW YORKER critic commented on his own performance in that play: "Bramwell Fletcher should be carried through the streets!"

Having discovered the pleasure and challenge of performing to college audiences, Bramwell Fletcher takes a great interest in the concerns of youth today and in education. While on campus he enjoys being a part of the life of the college. His many informal talks with students gave him the idea of offering a series of lively seminars on English literature and on theatre, to be climaxed by a performance of BERNARD SHAW.

His talks have been a tremendous success with both students and faculty. He manages to communicate his own intense love of poetry in particular, which prompted one educator to pronounce that "in his four days here he made more converts than Billy Graham could have, and the echoes are still being heard!" (University of Miami's John Walker Powell).

NES Organizes Orientation, Coordinating Committee Meets

The N.E.S. Coordinating Committee is moving toward increased activity and involvement from all students involved in the program.

A new attempt of giving tutor orientations after a tutor has made a trip to Springfield will be done next week. The orientations will be given March 2nd and 4th at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union. All tutors are asked to attend one of these orientations. Tutors should go down to Springfield as usual.

Any tutor seeking extra advice about tutoring should attend the Youth-Tutoring-Youth Workshop given by Carol Carter. This is in conjunction with the School of Education's Modular Credit Week. This workshop is scheduled for 1:00 p.m. today.

A Cultural Enrichment program is also in the making. Meetings are taking place this week. Hopefully details will be worked out quickly so this aspect of N.E.S. will be in working order in two weeks.

The N.E.S. Coordinating Committee will be meeting again Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the Hampden Room of the Student Union. Anyone interested in working in organizing N.E.S. at UMass is sincerely welcome.

MLK Race Committee to Meet

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council Committee on Race will meet Tuesday, Feb. 24, at 3:15 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union.

The meeting open to new members, will discuss program plans for the semester. Programs under consideration include working to incorporate an anti-discrimination clause drawn up by Isidore Sliver into state and federal legislation. The committee is also considering plans to establish a dorm education program to deal with racism, and will begin to investigate ways to incorporate the Action Course on White Racism into a course with full credit within some existing department.

The Committee on Race is actively seeking new members and new program ideas. People seeking more information about the meeting may call Gil Salk or Bill Abbott at the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council office in 207 Hampshire House. The telephone numbers are 545-0648 and 545-0649.

Corrected grades can be picked up at the Registrar's Office between 9-4, Room 213, Whitmore.

Just Lucky This Time

We have gone on record time after time in support of Dr. Oswald Tippo for the newly created position of Chancellor of the Amherst campus of UMass. And as that appointment has been made official by the University Board of Trustees, we again give that support.

We have time after time listed Tippo's impeccable credentials for the sensitive position. We refer you back to them. Dr. Tippo is the only person, in our opinion, for the Chancellor's post.

Therefore it is regrettable that the appointment of such an able and progressive educator has been clouded by the method of appointment.

There was no campus community discussion prior to the appointment of Dr. Tippo. It was a preordained appointment, void of any sampling of campus opinions, aside from a faculty senate "vote" that put the employees (the faculty) in judgment of their boss (the provost).

In fact, the whole affair was so cut and dried that an open letter from the Board Chairman Joseph Healey, announcing Dr. Tippo's appointment, was in dining commons 15 minutes after the appointment made in Boston. The UMass News Bureau release announcing Tippo's appointment was dated February 19.

Is this the way all appointments are made in the University? Granted, an extremely able person has been appointed in this case. But does the rubber stamp appointment demonstrated in this case always produce such talent? Or was the campus just lucky this time?

There cannot be a continuance of the present appointment procedure. The present system, devoid of any campus discussion prior to appointments, must be scrapped.

We strongly urge that, in this vein, the Student Senate formulate and unanimously pass a bill giving the entire campus community a strong voice in the selection of the new University president. We urge the faculty senate, the administration and the Board of Trustees to also endorse such measures.

The university was lucky this time to get a man of the caliber of Dr. Tippo with the present system. They may not be as lucky the next.

Campus Comment

What Black Civilization?

To the editor:

I am writing this letter in the desire that some of your readers will be able to clear something up for me. I appeal especially to your Black readers, to the numerous Black scholars on this campus, for an answer.

My question is concerned with certain statements that have appeared in the COLLEGIAN this past month. The first, appearing in the issue dated Feb. 6, 1970 and made by letter writer Stokes W. Hall Jr., reads: "It means that you have the honor of reading a dynamic experience, of steeping yourself in a culture that had universities when Europeans were still acting like the first cousins to the primates."

Now, I'm sure Mr. Hall realizes that Europeans are true, honest-to-goodness primates, not just blood relatives, and that's not the part of his statement that bothered me. In fact, it wasn't until the point that he was making in the last part of the quoted sentence was reiterated in a letter in the Feb. 20 COLLEGIAN that I felt that I must write and ask for clarification. This latest statement, by Mary Ellen Blas, read: "The continent of Africa had culture and a flourishing civilization when Europeans were still wearing animal skins and living in caves. The white man did not bring us civilization, only his interpretation of it."

My question is simply this: What Black universities and what African civilization are these two people talking about? If they are referring to the Egyptian civilization, then I agree with them and beg their pardon for bringing up the whole thing; Egypt is, after all, in Africa, and a civilization did thrive there at least 1000 years before any arose in Europe.

However, the ancient Egyptians were white. That's obvious from the many excellent pictorial representations that have survived the centuries. But I get the impression that Mr. Hall and Miss Blas (that's really her name!) are talking about a BLACK civilization, probably a sub-Saharan one. And it would have to have been in existence before 2000 B.C., the time of the beginning of the Minoan Civilization, the oldest European civilization, to fit the claims of these two people.

Therefore, in the interest of history, I challenge the Black scholars on this campus to name me ONE Black civilization, and not just a Black culture, that antedated the Minoan Civilization. I ask it as a favor, really, because as a poor ignorant white primate who seems to have been short-changed by his anthropology and ancient history courses here at UMass, I must admit that I've never heard of any such ancient Black civilization. I'm sure the COLLEGIAN will be glad to print replies to this letter that answer my challenge, and, if none are forthcoming, I guess we'll have to assume that the learned Blacks at UMass really aren't familiar with the fabled ancient Black civilizations to which they so often refer.

Return of Hubird

"THE DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PROGRAM OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS IS PROUD TO PRESENT TO YOU FORMER VICE-PRESIDENT HUBERT H. HUMPHREY." This, or some such cursory introduction will serve to announce that Mr. Humphrey has, indeed, returned to the University for the purpose of dellivering a Foreign Policy speech. At first, I was somewhat glad about this event. He had, after all, won considerable support and critical acclaim on his last excursion into this academic valley, and, further, he does espouse sane political philosophies, based upon the consensus realities of which he is a formidable standard-bearer. Truly a personage worthy of respect.

The next question is obviously, "By whom?" Apparently the University community, among others. Hubert Humphrey, (or others like him), is quite the political answer to a majority of young people, and a greater majority of not-so-young people. Youth is by nature liberal; Hubert Humphrey is considered a liberal Democrat. But youth is also by nature liberal only within tradition-encrusted borders. Hubert Humphrey is a total believer in the essential infallibility of the two-party system, and the American way of doing things, in general. Therefore, Hubert Humphrey generates a profound appeal upon the people who wish to be considered liberal constructionists within a traditional framework. He is, in essence, a flagship, consciously or not, of the Republic as it now stands, the latest link in the chain of "progress" from 1776 to the present.

Unfortunately, upon a closer examination, certain gaps in this man's credibility (to borrow a Johnson-Humphrey era phrase) appear. In the late 1940's and early 1950's, when most of us were doing things like occasionally stretching our legs, or writing our names on the walls of mother's womb, Hubert Humphrey was being given such contemporary titles as "left-winger" and "radical legislator" for his then, indeed, progressive civil rights and social legislative proposals. He was as fine a liberal constructionalist as was possible within the system. Unfortunately, for the twenty years following this spurt of social vision, Hubert Humphrey was essentially content to yawn, scratch his belly, and curl up for a long winter's nap.

It is true that he rolled in his sleep occasionally, but, to be truthful, he never really woke up again; a lamentable condition seeing that, as alluded to earlier, a majority of young, and not-so-young people believe that they are seeing history in the making when viewing Mr. Humphrey, when, in reality, they are seeing nothing more than a sleepwalking Hamlet plotting the downfall of a comatose Claudius.

Was Hubert Humphrey morally awake when he refused to differ in opinion as much as one millimeter in four years from that megalomaniac, Johnson?

Was Hubert Humphrey morally awake when he, in a pandering and fawning way so well disguised as to be misinterpreted by absolutely no one, heaped mounds of praise on Mayor Daley after the abortion on the streets of Chicago, merely to gain a corrupt nomination?

Is this the kind of man that the sterile majority of young and not-so-young people will drink coffee with, applaud politely for, and seriously consider once again for the throne two years from now?

You all know the answers to these three questions; I'll not insult your intelligency by definitively stating them.

Mr. Humphrey, then, and I address myself to you, allow me to close by sincerely welcoming you to the campus of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. I honestly hope that you enjoy your stay here. I could wish no less for any visitor to my campus. Allow me also the liberty of wishing you a large and responsive crowd for your address, and civil and thoughtful people for your coffee hour (avoid dining commons coffee if you value your palate). I, too, shall be at your functions, at least your speech, but not for the same reasons that the majority of young and not-so-young people will be there for. I, Mr. Humphrey, will be in attendance to view you - as a representative example of an ostensibly democratic, but in reality corrupt, unresponsive, and stifling political system - for amusement; with an eye to the fact that you, sir, in my studied opinion, are a magnificent hypocritical anachronism.

Bookstore Blues

To the editor:

For a university with pretensions to greatness, the UMass bookstore is a roaring disgrace. Service is lousy, efficiency apparently non-existent, and an attitude of indifference and bureaucratic inanity apparently endemic. Texts required for university courses are very frequently not available when needed; the selection of non-course books takes second place to peppermint sticks and dime-store junk.

Granted that the University is in a difficult phase of growth and construction. Granted that new facilities may eventually become available. But new facilities do not necessitate a good school or a good bookstore make. At present the largest educational institution in the Connecticut Valley has probably the worst, in every respect, bookstore in the area. And say so or not, nearly everyone knows it. Shouldn't this situation be changed?

Brown's Reform

To the editor:

It might be well at this time to recall that perhaps the most far-reaching curricular reform in America today took place recently at Brown University. It took place quietly, without incident, and it took place because the students decided what they wanted and set about to bring their visions into reality. A persuasive report was written, citing specific faults and detailing specific proposals, and at least three students visited every faculty member to inform him of their efforts, to hear his commeats, and, if possible, to enlist his support. The result was an extraordinary degree of faculty - student unanimity and a spirit of cooperation that resulted in profound and harmonious change.

Randolph: The Defenders

To The Editor:

I was shocked to read in the Collegian today Mr. Burke's account of the way he was treated in the town of Randolph. The blind hatred of the townspeople for anyone with long hair was only rivaled by Mr. Burke's hatred for the townspeople. He has apparently failed to learn anything from his experiences there, and repays their hatred with his hatred.

After all, what is the difference between calling someone a "long haired creep" and describing someone as a "hulky, dumb-looking cop, his T-shirt clad belly poking through his unbuttoned uniform"? Mr. Burke can only have the sorry excuse that the cop hated him first.

But there is more! In a similar incident Mr. Burke is being harassed when a black cop comes along. Our Hero is saved, for all blacks understand persecution, and the black cop is sure to come to the aid of the persecuted college student. But the cop is an Uncle Tom, the Man! He even talks like a dumb southern nigger (the type who buys hair straightener and joins the KKK Negro Auxiliary). When our black cop calls long hair uncivilized, Mr. Burke shows HIS high degree of civilization by calling the cop a "living aboriginal anachronism from some headhunting tribe." If I did not know that Mr. Burke is a member of the love generation, I might interpret that as a racist statement. (On the more humorous side, one may note that Mr. Burke's British ancestors used to ceremonially mix cement with infant's blood and entrails before building a house.)

Hating those with whom you disagree is a very common human failing, one which we all have been guilty of at some time. It is also the cause of wars, revolutions, and other evils. The hatred of the Randolph police was apparently directed against someone whom they felt was threatening the moral fibre of the United States. In their point of view, Mr. Burke was the oppressor! This same ridiculous set of events is repeated over and over again with every possible permutation of oppressor and oppressed. "Free World" inhabitants, Communists, SDS, KKK, The Black Panthers, and countless other groups hate their respective enemy groups, sometimes enough to kill, but ALWAYS IN THE NAME OF SUFFERING HUMANITY!!!!!!!!!! God save us from our attempts to save ourselves. I'm beginning to think that if we were all apathetic enough, then all the world's problems would disappear. No one would bother to react to oppression, and hence no one would be oppressed.

As an example, take the dedicated group of people here on campus who are reacting against the "Military - Industrial Complex." As a member of ROTC, I could recount you event after event in which these people reacted to my uniform exactly the way the Randolph police reacted to Mr. Burke's long hair. If you are lucky, they assume you are a total idiot and try to make you see the error of your ways. If you are not so lucky, they call you names like Facist Pig, or ROTC Murderer. What is the difference between these names and "long haired creep", or "hulky, dumb-looking cop?" Think it over.

And when you are finished, love someone this week. Try to make it an enemy, after all, everyone loves his friends.

Peace (please)?

BILL WIESEL

(Editor's note: "Hating those with whom you disagree is a very common human failing, one which we all have been guilty of at some time. It is also the cause of wars, revolutions, and other evils." Mr. Burke's experiences in Randolph were hardly on the level of a disagreement, "If you don't want that punk face punched in, shut up", and if Mr. Wiesel can react to this type of intimidation with forgiveness then he is truly an unusual human being. Also, "No one would bother to react to oppression, and hence no one would be oppressed." is the kind of illogic that seems to precede very real oppression. Mr. Wiesel, YOU think it over. And read the Baird letter. L.D.)

Tell the World

To The Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter entitled 'Some of my best friends....' appearing in Monday's Collegian. Mr. Schavone's white brothers of the South are not the people that have caused blacks to stereotype whites, it is people like Mr. Schavone himself. If Mr. Schavone could see past his nose, he would see that this whole country is built on racism, and none of us are free from it, not even blacks. Racism exists in every American institution. If it is examples you want, I will use your own. Your parents, teachers and friends are all products of the educational system of the U.S., they all read papers, they all watch television, go to movies, and most are church goers. If these institutions are not racist, then nothing else is. Elementary school textbooks systematically exclude non-whites. Newspapers only use non-whites when there is some shock value associated with it. Television and movies do not need explanation as their token integration is well-known. What's worse, however, is that your parents, teachers, and friends bring up their children so that they are just like you.

I have heard that some blacks are moving down South because they are sure where they stand. A person such as Mr. Schavone can always rationalize his position by saying he is not prejudiced.

As for racial incidents on campus, I guess you are saying that not seeing is not existing. How would you find out about such an incident? Your friends? The Collegian? Your white friends could not tell you, because they have all been brought up as you have. And the Collegian, well some stories never make the press. Need I go on? I hope the point is made.

Instead of blacks learning how to reason with whites, perhaps everyone should learn how to reason with themselves. I also ask myself if I am prejudiced. The answer is always "YES!" Then I ask myself what am I going to do about it. I have never been able to answer the latter question. If you can answer it, don't tell me, tell the world.

By the way, I am one of your white brothers up North and you disgust me.

TOBY S. KASAVANA

'Unprejudiced'

To The Editor:

Who are you kidding? Reread your "unprejudiced" letter again and if you can't see your bigotry shining through then you're blind! Few people raised in middle class United States have rid themselves completely of prejudice, of judging people on color, of judging people as groups instead of individuals. If you haven't seen prejudice on this campus, then again I say you're blind. You are the example of people who are the most difficult to convert to equality for all. You can't even see the problem. "If you're not part of the solution, then you're part of the problem" - Eldridge Cleaver - and I think you're part of the problem.

KATHY MALFA

One Can Only Hope

To The Editor:

John Burke's experiences in Randolph were by no stretch of the imagination, uncommon or extraordinary. They are typical of that reactionary little town in which I lived for five years. Some people might think that the treatment he received from those maximuscled, mini-minded upholders of the status quo is reserved for outsiders alone. False - it is reserved for the local "long hairs, peace freaks" and "wise-ass college punks." The police force, and the townspeople who allow them to run loose, unmuzzled, fist-swinging, are hopelessly ignorant of the Bill of Rights. One can only hope to avoid them for the rest of one's life. Take Mr. Burke's advice and STAY OUT OF RANDOLPH.

FRANK BAIRD

"To Reason Is To Choose."

To The Editor:

John Schavone's letter to the MDC on Feb. 23, 1970 did not make sense to me. The letter contains contradictory and idiotic statements. If you, Mr. Schavone, do not know any black people (which is your prerogative) how can you say that blacks stereotype more than whites do? Is this not pre-judging people that you admittedly do not know? Furthermore, in another part of your letter you say, "But if they (my white brothers of the South) are what they have been shown to be, then I can HATE THEM AS MUCH AS ANY BLACK PERSON, (my italics) but for a different reason." In a latter part of the letter, you say, "But I have never been given reason to dislike them." Is this an admission that you hate us for no reason?

The letter ends with a bit of advice to blacks to "do a bit of reading. Learn how to reason with people....." Check YOURSELF out, Mr. Schavone, apparently, you have not even done your required reading for English 126. Milton says, "To reason is to choose." Remember? (Or does it not say that in the Monarch notes?) What choice do we have in the five college area, except to learn about white people, or no one? We are ready to reason, are you?

GEORGE P. LYERDES

"Tyrannus Nix?" Reading

On Tuesday Feb. 24, Bob Zelman, a graduate student in philosophy will read "Tyrannus Nix?" in the Colonial Lounge at 12. It is an "epic" poem to and about Pres. Richard Milhous Nixon, written by Lawrence Ferlinghetti.

Mr. Zelman was quoted as saying that "it is being done in sympathy with the T.D.A. demonstrations for the Conspiracy Trial. The poem is dedicated to the leader of our country, in which people feel that they are forced to bring politics into the streets (rather than participate in the corrupt political conventions) in order to make their demands felt.

It is also dedicated to the appearance of Hubert H. Humphrey on campus who not only did nothing in response to, but also denied the seriousness of, the violence in the streets of Chicago '68 which provoked the charge of "conspiracy". There will be a discussion period with free coffee afterwards.

FINANCIAL AID

In light of the proposed fee increases for 1970-71, it should be noted that any increases that go into effect for next year will automatically be considered in determining the amount of assistance to be awarded to all financial aid applicants. Priority for all forms of financial aid will be given to currently enrolled students.

We also remind all students that the application deadline is March 1, for summer school and the 1970-71 academic year. A new application must be filed each year whether or not aid has been received previously.

Skiers Split At Tyrol Keep Huge League Lead

Paced by an exceptionally strong steady performance by team co-captain Jim Garstang, the red-hot Redmen ski team maintained a strong hold on first place in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference, finishing first in the slalom on Saturday and fourth in the giant slalom on Sunday. The weekend's activities boosted the team win-loss ration to a record fifty wins against only four setbacks and helped to increase an already insurmountable Conference lead.

Garstang was outstanding in both events, capturing the first place medal in the slalom with a 79.5 combined time and also garnering a first in the giant slalom with a 98 flat. These two victories marked his second and third consecutive wins and greatly enhanced his chances of being named the top skier in the conference at the league banquet on March 7.

Saturday's victory was a devastating one as the Redmen rolled up a thirty second victory margin over the next closest team, Northeastern University. John Gray, experiencing difficulty in the treacherously set flush on the first course, responded much better to the second course and posted a 43.4, placing him fourteenth in the league. Jim Latimer also fell prey to the blue glare but was strong enough to bounce back and finish with a respectable time. With three men home safe, but one more needed to secure a victory, the pressure was placed on the shoulders of Goober Curran who had finished the first run with an excellent 48.7. The talented Frenchman responded in typical UMass form by putting another 48. back to back with his first, good enough for a team victory and a second place for Goober.

Glory was also to be had by the B team, which captured the two top spots in their division. Gordon Speed, a freshman, rifled through the bamboo jungle with a combined 83.8, a time bettered only by Garstang. Joh Gennari finished second with the thirteenth fastest time on the mountain. Coach MacConnell, obviously elated with the overall performance of the team, responded with "Glorious, just Glorious!"

Sunday was a bitter disappointment to the team as they saw their almost perfect record marred by Northeastern, Amherst, and Tufts, who finished first, second, and third ahead of the Redmen. The team witnessed a series of difficulties which culminated into its mediocre fourth place finish. The trail on which the course was set was in such bad shape to begin with that in several places work crews were forced to shovel snow onto it to cover the rocks and ice. The course itself was an extremely fast one with open gates on the steep face of the mountain and offset-closed and oblique gates at the bottom, demanding the strength and stamina of a downhill racer at the top and the agility and quickness of the slalom racer at the bottom.

The Redmen's trouble began early when co-captain Ted Martin, making a valiant attempt to compete despite being ill, was so overcome by the flu that he was unable to take a provisional rerun granted to him by the referee. Curran, Gray, and Latimer all had excellent first runs, but the ice and chatter marks foiled their attempts to put two good ones together. Chuck Walker, bearing the burden of being the highest seeded man on the team, and knowing that his teammates had had trouble and that now he must do well, defied the ice and salvaged a fourth place for the Redmen. Of the B team racers, John Gennari placed third, and Steve Durkoski skied sixth.

UMass hands out no skiing scholarships and yet Coach MacConnell has managed to attract three "B" quality racers in the persons of Gordon Speed, Mark Fisher, and Mark Courville. These three freshmen, racing as outside racers, were all in the top ten, placing third, seventh, and tenth respectively. In just one short year these hotshots will be attempting to break conference records which the varsity is now setting.

Girl Gymnasts Down Salem

On Saturday, the University of Massachusetts girls scored another overwhelming gymnastics victory, this time against the team from Salem State College. Regardless of the fact that coach Kjeldsen did not use her strongest team, the UMass girls scored 92.05 points to Salem States's 62.50.

Junior co-captain Linda Seikunas had her best day, winning the floor exercise event with a score of 8.75, placing second in vaulting with 8.05 and winning the balance beam, scoring 8.6.

Sophomore Barbara Holt won the uneven bars, as usual, scoring 8.25. She placed second on balance beam and third in floor exercise with scores of 7.85 and 7.9 respectively.

Freshman Marina Rodrigues competed only in two events, winning vaulting with 8.35 and coming second on the uneven bars with a score of 8.05. Junior Laurel Milch scored 8.10 in floor exercise, capturing the second place. Senior co-captain Ruth Morse came in fourth in the same event.

The only Salem State girl who placed among top three in individual events was Liz Manzie, who came in third on uneven bars (6.90) and third in vaulting (7.60).

This weekend the girls will travel to Trenton State College and from there to Towson College in Maryland. The last home meet for the season will be on Saturday March 7th. The opponents are the girls from Pennsylvania State.

UMass Finishes Second In YC Track Championships

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

The UMass track team came up with its best effort of the season, but had to settle for second place behind pre-meet favorite Connecticut in the Yankee Conference indoor track and field championships at Durham, New Hampshire on Saturday. The margin of victory for the Huskies was seven points, 57-50, a decrease of 23 points from their dual meet victory over the Redmen last week. This left many Huskies shaking their heads after the meet and put the Redmen in a position as one of the front running teams in the New Englands this coming week end.

The other four teams in the Yankee Conference, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Maine did not fair so well in the team scoring as they scored 32, 29, 12, and 12 points respectively.

Coach O'Brien was very pleased with his team's performance and it took Connecticut's best effort to beat the Redmen. Each UMass athlete who participated in the meet came up with his personal best effort this season.

The meet went as expected with Connecticut scoring well in the weight events, UMass scoring a bulk of its points in the sprint, hurdles, and high jump and both schools dividing up the points in the middle and long distance running events.

Connecticut took the early lead in the morning events. Sophomore Art Paliwoda won the 35 pound weight throw with a toss of 55'6".

Another Huskie took a fourth and this gave UConn an 8-0 lead. In the shot put, Craig Conners picked up another first for the Huskies with a conference record toss of 53'3 1/2". UMass' Eddie Acaro picked up a second place in this event and four points for the Redmen.

These four points were the only ones the Redmen scored in the morning events. However, all three UMass sprinters and the two Redmen Hurdlers qualified in the morning heats for the afternoon finals.

The last two events in the morning program were the pole vault and the long jump. Wayne Findeisen of Rhode Island set a conference and field house record in the pole vault with a vault of 15' 1/2". In this event, Connecticut took a third and a fourth place.

In the long jump Morris Glinton of Maine set another conference record with a jump of 23' 3". New Hampshire took second and third, on the strength of jumps by decathaloner Jeff Bannister and Gary King.

When the totals were in for the morning events, UConn was on top, with UMass some thirteen points behind in fourth place. New Hampshire was second with Rhode Island third.

The afternoon started with UConn taking one, two, three in the mile. Craig McColl was the winner in the slow time of 4:17.6. In this race senior Bill Donaldson came up with his best effort at this distance with a time of 4:21 and a fifth place finish. This was his fastest time by eight seconds.

Next came the sprint and the hurdles, two of the Redman strong points the entire season. And they continued to be in this meet. Dave Marble won the 60 yard dash with a time of 6.5 seconds. Wilkens of Rhode Island was second and

RON WAYNE

Eddie Mayo of UMass took a third. Ron Harris came up with a fine effort in placing fourth for the Redmen. These three sprinters for UMass produced 11 points with their efforts.

In the hurdles, Jim Graves and Gerry Spellman picked up seven more points with second and third place finishes behind Wilkens of Rhode Island who ran his second outstanding effort in the meet. Wilken's time was 7.5 seconds with Graves and Spellman both being timed in 7.6 seconds. For Graves this time equaled his best of the year and for Spellman was his top effort of the season.

UMass was shut out in the 600 yard run which was won by Jeff Bannister with a meet record time of 1:12.4. This was Bannister's second strong effort in the meet. He was followed across the finish line by Hillmar of UConn.

In the high jump, old reliables Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey left the field way behind as both jumped 6'4" with Carpenter winning on fewer misses. This added ten points to the Redmen score and the deficit between them and UConn was decreasing.

The 1000 yard run was one of the best events in the meet. Steve Flanagan of UConn, the defending New England champ, led Pregent of UNH and Dave Evans of UMass through the first quarter mile in the time of 57.5 seconds. Evans bolted into a nine yard lead over Flanagan at the half with a time of 1:54.5. Pregent fell back and had to settle for the third position with Evans and Flanagan fighting it out for first place. As these two rounded the final turn, Evans had the lead, but Flanagan was able to overcome him on the straight away and won at the wire. He and Evans were both timed in 2:12.1, a new field house record. Third went to Pregent and fourth went to UMass' Donaldson who won the unseeded heat with a time good enough to place fourth in the entire field. His time of 2:17 was his best this season by three seconds. Donaldson did an outstanding job for the Redmen on Saturday.

The two mile featured Ron Wayne of UMass against his two UConn rivals John Vitale and Rich Spurling. In this race Wayne was not to be denied as he won going away in the conference record time of 9:01.5. Spurling led at the mile on the slow time of 4:36, with Wayne and Vitale right behind. The next half mile saw no increase in the pace set by Spurling so Wayne took the matter into his own hands and completely turned the race into a runaway as he ran the last half mile in the time of 2:07.5. His time of 9:01.5 was a good time in relation to the slow pace set for the first mile and a half.

The relay was the final event in the conference championships. Connecticut, Rhode Island, and UMass were the seeded teams in this event. Gerry Spellman put the Redmen into the lead with a 51.3 first leg. Marble held the lead, running his quarter in 50.9. Harris increased the lead a little more on the strength of his 51.6 effort. On the anchor leg, Al Mangan held the lead until the last straighaway with Wilkens of Rhode Island passing him out to take home the victory for the Rams. Mangan ran his quarter in the respectable time of 51.6 but Wilkens finished off his fine performance in the meet with his come from behind victory.

So the meet ended and now the Redmen are currently preparing for the New Englands, which will be held at UConn this coming Saturday. There are many Redman individuals who could score in this meet, and if hard work is the key to victory, then the Redmen just could find that key at UConn on Saturday.

Pucksters Meet Holy Cross Tonight

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Making their final road trip of the 1969-70 season, the Redmen travel to Worcester tonight and tangle with the Crusaders of Holy Cross. Face-off is set for 8 o'clock. UMass still has a slim chance of receiving a bid to the ECAC Division II play-offs but they have to beat Holy Cross and Williams College, whom they play next Monday at Orr.

Holy Cross has been inconsistent this year and defensively appear very weak. Last week they were bombed by Bowdoin 10-1, and have also lost to Amherst, 5-4. The Crusaders main offensive threat, and possibly their only one, is Bill Murphy, who has amassed 151 career points via 87 goals and 64 assists.

Saturday night the Redmen lost to Brown, 5-2, but they gave a good account of themselves. The freshmen continued their winning ways beating the Brown Cubs, 5-4, on frosh sensation Pat Keenan's 19th goal of the year. Don Riley kept his goal streak alive when he scored the Redmen's fourth goal. Riley, the younger brother of varsity forward Paul Riley, is challenging Keenan for the scoring honors.

Friday night the Wildcats of New Hampshire invade Orr Rink. UMass, based on their strong showing Saturday, will be after their first Division I win. The Wildcats have had their ups and downs this year, losing to Division II teams, Vermont and Bowdoin but last week they beat mighty Bos-has a fast skating, high scoring offense, but have had trouble in goal this year. If the Redmen can hold New Hampshire to three or four goals they have an excellent shot at upsetting the Wildcats.

There will be no admission charge for this game. Against Amherst many students were driven away by the thoughts of paying a dollar. It should be noted that it was considered an away game for the Redmen. We are not the principle occupants of Orr Rink. It should also be noted that the University does not have its own facilities but rents them from Amherst.

The Redmen's Division II record currently stands at 8-5. If they sweep the Crusaders and Williams next Monday night, they will finish 10-5, the best Division II record ever achieved at UMass in hockey.

Jack Edwards is the leading Redman scorer to date with 20 points, including ten goals. Next year the Redmen have added two more Division I teams, Northeastern and Providence, as Coach Jack Canniff strives to achieve his goal of giving Massachusetts a hockey team capable of competing with the likes of Cornell and BU successfully. It is a long process, requiring diligence and considerable patience. Since Canniff's arrival on the campus, hockey has come a very long way, and will continue to grow.

UMass Meets Springfield Gymnasts Try for Upset

The UMass varsity gymnasts will be out to keep their chances alive for a first place tie in the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League when they meet Springfield College tonight at 8 o'clock in Springfield.

Springfield College, conquerors of mighty Penn State and Temple, needs only a victory over UMass to clinch the Eastern title. At present, SC is 6-0 on the season while UMass is 4-1 in league competition with two meets remaining.

For Springfield, Jeff Wiles and Mike Provencher share the all-around honors. Provencher, who excells in the long horse vault, is a past small college All-American.

Other standouts for Springfield are Joe Ceniscin floor exercise, Ed Datti in long horse vault, floor exercise and parallel bars, Chuck Shiebler on rings, and team captain Dave Ellis on side horse and rings.

UMass will go basically with the same team it used to defeat Navy. The only change in the Redman lineup will be Scott Stover competing in the long horse vault.

Should the Redmen win tonight, they will face Temple University on Saturday with both teams needing a victory to tie Springfield. Springfield is assured of a tie even with a loss to UMass. The Redmen then close out their season with the EIGL Championships in Syracuse.

Frosh Stay Close for Half, But Fall to Dartmouth, 72-41

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshmen basketball team travelled to Dartmouth on Saturday and came out on the losing end of a 72-41 score. The score at the half was close, with the Little Redmen only down by six points, 35-29. But the second half was a different story and Dartmouth ran away to its lopsided victory.

The game followed the same pattern that has described UMass freshman basketball in the last couple of weeks. The team is able to stay close for the first half but is unable to keep up its pace in the second half and fails way behind to its opposition. This is caused by fatigue which is the result of playing three basketball games a week for the last three weeks. This amount of games in so short a period of time tends to wear out any team.

If the Redmen had an outstanding player in this game it had to be Joel Saperstein who turned in one of the fine defensive performances of the year. He held James Brown, the backcourt sensation for the Dartmouth Frosh, who has been averaging 30 points a game so far this season, to ten points. A defensive performance like this is noteworthy in anyone's league.

The rest of the game was all Dartmouth, as it showed why it has been rated as one of the top freshman units in New England.

The freshmen oppose the St. Anselm's frosh tomorrow night at six, preceeding the varsity game at St. Anselm's.

Buses Provided

Two Student Senate buses will leave from the Student Union waiting station on N. Pleasant St. at 5:00, Wednesday, February 25th for the St. Anselm's UMass basketball game.

Passengers will not be allowed to board buses without tickets which are available at the Boyden ticket office.

PROTEST ABORTS HHH SPEECH

Rally Charges Humphrey, Plans Disruption

By DON LeBLANC
Staff Reporter

Hubert Humphrey didn't know when he started speaking Tuesday night that his "trial" had begun.

Had he been on campus earlier in the day he might have declared a mistrial on the basis that he had been prejudged guilty before he ever walked into Curry Hicks "courtroom".

Preparations for the trial were laid out Tuesday afternoon when two campus groups held a rally before more than 500 at the Union ballroom condemning the outcome of the Chicago conspiracy trials.

The two groups, the UMass Conspiracy committee and the New University Conference, presented a talk by American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Isidore Silver, a film on Bobby Seale's impressions of the black movement, and a "summons" for Humphrey to appear in "court". Tactics to disrupt the politician's talk were discussed. And it was generally agreed on that Humphrey would be pronounced guilty.

Silver spoke only on Judge Julius Hoffman and the legal implications of the Chicago trial. He told rallygoers that "A Fear-stricken Congress" passed the riot bill, that the Justice Department had been waiting to use it, and that when harassment of radicals with this law was completed, there would be more laws ready to harass them with.

"This incredible law penalizes the mind," he said. "How can it be proven that these people had riot in mind when they crossed the state lines? Maybe it occurred to them afterwards."

He said the defendants were displaying their life-styles in the courtroom when they knew there was no chance of being acquitted.

"What can you do with a stacked deck?" he asked, adding that defense attorney Kuntsler joined with the defendants in their cause.

He said the chance of a reversal of the decision exists because Hoffman himself, rather than another judge, handed down the contempt sentences.

Judge Hoffman, "A political idiot," is not to be considered evil, Silver said.

"He is to be considered pathetic."

Three students dressed in mock judicial robes entered the ballroom with the paper mache head of Hoffman used at the speech later Tuesday night. They handed down long "contempt" sentences to students for merely being at the rally.

The announcement made by the two sponsoring committees was then read. Noting that no witnesses for the defense (Humphrey) would be allowed, Humphrey was charged with:

—"Contempt for the rights of the American people in Chicago, Washington and throughout the nation and, hence, —"Conspiracy against the United States Constitution as demonstrated by the crossing of state lines to incite a riot."

The coalition statement further charged that "The real conspiracy in Chicago is the attempt to stifle the forces working towards a new America. Humphrey is a prominent member of that real conspiracy which has now jailed our brothers...This conspiracy is trying to jail...not merely men but an idea."

A group spokesman continued that "At 1 o'clock we will try Humphrey with contempt for the rights of American people and conspiracy."

The movie on Bobby Seale was shown. It depicted riot scenes showing blacks being beaten, art posters of Huey Newton sitting on an African-style throne with spear and shotgun, and posters of Black Panthers and black children holding weapons. Seale described his treatment in prison and aspects of the black revolution.

At the end of the film many of the large crowd started to leave as group leaders discussed the wide range of definite and possible tactics for disrupting Humphrey's speech.

It was planned that the caricature head of Hoffman would be at the cage.

It was proposed that "bloodbombs" be made and thrown on the stage.

It was announced by one that "I want him to speak for 15 minutes and then disrupt that asshole. After 15 minutes, we have the right."

"If we stop the speech, our purpose is served, and we made our statement. Humphrey is a death force. We are a life force."

It was planned to bring noise makers, signs saying "Guilty", and to be ready to stop the foreign policy speech without enough violence to cause police to be brought in.

Plans were carried out as some students appeared at the cage with noisemakers, construction helmets, popcorn and confetti, and a group stood by to walk on stage with the figurehead dressed in "blind justice" costume.

The address at the cage quickly became a toss-up over who would speak, Humphrey or the demonstrators, and which crowd reaction (jeers or applause) would make the most noise.

Humphrey conceded to answer questions on the Chicago trial before making his foreign policy speech.

He never made the speech to the crowd, and left after 20 minutes. Many students apologized for the disruption as police hustled him out of the building.

This left the cage filled with about 200 students who began arguing among themselves about the disruption.

Humphrey Knocks Nixon Policy

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Hubert H. Humphrey criticized the Nixon administration last night as being "gifted with ambivalence," and described it as a "multiple choice administration."

Speaking before a closed press conference at the Lord Jeffrey Inn, the former Vice-President and DVP guest lecturer told New England newsmen and broadcasters that President Nixon has "defaulted on education, defaulted on civil rights, defaulted on unemployment." He continued that the present administration is "long on public relations but short on public performance." Humphrey feels that "the tide is going to turn on the Republicans due to poor performance in November."

Mr. Humphrey devoted much of his time at the conference to the night's speech at the Cage. He stated that the essential point of his speech was to be that America is at a point in our history where it is "essential that we re-examine our committments and position in the world for the 1970's."

Humphrey spoke of a "new diplomacy" with which the United States should "abandon the doctrine of the Cold War and accept the philosophy of the open window." He continued that the United States has had a pattern of military power and committment which has been "like a prison that holds us." "But all the security of our military defense establishment will be for naught if we ignore the desperate needs of developing nations."

Concerning Vietnam and Southeast Asia, the former VP said that settlement of the war would probably require involvement by both the Soviet Union and Red China. Humphrey said that he regrets that Mr. Nixon has not put more emphasis on negotiations to end the war.

"Vietnam has taught us some lessons," he added, and indicated that he does not believe recent action in Laos will involve the United States.

As to the upcoming Senate election in his home state of Minnesota this November, the former Senator said, "I am giving it serious thought, but anything I have to say I will say in Minnesota."

And as for presidential ambitions in 1972, Mr. Humphrey would only say, "I suggest that there be a change of administrations."

Panelists will include Jay Severeid, president, Amherst Human Relations Council; Mrs. Evangeline R. Darity, educator and civil rights worker; Mason Davis, Chairman, Citizen's Review Commission; and Mrs. Rose Olver, psychologist.

Humphrey Walks Off Stage

By RICHARD LANE – SENIOR REPORTER

Former Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey was forced to cancel a major speech on American foreign policy for the 1970's in the Curry Hicks Cage last night by a group of approximately 250 students chanting "Guilty" and throwing objects such as jelly beans and marshmallows at the DVP guest speaker. A near capacity crowd of about 3500 had attended to hear Humphrey's speech.

Humphrey left with a police escort (through a crowd of jostling students) after attempting for about 15 minutes to answer questions concerning the Chicago 7 conspiracy trial.

A statement from newly appointed Chancellor Oswald Tippo concerning the incident said: "On behalf of the University of Massachusetts community, I apologize to Mr. Humphrey for the disgraceful actions of some demonstrators on Tuesday night. I am ashamed of these disrupters and outraged at their lack of fair play and their disregard of the free speech that they espouse."

One half-hour before Mr. Humphrey arrived, the group of student demonstrators had swarmed into the Cage, blowing horns, carrying signs, displaying balloons, and chanting "We want the Hump." They situated themselves in front and center of the podium. Just before Humphrey's arrival one student took the microphone and stated that the DVP speaker would be allowed 15 minutes to talk and then, "The people are going to give their rebuttal."

Distinguished Visitor Program chairman Mike McKenna told the crowd that due to the popular demand of those interested in Mr. Humphrey's opinions on the Chicago conspiracy trial, Humphrey would devote the first fifteen minutes of his speech to answering questions on the trial and then proceed to his main text.

Mr. Humphrey prefaced his remarks by saying, "I shall try to give answers worthy of a university campus." He was applauded by the majority of students at this point.

The first question he was asked was why he had not spoken out at the time of the Chicago riots, in 1968 or attempted to actually stop them. Humphrey answered, "I didn't provoke the riots," and said that the whole issue represented something everybody should be concerned about. He was interrupted by jeers and thrown objects at this point and demanded that, "We conduct this meeting as we should at a university." He was then cheered by the majority of the crowd again.

Humphrey went on to say that the basic issues involved in the Chicago trial were those of constitutionality of the law.

He stated, "I consider the contempt charges to violate every standard of justice known. I believe that they will be overruled or declared a mistrial."

The former Senator and Vice-President did add however, that "We must have a profound respect for the law." and "I believe in the due process of law of courts." He was applauded by the majority of students at this point.

The jeers, obscenities and foot stomping became so loud at this point, however, that Humphrey could not continue.

Humphrey finally left after one student told him: "We've had enough. It's too late for apologies for a riot you could have prevented. As an outside agitator, you ought to leave right now."

The DVP speaker did say that "I came here with no apologies, none whatsoever." He was applauded.

After Humphrey's departure, one student stated that "Humphrey was speaking and we were answering him. We were absolutely right in what we did."

Impromptu Gathering Discusses Walkout

By BARRY WENDELL
Staff Reporter

In the aftermath of former Vice-President Humphrey's shortened appearance at Curry Hicks Cage, a group of approximately 250 people stayed to discuss the evening's occurances and the effects it may have both in its present context and for future programs at UMass.

A basically impromptu gathering; the group of people who stayed sought to express various viewpoints on why Humphrey had been forced to leave and what the demonstration had accomplished.

Lines formed as persons wishing to make their opinions heard stepped up to microphones originally set up to accommodate Mr. Humphrey. The audience was hushed as the opinions were stated.

It was decided that a meeting would be held today at 4:00 p.m., in the lobby of the Student Union to hold further discussion and to decide what steps might be taken to alleviate last night's actions.

Construction Site Fire Quickly Put Out

A small fire broke out in a crane at the construction site of Tobin Hall, behind the Cage last night. Discovered about 6:30 p.m., the fire took only ten or fifteen minutes to put out. The fire was in an engine, and according to a policeman on the scene, it was due "probably to a shortage in an electrical part". Arson was not suspected.

Mr. Humphrey's lecture on Foriegn Policy will be heard tonight on both WFCR and WMUA radios at 11:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

EVEN FLYING IN, HUMPHREY had trouble. The flight came in late and landed in Barnes Airport at Westfield, rather than at Westover as expected. He was greeted at the airport by DVP and the Boston press (MDC photo by Bill Dickinson).

Five New ABM Sites Urged In Expansion of Safeguard

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon urged Congress Tuesday to permit expansion of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system to shield a third U. S. offensive missile base and start toward building five additional ABM sites.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said "this is the minimum we can do and must do" in the face of a growing Soviet and Red Chinese nuclear threat, while the United States and Russia attempt to negotiate arms limitation.

"In view of the continued growth of the Soviet threat and the prospect of Chinese deployment of an ICBM force in the mid-1970's, we could not justify delaying a further step to protect ourselves against these dangers," Laird told the Senate Armed Services Committee and defense appropriations subcommittee.

"Given President Nixon's determination to postpone additional actions on U. S. offensive systems this year in order to advance prospects for success at the strategic arms limitation talks SALT, further progress on Safeguard deployment becomes the only viable course available in fiscal year 1971."

Laird said the expansion plans calls for building one additional Safeguard defense complex at Whiteman Air Force Base in Missouri and advance preparation work for five other sites - without a deployment commitment - in the New England area, the Pacific North/west, the Michigan-Ohio region, the Washington, D.C. sector, and Warren Air Force Base, home of other major Minuteman missiles, in Wyoming.

Counting two Minuteman sites authorized for ABM protection last year, this would move the Pentagon into work on 8 of the 12 ABM positions designed to give the United States protection from Soviet and States protection from Soviet or Chinese missile attacks, starting in the mid-1970s.

Laird also recommended that the defenses at the first two ABM complexes, at Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota and Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana be provided with additional short range Sprint missiles to complement long range Spartan defensive missiles.

Deputy secretary of Defense David Packard, in a statement read for him, disclosed that the price of the full 12-site Safeguard system has risen $1.6 billion since last year to a new total of $11.9 billion. He blamed inflation and a stretch-out in the program.

Both Packard and Dr. John S. Foster Jr., the Pentagon research and engineering chief, expressed satisfaction with the technical progress and management of the program although acknowledged some problems.

Foster said the Pentagon has under development an improved Spartan which will give wider defensive coverage with a smaller war head and much higher intercept speed.

No specific locations were listed for the sites in the Northeast, the Northwest or Michigan-Ohio.

BU Students End Strike

BOSTON (AP) - Leaders of striking Boston University students ended Tuesday a strike and classroom boycott which began Monday.

The end was announced after three student spokesmen presented their four demands to a meeting of the administration's University Council, a board of the deans of the various colleges.

The strike was called to protest what students called "political repression."

The students also presented three demands drafted by a black students' group seeking black autonomy and higher non-white enrollments.

Meanwhile, about half of the school's enrollment of 17,000 stayed away from classes during the strike's second day. There were no incidents as more than 200 pickets outside university buildings continued their policy of allowing non-strikers to get to their classes.

University officials praised the peaceful conduct of the strike, saying "it holds the promise of new understanding."

A Student Union officer, who declined to be identified, said the administration response to the demands was "non-committal" and "like saying nothing." She said the strike would be discontinued because it was a "symbolic act." Student Union leaders termed the strike successful in that now "thousands and thousands of students are more aware of the issues."

The administration announced in a resolution following the meeting with students that many of the students concerns expressed in the demands "are shared by faculty and administration."

The resolution supported the call for a meeting of students, faculty, and administration representatives on March 12 to discuss "problems related to governance" of the university.

Students had demanded withdrawal of a court injunction prohibiting disruptive demonstrations, a new judicial system to protect student demonstrators, granting of tenure to a professor who was denied tenure after seven years of service, and an end to proposed investigations of the political activities of two professors.

State and Municipal Officials Ask Nixon to Clean Up Nations' Waters

WASHINGTON (AP) - State and municipal officials called on the government Tuesday to deliver on promises to clean the nation's waters.

Gov. Marvin Mandel of Maryland said he was "shocked when President Nixon requested only 21 percent of the authorized amounts" to finance anti-pollution programs under way for several years.

Mandel told the Water Pollution Control Federation that, "if the national goal is to provide secondary sewage treatment plants for all communities in five years, the federal appropriation must equal about $1.85 billion a year."

"Despite the default in the appropriation schedule" set by Congress, Mandel said, his state's goal to provide secondary treatment throughout the state by 1971 will be met.

Mandel said he suspects that "the Treasury would rather see water pollution than have sewage treatment plant construction financed with tax free bonds."

"These suspicions might explain," he said, "the glaring discrepancies between the laws passed by the Congress and the President's budget requests."

Mandel urged Nixon to direct the Treasury Department and the Budget Bureau "to get in step with the rest of the nation and fight pollution."

James R. Ellis, appearing for Seattle, Wash., and the nation's larger cities, urged Nixon "at the very least to re-establish the credibility of federal promises to make clean water a reality."

Ellis recommended establishment of incentive grants to larger cities to build new disposal facilities, particularly for those that "have been short changed by their failure to receive the full amount" of federal assistance authorized.

John L. Salisbury, executive secretary of the Maine Municipal Association, said "the nearly unanimous opinion of municipal governments, large and small," supports the view of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, that pollution control programs are "slogan rich and action poor."

Salisbury, speaking for smaller cities, said they want adequate grams.

Pill Possibly Causes Mental Depression

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two doctors told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday they suspect birth control pills can cause mental depression so severe it could drive a user to suicide.

But a woman specialist sharply criticized the subcommittee and said earlier testimony linking the pill to a wide number of other side effects had created an international panic and a wave of unwanted pregnancies.

"I think much of the previous testimony has been rather like a bikini - what it has uncovered has been interesting but what it has left concealed is vital," said Dr. Elizabeth Connell of Columbia University.

"We are just beginning now to see the first of the pregnancies of women who panicked in January, stopped their pills, and did not seek or use another means of birth control," she said.

Dr. Connell, a petite, blonde mother of six, said that although these women will not be called to testify "they now bear within their bodies mute testimony to the effectiveness of induced fear."

Dr. Connell testified before the Senate monopoly subcommittee headed by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

Parietal's Have Come A Long Way

By PATRICIA KING
Staff Reporter

There was once a time, only a few short years ago, when UMass co-eds had curfews of 7:00 on weeknights and 10:00 on weekends and open house was every other Sunday afternoon. We've come a long way, baby! Housing regulations have undergone a tremendous change in the past few years and the "babysitter" role of the dormitory is fading fast. Now students are free to come and go as they please and assume the responsibility to take care of themselves.

One of the major changes has been in open house policy. Liberalization of parietals is beginning everywhere, but at few universities is 24-hour open house a reality. At the Board of Trustees meeting in Lee last fall, the decision was made that the dorms would have the right to determine their open house policies. Now there are about 25 dorms on 24-hour open house.

Security is the main concern of the University in this situation. In order for a dorm to go on 24-hour a security measure must be drawn up and ratified by a majority vote of the residents. The measure is then submitted to Whitmore for examination by a committee of students and faculty. If approved, it is reviewed by Chancellor Tippo, who decides the final action. Out of the approximately 25 security proposals presented, only one was rejected.

The usual security procedure is that a guest must be escorted in and out by a resident of the dorm after lock-up. This system allows the women's dorms to lock up earlier, especially on weekends, so that the only males in the dorm are guests of a resident.

Associate Dean of Students Fitzpatrick, who handles all matters concerning residence halls, has received a handful of isolated complaints about the 24-hour policy. These usually come from students living in dorms on 24-hour but who do not personally approve. In some cases, 24-hour may have been voted in by only a slight majority, leaving a large percentage of the residents uphappy. In order to alleviate this type of problem, Dean Fitzpatrick suggested the possibility of each dorm having its own "character," that is, one dorm being established as a quiet dorm and another as a liberal one. This way, students would be able to choose under which conditions they would like to live and there would be more general concensus on house rules and policies.

Placement of incoming freshmen presents another problem. A floor may be composed of upperclassmen who chose that particular floor because it had previously been quiet. However, the arrival of a few rambunctious freshmen can destroy the atmosphere of the floor and create a conflict between the "established" upperclassmen and the "squatter" freshmen. If the freshman's attitudes and characteristics could be predetermined during summer orientation for instance, he could be placed in a dorm where the atmosphere was more suitable to his personality, thus eliminating a large part of the initial adjustment.

Rotary Club Conducts Fellowship Interviews

The Rotary Club of Amherst will conduct interviews with candidates for a Rotary Foundation Fellowship toward the end of February. Cage Confrontation

The minority of students who prevented Hubert Humphrey from delivering his speech in the cage last night were possibly justified. But their actions are justifiable only if the oppression, inequality and frustration that exists in this country has reached such monstrous proportions that it is not reversable within the governmental system of the United States. The question as to whether or not the injustice in this country can be corrected within the system actually depends on the individual and the way he thinks, for the simple reason that we are not all oppressed, we do not all feel the injustice and degradation that a minority of the people feel.

To express the belief that the minority cannot obtain equality through the system is to say much more than that they are justified in their actions. This belief expresses the opinion that ideals and constitutional rights must be scrapped in order to implicate a more forceful and immediate remedy to the problem of oppression. And most of us are not ready to relinquish the "old process"; the process of argument, deliberation and legislative action.

And it is a great injustice, in turn, to those people who are conscientious enough to attempt to change things by using old procedures, for a minority to simply say, "We have had it" and "We are doing things our way; the man you want to listen to tonight cannot speak because he is a man of inaction, a phony."

Most of the people in the cage last night wanted to listen to Humphrey. Their right to listen belongs to them as much as the minorities right to protest. And the minorities right to protest is absolutely vital to any democratic process which we hope to initiate and perpetuate. The demonstrators decidedly misused their right to protest by manifesting themselves as a verbal contradiction to everything they claim to stand for - freedom, to put it simply.

There was an attempt to let Humphrey speak and answer the few questions that were asked of him, but this attempt was short lived.

And it seems that we are all dragging ourselves down when we allow such a small number of students to make a shambles of an individual's verbal presentation. And those students who allowed themselves to be emotionally pulled into the demonstration were as much to blame, if not moreso. Hopefully many of the people who participated in the demonstration believed in what they were doing. Those who climbed on the bandwagon when "things got exciting" were, sadly, only conditional radicals, momentary reformists.

If only Humphrey had been allowed to speak, we could have at least discovered what kind of political philosophy he harbors in his mind. As it stood, Humphrey was not given the chance that any one of us would ask for, and expect, in that situation.

And this is deplorable, and very wrong.

Black and Beautiful

To the editor:

Before the culture and civilization of Egypt took shape, there had come into being a new group of people, neither basically Mediterranean, Semitic, non-Ethiopian, but Egyptian, the sum total of the intermingling.

The picture that one can derive of the physical appearance of the Egyptian depends on the source of the description and the period for which the observation is made. Doubtless, many were "black and curly-haired" as Herodutus described them in the Fifth Century before Christ. Homer and other Greek writers regarded the Egyptians as Black. The art pieces that have been recovered by archeologists show a great variation in the appearance of the Egyptians, ranging from the Mediterranean type with features usually associated with Caucasians to the distinctly Black type.

If each of the racial groups that entered Egypt shared in the creation of a new ethnic group, they also shared in the development of the civilization that was to gain for Egypt the title - "A cradle of civilization."

The constant infiltration of Black people from the South and the DOMiNATION by Blacks of the country's political life in its later stages of development cannot be regarded in the evaluation of the sources of cultures and civilization in ancient Egypt.

But within less than a century of Black infiltration and domination, a Black, Ra Naheri, was on the throne. From time to time, after 1703 B.C. when a new empire was founded, Blacks occupied positions of responsibility and honor in the Egyptian government. Nefertari, the wife of Ahmose I, Egypt's great imperial leader, was a Black woman "of great beauty, strong personality, and remarkable administrative ability, as are all Black sisters. As the co-founder of Egypt's Eighteenth Dynasty, her descendants who were to rule after Ahmose I were Black and beautiful.

These dynasties lasted until 741 B.C. At this time the Ethiopian's Piankhi took control unti 670 B.C. Under this domination the Blacks of Nubia helped to construct the great Sphinxes, pyramids, and public buildings of Egypt.

The Minoan Civilization came into being before 2000 B.C. as you said Mr. Carey, but since I have just related some data to you to the fact that Early Egypt was a Black civilization, let me relate some more. Even before 3000 B.C. there was a large industrial population in Egypt. Men were engaged in mining, metallurgy, brickmaking, masonry, carpentry, tanning, weaving, and "ship-building." Craftsmen working in their own shops, the estates of the great landlords, or in the royal workhouses, producing works of such utility and beauty that any age would be proud to claim them as examples of "Minoan Civilization."

So Mr. Carey, I hope you have realized by now that the Ethiopians were also black, and were an existing civilization during the time of Egypt.

You have been victimized and become part of the White Racist, White-washed, White-dominated historical structure of the White Europeans and Americans. And it seems to me that you are totally unfamiliar with, and will remain unfamiliar with anything that is black as long as you remain hung up in the White Egotism of this society.

Boosted To 7%

To the editor:

The Administration of the University is trying to channel student protest over rent into an effort to get the State Legislature to boost the ceiling on interest rates for long term bonds issued by the Massachusetts Building Authority. Presently the ceiling is 5% and the Administration would like to see it boosted to 7%.

The Administration claims that the inability to float bonds at the present interest rate ceiling is the reason for the rent hike. HOWEVER THE ADMINISTRATION HAS NEVER BOTHERED TO COMPUTE WHAT SAVINGS THERE WOULD BE, IF ANY, IF IT COULD LEGALLY FLOAT BONDS AT 7%. I base this statement on two days of phone conversation with Mr. Brand's secretary. (I was never able to get through to talk to Mr. Brand directly.) During those conversations I repeatedly asked what would be the rent increase if the University could float 7% bonds. The answer was that Mr. Brand did not know and did not have the time to find out.

Before the student body commits itself to fight for a higher interest rate ceiling I think they might inquire whether any money is saved with those 7% bonds.

Frat "Coolness"

To the editor:

When will the fraternity brothers on this campus start acting like intelligent and mature human beings? When will these simple-minded little "kids" stop getting their kicks from assanine and ill-rumored stunts? When will an innocent passer-by be able to walk to the Newman Center without being pounded by a barrage of snowballs from twenty loudmouth children on the nearby roof? When will these senseless people understand that everyone doesn't enjoy their bad humor as they lead themselves to believe? When will these boys start practicing brotherhood, rather than trying to impress themselves with their "coolness"? Brothers, grow up !!!

Cover of Night

It is most unfortunate that the caviar minds from the strained babysilt of these sturgenous regions have not, as far as all current knowledge indicates, tuned in to the grand smorgasborg smacking of vital vittle-vibrations that hyenas boast so carelessly and snakes subtly wag glassy tongues over... But we will be among the limited who heave the means to go off and plant the passing hoopla into our greek . . . Those swiney-faced bastards can't fool with us, can they! "No!" answered one of the termites. "We'll eat their wooden idols down until they are disgusted with worshipping the toothpicks we left behind . . . when their gums start to rot and their mouths are full of leftovers!"

That being said, the portable oracle was wheeled away and the infinite army picked up the task with its many tiny fingers and passed beneath the gates leading to the white house, clicking rabid jaws under cover of the night . . .

Listen-Speak Out

You cannot work for peace if you are fighting for war. You cannot confront for peace, and you cannot be peaceful for war.

You cannot deny freedom to others, yet wish it for yourself.

A revolutionary is a son, and a pig is a dad. Humanity's something in common that they have always had. You can hate the way this world is, and still love your god.

You must let Bobby Seale speak, but also Strom Thurmond.

Freedom of speech is not irrelevant. Neither is action. But action without articulation is futile.

I learned a little about Hubert Humphrey last night. His aides had been told of the pending demonstration, and they suggested that he have a question and answer period after the speech. Mike McKenna, chairman of the D.V.P., began what I felt would be a futile attempt to have Mr. Humphrey pacify the mob by having a question and answer period before the speech. Before Mike had finished his first sentence of rhetoric, Mr. Humphrey stopped him, gently explaining, "You know, I'd much rather speak to the people and answer questions than make an address. Of course I'll have the question and answer period any time you wish." That's what kind of man Hubert Humphrey is.

I hope that Hubert Humphrey does not run for President. He cannot unite people who are not even willing to listen to him.

People who shout "Power to the People", yet deny that power, people who advocate Peace through confrontation, people who use their bodies only, and never their minds, I am confident that they will lose the revolution before Hubert Humphrey loses his integrity.

Time And Time Again

To the Editor:

We would like to respond to the letter of Feb. 22 in which Mr. Bresner and Mr. Hoyt expressed their dissatisfaction with the way the Sophomore class is being run. We, too, have been dissatisfied with the way the Class of '72 has been run since November 1968. In November and again in April 1969, less than 25% of the class took enough interest in the class to even vote for officers! Time and time again, the officers have appealed for sophomores to take an active part in the running of the class. The result of these appeals is that less than 1% of the class even bothers to come to class executive meetings. On Tuesday, February 17, class officers were to be elected to fill vacancies, and 27 people showed up. Where were you, Mr. Hoyt? Where were 3,400 other sophomores? Where have these 3,400 sophomores been for over a year and a half? They surely haven't been participating in running the class. They haven't been working on S.E.N.D.O.F.F., and the other functions that the class has sponsored. You say that the class is not being run well, and we certainly agree with you.

The reason for this lack of well run government is that it is impossible for five class officers to do everything. One officer spent so much time working for the class that he flunked out. Another worked so hard that he's close to flunking out. Finally, another did his best and then realized that much of his work had been in vain. He resigned in frustration. The class officers have tried and tried, and failed. But it was not their fault. Did you really think that these five people were superhumans? The failure will go on unless people stop sitting on their hands and complaining, and start to do something about making class government work.

POWER TO THE PEOPLE? Not unless the people are willing to accept the responsibility and hard work that goes with it. So far, only a few sophomores in this entire University have shown this willingness.

Who Are Some of Your Best Friends

To The Editor:

You said that some of your best friends are....You did not finish , for this I sympathize, meaning I pity you! You obviously perceived your potential hypocricy in concluding such a statement.

You claim you have asked yourself, "are you prejudice?", but "brother" that is not enough, instead you should ask yourself, "have Black people been treated justly and humanely by my people?" (Have any different people been treated justly by your people?). Then, being a non-prejudiced person, "brought up so well" take a good deep look around you. You claim you respect people for what they are, yet you fail to realize or regard the significance of what Black people are desperately striving to accomplish.

We desire only to convince some inhumane humans of our own humanity. Now can you dig that?!! Your respect for people apparently does not extend to the Black race. You have not seen any prejudice on campus you said; yet have you ever looked into a mirror? Look again!!!

We do not desire your paternalistic tokenism, this seems to be what you offer by saying that if we want your help, you will give it. Being "brought up so well" I am sure you are quite capable of doing this, however, retreat with your condescending awry.

"You cannot like anyone who hates you simply because you are stereotyped as a white bigot." That is the most ludicrous piece of rationalization that I have heard yet.

Speaking of libraries, it is you who have a great need to go and sit there for a while. Read some of the history written concerning Blacks written by your own people. Then add a spice of your imagination if you can, (since you have been brought up so well). Take a look around at my people even now, freed from the physical bonds of slavery, but chained even more intently psychologically and economically, but with a more subtle form of slavery, "Mental Anguish". To all of this new knowledge and observation, add your sense of justice; subtract some of your prejudices if you can; then you tell me "Masuh" who some of your best friends are.

I cry with a burning, aching, terrifying sound, but it is not one of hate, no, I do not hate you; I am beyond that now. It is a cry of pity that you will hear resounding from my choked breath, pity for those like you. I have long transcended the need for tears, my ancestors have done quite enough. Instead, I bleed and watch, and wait in my Blackness devoid of hate or love for that matter, but don't worry your well-brought-up self at all. This is not your problem, since you are not prejudiced, but do me this one favor - the next time you see any Black sad, angry, terrifying face, tell them for me "brother," "who are some of your best friends? !!!"

What Can You Say About Hate?

To The Editor:

What can you, John Schavone, say about hate? Don't you realize that all of us regardless of skin pigmentation have a tendency to hate whether it is due to color or personality differences? But the basic thing is that "too much of your life will be lost, its meaning lost, unless you approach it as much through love as through hate..." It is not so much that my Black brothers and sisters who participated in the take over of the four buildings at Amherst College did this out of hate, on the contrary, this was done to show the administrators in the five area colleges that the Black people at these institutions are together. Although the administrators at Amherst College and the other schools pretended to be shocked by this incident, it still remains to be seen what good will come out of it. One could hear various comments made by students and some faculty to the tune of "what do those niggers think they are doing?;, "why did they take over those buildings at such a nice campus as Amherst?" and other unsavory comments. Each individual Black person is imprinted by his own personal experience of indignity and the combined resentment causes revolution. Violence results when the power structure fails to respond to the peaceful nonviolent demonstrations.

We are now awaiting to hear whether a true Black Studies Program will be instituted at the University of Massachusetts. This is one of the reasons for the take over of buildings at Amherst College, for Blacks feel that meaningful courses in all facets of Black life should be instituted in the regular college curriculum.

Man, try if you can to put yourself in the Black man's position. If you had been dehumanized, emasculated, and subjugated, would you still love? It is hard as hell to love someone when that same someone is perpetrating pain on you without consideration to the possible ill effects. In the South the white man has misused Blacks physically, but in the North he has misused us mentally.

You spoke of not seeing "any cases of displayed prejudice on campus." The prejudice that exists on this campus is not as overt as it is in the South, but very subtle. Whether you have not seen any degree of such is questionable.

You also had the audacity to suggest to the Blacks, who were in one of the buildings, a library, to do "a bit of reading." What in the hell can the Black man read that he has not already experienced???? "The really important lesson to learn in life is that it is the man who should be respected, not his education. A man has gained nothing in life if his education is respected and his manhood is not."

If you want to help in trying to change prejudiced people, I suggest that you start with yourself. Look not around at the prejudices of others, but run straight along your course without straying from it, for "if you are not part of the solution, then you are part of the problem."

Somnolscent!

To the editor:

Mr. Glickstein, in comparing Tim Hardin to beer, Pete Seeger to vintage wine, James Taylor to aspirin, Judy Collins to grass and Odetta to a mind-blowing tab of acid, has said a great deal about himself and his capabilities for criticizing musical performances. Perhaps he should have stopped there. The article goes on to point out in the second paragraph that Taylor "is an entertaining performer, considerate to his audience (unlike Tim Hardin). His comedy bits are amusing, his love songs, moody, his ballads interesting, his blues adequate." The next paragraph states that "Because Taylor was so monotonous, I found myself spending most of the evening wondering how long the people sitting on the railing of the balcony could sit there before they fell off." The last paragraph indicates another subtle shift in Glickstein's critical perceptiveness as Taylor becomes "a soothing, somnolescent performer."

While I believe that Mr. Glickstein spent the evening wondering about the people on the balcony railing, I find it hard to believe that he admitted it. But then, there it was in black and white. Glickstein missed the solid standing ovation the audience gave Taylor. They were just so bored. He also missed a fine performance by one of the most talented singer-song writers he will ever see. Taylor's prominence is not due to Apple Records. Excluding the Beatles, how many artists on Apple have any prominence? None. James Taylor is prominent because of the lyrics and melodies to "Carolina On My Mind", "Rainy Day Man", "Sunshine Sunshine" "Sweet Baby James" "Something in the Way She Moves" "Country Road", "Fire and Rain", "Blossom", "Anywhere Like Heaven" and the warmest voice in modern music.

A critic who changes his mind three times in one article about a single performance must be bored. I do hope Don Glickstein "prospers and keeps alive a pure" critical perceptiveness; "I hope he does so without pretention, without gimmicks, and with a lot of soul" because there is a definite need for unhappy fops that think they know how to critizine performers.

Glickstein, why don't you catch Tommy Roe's next performance? You're just brilliant.

JOHN PIERCE

(Editor's note: "Somnolescent" means "inclined to sleep". A performer can be entertaining, considerate, amusing, interesting, moody, and adequate, yet if there is too much of him, he can be monotonous. Just because an audience gives a performer a standing ovation, it does not mean that the performer is good or of a high quality. Tommy Roe, too, gets standing ovations. As to lyrics and melodies, well, I still say that Rich Iacovelli from our own UMass has more skill and sensitivity. I sincerely hope that James Taylor does prosper, not because he is great, but simply because mediocrity in folk music is better than no music at all. Mr. Pierce, there is no need to remind me that I'm brilliant. Don G.)

Who Ought to Read?

TO The Editor:

Part I:

I had just sat down to read the MDC, here in the Commonwealth Room, when I overheard three white 'men' talking about "It's been my experience between black families and white...." 'Experience' was a key word. I listened. To sum up a common, but no less disgusting conversation, they were saying that they would not rent or sublet to black people -- if at all avoidable -- because "it had been their experience" that black people did not know how to take care of a place. "They are usually dirty, messy, and destructive". Further, of course, they had to say that "it has nothing to do with race, color or creed", but "damn it, those are the facts". All agreed all felt comfortable. All looked like they had just eaten a big meal; a kind of white satisfaction for these three that has been going on for centuries.

Part 2:

Then I started reading the letter by John Schavone. First of all, Mr. Schavone, maybe you had better try asking somebody besides yourself "am I prejudiced?" Unless you believe in those magic mirrors that ugly old witches use in fairy tales. Oh yes. You say you were brought up well. Good white tradition? Why, then, you probably do.

You have never been in any direct contact with your white brothers of the South? Well, I'm sure you'd all get along fine. Brother.

Man, nobody cares to watch you "show" how unprejudiced you are. We've already seen enough. And nobody cares for your "help", either. You say a large majority of the people on campus have been brought up as you have. Yeah, well there's your stereotype, baby. You're making one out of yourself. And, by the way, it's also become stereotypical that one of the sure signs of a bigot is a "liberal" telling how unprejudiced he is. -- Just a notation for the next time you go talkin' to your magic mirror.

And if anybody needs to do a bit of reading! Man, simple history should have taught you who taught who how to hate. Even white textbooks tell about slavery, about the "white man's burden", and about segregation. I know; I had those textbooks, too. All ya' gotta' do is think a little bit, White Man. Think about your white brothers in the South. We hear about them every day. Think about the Chicago trials. That's happening right now, too. Think and read and learn. The truth about you and hatred and prejudice just ain't that hard to see!

But now you're going to say, "but I didn't have anything to do with slavery or segregation or the Chicago trials." Yeah, o.k., White Man, there have been books written for that response, too. Go read them. You've already received more attention than you deserve.

MANDATE FOR REAL CHANGE

We all want to see things changed. The problem is finding the best way to get the job done. Recently, I, together with several others, charged off to make our impact on society. We were part of several groups working to help some blacks who had been displaced by an urban renewal project. By picketing the shop owners, we hoped we could force them to bring pressure on City Hall to give the blacks better housing.

After picketing for an hour, the unexpected occurred. The Tuesday Slumlords, the local answer to the Hell's Angels, approached us with baseball bats wrapped in brown paper. A law student got his wrist smashed. The rest of us either dropped our signs or had them knocked out of our hands. When the police arrived, the Slumlords disappeared, fearing a debut with the City Judge. Now let's review: the police chased the Slumlords, the Lords chased us, chased the merchants so they would put the heat on City Hall. In each case the motivating force for change was fear.

The graduate students and the Slumlords were using the same motivating force for change — Hit 'em again, Harder! Harder! Some commentary on a college education. Since then I've found there ar two great motivating forces for change — love and fear — and that they are mutually exclusive. "Perfect love casts out fear.' Real change in society takes place when a significant number of men are changed on the inside. This change takes place when a man comes into a vital dynamic, and living relationship with Jesus Christ.

How to come into this relationship with Christ is not immediately apparent. First, we must face up to the fact that morality is not just the other man's problem. We all qualify as losers as we can's cover up our own sins of hate, jealousy, envy and greed. Through his death and resurrection, Christ is able to forgive man for his moral inadequacy. By trusting Him to forgive your sin and come into your life, you gain His love and power. "For as mny as received Him, to them He gives the power to become the sons of God." (John 1:12) This a conditioned promise. As we meet His condition, He honors His promise and gives us His power and love in a personal way.

This love makes for real changes in society because it transforms the individual while fear forces the individual to act without changing his inner attitudes. Love therefore, is the more creative and brings about lasting change.

The Guarneri String Quartet will make their debut concert at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Friday evening, February 27th in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. This event brings to the attention of area music lovers one of the youngest and most highly respected string quartets in the world today.

Guarneri Quartet Plays at Bowker

The Guarneri String Quartet, which performs the fourth Chamber Music Series event of the season at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst Friday, Feb. 27, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, is composed of four outstanding young American artists, each a well-known figure in the world of music.

The collaboration of these artists is a result of years of playing chamber music together at the Marlboro Musical Festival in Vermont and the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico.

The Guarneri String Quartet has received warm praise of its performances by leading music critics in this country and abroad.

For its performance at the University Friday evening, the Guarneri will perform a program reflecting interesting contrasts of style. A major Beethoven work will be performed in commemoration of that composer's current bicentennial celebration. The complete program includes Mozart's String Quartet No. 22 in B Flat, K. 589; "Lyric Suite for String Quartet" (1926) by the great Austrian composer Alban Berg and Beethoven's Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95.

Reserved tickets may now be ordered through the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Prices are $1 for UMass undergraduates; $2 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3 for the general public. Remaining tickets will be available at the door before the concert.

Kronick Performs Tonight In Solo Cello Recital

Joel Krosnick, the young American cellist on the faculty of the University of Massachusetts of Amherst will offer his only solo recital of the season Wednesday, Feb. 25 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Joining Mr. Krosnick on this occasion will be assisting artists Harriet Wingreen and Charles Wuorinen, pianists.

Mr. Krosnick is one of the most widely traveled among today's cellists. As a member of The New York Chamber Soloists, Mr. Krosnick has recently completed an extensive tour of the West Coast and the Orient. The past fall has seen Mr. Krosnick giving concerts throughout Europe. Critical acclaim of his performance has been great. The Washington Post commented that Mr. Krosnick "is an artist in the real sense: he and his instrument are one and he follows or leads it as the occasion demands. There are moments of exquisite sentiment, of resounding declamation, of delicate grace. His whole manner is masterly."

Throughout Mr. Krosnick's career, he has devoted a great deal of attention to the compositions by today's composers. Among premiere performances of leading American contemporary composers credited to Joel Krosnick have been works by Ralph Shapey, Charles Wuorinen, Stefan Wolo, Milton Babbit and others. For his program at the University on Feb. 25, Mr. Krosnick continues this interest by including the premiere of Mr. Wuorinen's "Adaptingto the Times" for cello and piano in which the composer will be featured as pianist. Also on the program will be the Sonata for Cello and Piano in F Major, Opus 6 by Richard Strauss; Suite No. 3 in C, Major for unaccompanied cello by Bach and Bela Bartok's First Rhapsody.

This concert is sponsored by the department of music, University of Massachusetts and is oepn to the public without charge.

MHC Displays Concrete Poetry

An exhibit entitled Experiments in Concrete Poetry opened last Sunday at the Laboratory Theater on the Mount Holyoke College campus. It is a collection of seven new constructions of Jim Slavas, currently instructing Photography at the College. Through his work, Mr. Slavas has attempted to free poetry from the limitations of the two dimensional printed page; to achieve an integration of the poem and environment.

The poems themselves are printed on layers of plexi-glass sheets, and an environment imposed upon them. Physical depth is utilized to impart a new rythmn to the poems, and the reader is encouraged to play an active part in determining the poems' physical and emotional structures.

In all the pieces, the poetry is foremost, with the supporting structures playing a secondary role emphasizing what is felt in the poems. These are Jim Slavas' most recent writings. They are of some impending death: depressed and emotional.

The gallery will be open daily from 9 to 5. The show closes on Sunday, March 7.

School of Education Program. CSEI Spreads Ideas Throughout Country

From Prince William County, Va., to Bellows Falls, Vt., new educational ideas are being sifted into schools by a UMass School of Education program called CSEI --Center for the Study of Educational Innovations.

CSEI director Robert L. Sinclair believes many promising educational ideas "have been too long on the bookshelves and too scarce in the classrooms." The aim of CSEI is to disseminate new educational ideas--involving as many people, as many methods and as many places as possible.

In Virginia and Vermont, in Keene, N.H., Montclair, N.J., Syracuse, N.Y., and in Massachusetts CSEI is directing projects in a variety of school settings - individual classrooms, single schools and total school systems. "Emphasis is on a cooperative approach," Sinclair explained.

In Bellows Falls, Vt., CSEI is assisting social studies teachers to develop techniques of individualizing instruction and to deal with value issues in the classroom. CSEI and the Boston Globe are sponsoring a joint project in curriculum development using the daily newspaper as a primary curriculum resource.

CSEI is studying the total school system as it relates to the community and the future in Keene, N.H. and is working with the staff of Bishop Grimes High School in Syracuse, N.Y., to improve the instructional program, with emphasis on the use of large and small group instruction.

In Montclair, N.J., CSEI is working with teachers, principals, and central office staff to define a program for determining teacher effectiveness. In Montpelier, Vt., CSEI is helping develop a new science program in elementary schools. In the small Stamford Elementary School in rural Vermont, CSEI staff are working with teachers to help them identify and use resources to initiate change.

A joint project with the Milton Bradley Co. of Springfield will study the use of toys for enriching the educational environment of children. A long-term project in West Springfield is seeking a model for curriculum improvement, looking for a design that will involve the whole school system in determing what needs to be taught.

The Prince William County project is a three-year program to improve the curriculum, instruction and school organization of 26 elementary and secondary schools. Already, principals and teachers have initiated more than 60 innovative programs.

In addition CSEI is involved in two major Massachusetts research projects. A teacher inservice needs survey has queried 3000 teachers from a variety of school systems in the Commonwealth to determine the needs for inservice education.

A joint research project between the Bureau of Curriculum and Innovations of the State Department of Education and CSEI is the elementary school environment survey. The purpose is to describe the diversity and similarity of educational environments in about 60 elementary and middle schools in the state. Over 5000 students reported their perceptions of conditions and happenings in randomly selected schools. Findings are scheduled for release this spring.

Prof. Lyon to Speak On Environment, Monday

Irving Lyon, professor of Biology at Bennington College, will speak Monday, March 2 on "Environmental Science - Bridge Between Community and College" at the Amherst Science Center at Amherst College. This speech will be the fifth in a series of lectures on Science in the Liberal Arts, by Hampshire Colleges School of Natural Science and Mathematics for the benefit of the Five-College Community.

Dr. Lyon was educated at UCLA and Berkeley where he obtained a Ph. D. in physiology in 1952. He has been a Rockefeller Foundation Fellow at Harvard, an industrial biologist, a researcher at the Presbyterian-St. Luke Hospital in Chicago and a biochemist at the Chicago Medical School. His current research interest concerns the effect of environmental pollutants on fundamental biochemical and physiological processes.

The series brings distinguished visitors to the Five-College Community for the purpose of exchanging ideas on the role of science in the liberal arts.

Each Lecture is designed to appeal to a broad audience and introduces a topic of interest to students, faculty, and friends of Five Colleges. Admission free. For more information call 542-2031.

Safety Directions Available For March 7 Total Eclipse

The Reader's Digest will distribute as a public service 200,000 free reprints of safety instructions for viewing the total eclipse of the sun which occurs on March 7, 1970. The instructions are part of an article entitled, "Big Black out Coming!" appearing in the Digest's March issue.

The Digest is eager to have this safety information reach as many families as possible along the path of totality since improper viewing of the eclipse can cause irreparable damage to the eyes.

Reprints will be sent to Superintendents of Schools in charge of over 4,000 schools in 14 states and the District of Columbia--the area along the Eastern seaboard which lies in the path of the eclipse. Superintendents are requested to distribute the safety suggestions to schools in their districts and to send copies to local newspapers.

To avoid eye damage, the article suggests using either of two safety methods when viewing the eclipse:

1) Focus the sun's rays through a pencil-sized hole in a piece of white cardboard and let the light shine on a sheet of white paper held about five feet from the cardboard. Make sure your back is to the sun.

2) View the sun through two thicknesses of a completely exposed roll of black and white film developed to maximum density.

Rampaging Redmen Face St. Anselm's

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

After winning ten of their last eleven contests, the red hot Redman basketball team goes after its eighth straight victory tonight as it travels to Manchester, N.H. for a game with St. Anselm's College. Game time is scheduled for 8 o'clock and will be preceded by a battle between the freshman teams of both schools at 6 o'clock.

The Hawks come into the contest with a 14-7 record which includes an impressive win over Rhode Island and an overtime win over AIC. Both of these teams have already defeated UMass.

Leading St. Anselm's will be 6'7 pivotman Dave Sturma who was named to the New England College Division Second All-Star Team last night. Sturma leads the Hawks in both scoring and rebounding, averaging 20.5 points and 12 caroms a contest. Also slated to start up front will be Mike Mulligan, a 6'6 forward from Bronx, N.Y., and John Lukas from Hartford, Conn. Lukas is known primarily as a rebounder while Mulligan is considered a fine shooter.

Starting in the backcourt will be Tom Gentile. The North Adams native is averaging 17 points a game for the Hawks. His running mate against UMass will be either Ray Moore or Gerry Lyle. Moore missed much of last season with an injury but has come back this year and is a fine playmaker. Lyle is only a sophomore but was the leading scorer on last year's freshman squad and is a good shooter.

UMass will have to be wary of the Hawks and can expect a very tough game, especially since it is in Manchester. The Redmen cannot afford another loss with NIT bids now going out.

REDMAN RANTINGS — Speaking of tournament bids, the NCAA sent out five bids yesterday. Reciplents were Villanova, St. Bonaventure, Notre Dame, Niagara and Jacksonville...Nit bids were slated to start going out yesterday but, as of this writing, there is no word of who will be invited. It is difficult to imagine anyone in New England getting a bid before UMass but, when politics get involved, anything can happen... St. Anselm's is also awaiting a tournament invitation with their hopes resting on the NCAA College Division...Julius Erving will have a shot at the all-time UMass scoring record tonight as he needs only 17 points to surpass Clarence Hill's total of 554 points set in the 65-66 season...Captain Ray Ellerbrook only needs four points to become the fourth leading scorer in Redman history, moving past Rodger Twitchell...Ellerbrook is also third in assists...Erving tied his own single game rebound mark in Saturday night's 84-66 romp over Maine, pulling down 28. He set the mark in the Redmen's first game of the season against Providence. If the Redmen win their remaining three games, they will set a UMass mark of 18 wins in a season breaking the old record set by last year's squad of 17...As far as NIT bids are concerned, UMass definitely deserves one. Since the semester break, the Redmen have played as well, if not better, than any team in the area. They have defeated every other team given a chance at a bid including Holy Cross, Providence, and Rhode Island. However, due to its location, UMass does not receive the publicity that these other schools get and this fact might cost the Redmen. It is the hope here that the NIT committee overlooks such unimportant items as publicity and politics and goes strictly by performance, in which case UMass deserves a bid.

Red UMass Icemen Harpoon Holy Cross, 9-0

WORCESTER - UMass hockey emulated it's hard court cousins last night by destroying Holy Cross Crusaders, 9-0, at the Worcester Arena. The Redmen are now 9-5 in Division II and 9-7 overall.

This was no contest from the beginning as the UMass sextet simply outplayed the hapless Crusaders. The Redmen scored six goals in the first period to ice the issue before adding a singleton in the second and a deuce in the third.

Jack Edwards had the hat trick with Bill 'solo' McMann and Eric Scrafield contributing two apiece. John Hartnett and Brian Sullivan each scored one goal.

McMann opened the fireworks at 5:01 of the first. Sullivan passed to Mike Waldron in the corner who flipped the puck out to McMann right in front from where he lit the lamp.

At 8:19, Sullivan made it 2-0, scoring on the power play from the right point after taking a drop pass from Waldron. 'Solo' McMann got his second goal at 12:02 on a rush along the left side of the rink, unassisted.

Edwards got his first marker at 14:12, tipping in Hartnett's shot. At 16:52, Scrafield tipped in Eddie Riley's long shot from the point.

The Redmen closed out the period's scoring at 19:59. Statistician Tom Peters, taking his first turn on the ice, received the assist on the play as his shot from the right point was deflected in by Edwards.

Bruce Crawford, who hung up his third shutout of the year for UMass, had four saves while Holy Cross net minder Fred McGready had 1. The Redmen were just too much for the beleaguered Crusaders.

Crawford received an assist on the lone Redman goal of the second period. With Holy Cross on the power play, Crusader Chipper Hoar broke in all alone on Crawford who made the stop and started to break away on his own. He flipped the puck up ice to Mike Murray who made a beautiful fake to get around a Holy Cross defender whereupon he passed it to Scrafield who scored from in close. The time of the goal was 17:46.

In the third period the Redmen played defensive hockey in an effort to preserve the shutout. They failed however, as evidenced by the fact that they hit for two goals in the period.

At 3:14, Edwards got his third score by tipping in Hartnett's shot. Doug Powling received the other assist.

UMass made it 9-0 at 16:39. Murray passed the puck to Charlie Donovan who was stationed to the right of the cage. He proceeded to flip it to Hartnett who was busting up the slot from where he beat McGready cleanly.

Crawford finished with 17 saves while McGready had 44.

ICE CHIPS - 'Solo' McMann was replaced on the last shift of the game by John Morganto in an effort to prevent McMann from getting the hat trick...Donovan was in such a hurry to get out of the arena that he inadvertently packed his shoes in his bag and tried to board the bus wearing his skates....nobody's poifect....assist on this play goes to dapper Dick Backer....

Second Ranked Wrestlers Face WPI, Seek Eighth Straight in Home Finale

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The red hot UMass wrestling team makes it's last home appearance of the season tonight, when it hosts Worcester Tech. The time of the match is 7:30 p.m. in Boyden Gym.

The Redmen have won seven straight meets and nine out of the last ten in compiling a fine 13-4 record. Following tonight's meet, UMass will close out the dual meet season with encounters this weekend at MIT and BC.

Worcester Tech currently has a 5-5 record and was ranked eighth in New England. Last week, however, a 21-19 loss to Brown Saturday will hurt the Engineers' ranking, since Brown is not known as a wrestling power. The top wrestler for WPI is Ed Polizatto at 134 lbs. He is undefeated this season and placed second in New England last year.

Coach Homer Barr has made a few lineup changes for the second ranked Redmen. Phil Davis will replace Sheldon Goldberg at 134 lbs. due to a rib injury suffered by Goldberg last week. Davis has a 6-4 record on the season while Goldberg is 10-2-3. Bruce Buckbee (9-1) has moved down to 177 lbs. and Captain George Zguris (7-6-1) has returned to the lineup at 190.

Other Redman starters will be Nick DiDomenico (12-4) at 118, Dave Reynolds (8-4-1) at 126, Steve Jones (3-1) at 142, Clay Jester (8-5-1) at 150, Mike Brauner (5-3-1) at 158, Tom Young (8-3-1) at 167, and Chris Hodson (4-1) at unlimited.

Tom Andrewes is the leading Redman wrestler percentagewise with a 6-0-1 record. He is followed by Buckbee and Goldberg. DiDomenico leads in pins with six while Jester and Jim Godkin each have five

STICK CHECK - UMass defenseman Doug Powling attempts to evade outstretched stick of Vermont center Tom Crane in contest which Redmen won 2-1 in overtime. Redman in background is Al Nickerson. Berkshire Common Food Blamed As Diarrhea Spreads Throughout Southwest

By K. O. PECTATE
Staff Reporter

An estimated 500 Southwest residents yesterday were stricken with what infirmary spokesmen called an "acute gastrointestinal disorder" which confined them to their rooms and which is being blamed on a "freak occurrence in Berkshire Dining Commons."

All students affected are residents in Pierpont, Moore, JQA, Washington, Cance and Patterson dorms - the dorms which are assigned to Berkshire Commons.

Spokesmen for the University Food Services Department explained yesterday that "if food served in Berkshire Commons prompted the illness, it was not the result of improper treatment, but rather was just the product of a freak occurrence in the preparation of Tuesday's supper."

The environmental health department at UMass is investigating the cause of the disease.

Infirmary Director Dr. Robert Gage has announced that the ailment is not serious, and that any students afflicted should drink only liquids for the next day or so, and should remain in their dorms until the "accompanying nausea and diarrhea subside."

THE WEAK ENDS HERE - Toilets were in great demand as the stomach ailment spread throughout Southwest. (MDC photo by Wayne Lilystrom)

Approximately 35 students were admitted to the informary early yesterday, but the infirmary decided to send a treatment team to Southwest when it became apparent that there were too many cases for the infirmary to handle.

The food services department has announced that it will provide soup, crackers and ginger ale to the diseased students in their dorms tonight.

Students Discuss Value Of Freedom of Speech

By PAT CURRAN
Staff Reporter

A group of approximately 120 people met yesterday afternoon from 4:00 to 6:00 in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union to discuss further the events of Tuesday night. The exact purpose of the meeting was initially unclear, however, discussion branched off in the areas of freedom of speech and the continuation of a consolidated movement for more creative types of action.

Bob Zelman, a grad student, described his actions during the appearance of Strom Thurmond last year as typical of those of Tuesday night. He noted his yelling and the brandishing of a Nazi helmet was his way of "destroying free speech." He feels that free speech as we know it results in people blindly applauding speakers without listening to what they are saying.

Ron Prichard who then took the floor, opposed all such negative demonstration. He said that college students are considered to be a well-informed group, more so than any other age group as far as world happenings are concerned. "If we lose communication at this level, then there is no hope."

Several students supported the Humphrey demonstration as the most effective way of "getting national prominence." They felt that "the DVP should expose the campus to a larger variety of speakers, not just Humphrey-types."

Those opposed felt that the action was futile. "It clouds issues and alienates people." They also stated that the demonstrators should have waited for Humphrey to speak and then rebutt. Comments ran, "You had the chance to wait and wade through a speech, but you blew it, you blew it.

Speaking again, Zelman urged people to use the newspaper, the King Council, the free rooms in the Union and the materials made available through them to express their opinions more widely and to get people to act.

Not all of those at the meeting felt that the issue of free speech was most prominent. Others who saw the need for a continued movement were asked to sign up and attend a future gathering to develop more plans. They did not feel that yesterday's meeting was specific enough.

Commenting on Tuesday's demonstration, they said that, "On one level it got people together in a way they're going to have to get together." A meeting date will be announced in the future.

Plimpton Speaks to Blacks About Demands, Missing Books

AMHERST - In the aftermath of the building takeover at Amherst College by blacks from the Five College area last week, it has been learned that the occupying students removed more than 300 books from the Robert Frost Library and placed them in the Black Culture Center on campus.

The volumes which pertain to slavery, abolition, and black life in America, were carried away in 18 cardboard boxes and comprise Amherst's entire collection of literature about slavery and other subjects related to Black Studies housed in the Frost, according to one of the blacks who helped in their removal.

It is not yet clear what will be done about the books. In a 280-word statement which appeared in the AMHERST STUDENT, the College's undergraduate newspaper, the Amherst Afro-American Society accused the College administration of renegging on its promise to provide the Black Culture Center with a 2,000 book library.

"Therefore," the statement read, "we hold that until the College devises a new process for facilitating the establishment of a center, especially for the book and record libraries, these books will remain with us. If at any time in the future the College submits a program that would accelerate the present rate of the establishment of the center, the books will be promptly returned."

An Amherst library spokesman has asserted that the College has supplied the Black Culture Center with approximately 1,500 of the books requested but the remaining 500 are unobtainable because of the present national demand. Amherst President Calvin H. Plimpton was informed of the missing articles when he returned from a trip last weekend and invited some of the black leaders to his home on Sunday night to discuss the demands they had submitted to him last Wednesday.

Immediately after the four occupied buildings were vacated on Wednesday, the issue of disciplining participating blacks was raised. President Plimpton said at that time that although he condemned their methods he was not sure what action would be taken. It is thought, however, that the removal of the books from the library could influence whatever punishment, if any, is decided upon.

At present, the College community is studying copies of the 45-page document which was submitted to Dr. Plimpton last week during a "press conference" at his home. Presumably, after all have had an opportunity to read the lengthy list of demands and proposals, some form of campus discussion will follow.

Calvin P. Ward, a black senior from Chicago, told the College at a mass meeting on Wednesday night that he expected the Amherst faculty to come up with an answer to the document "by the next faculty meeting." The next scheduled faculty meeting is March 3, but College officials are doubtful that complete answers can be given at that time.

The package of demands presented to Dr. Plimpton by Wilburn Williams, a junior from Greenwood, Miss., contains seven "sections" dealing not only with specific proposals for Amherst College but demands and even detailed plans drawn up for Smith, Mount Holyoke, and the University of Massachusetts.

The demands that affect all of the Five College Community propose that a "coherent, comprehensive" Black Studies institute be established which involves courses in every relevant academic discipline as well as community oriented programs "of an activist nature." The Blacks have called for a joint school of Afro-American studies for all five colleges.

A half-dozen financial demands were addressed to University of Massachusetts President John W. Lederle among them were: the distribution of financial aid should be more closely supervised; that no money should be taken away from a student because of academic reasons, unless, of course, he is dismissed because of academic reasons.

Eleventh Hour Series Resumes on Monday

The Maroon Keys will continue their 11th Hour Series this year with three lectures. The series is based on the premise of having only one hour to live and what the speaker would say or do in this last hour. Monday, March 2 is the date for the first of the three lectures. The series attempts to focus attention on faculty and staff at the University. John D. Robinson, John Richardson, and Ron Bittell are this year's speakers. They work with students at the University in both a counseling and a teaching capacity.

Speaking on Monday night at 8:00 in the Student Union Ballroom will be Southwest Area Coordinator, John Robinson. Although only 23, Mr. Robinson had both his B.A. in Zoology and Chemistry and M.A. in Clinical Psychology from the University of Texas in Austin. He has taught high school science for two years and served as a science supervisor for another.

At the University of Texas he worked with the Dean of Students and has served as a staff psychologist for a year at Austin State Mental Hospital. In his first year at the University Mr. Robinson has taught various related psych-education courses, along with his administrative duties. His topic is concerned with the sometimes difficult position of listening and is entitled "Listening With a Third Ear."

The next lecture in the series, "Blueprint of a New World Order," will be delivered on March 16, by Mr. Leroy Richardson, advisor to the CEBBS program and the final lecture, to be delivered by Mr. Ronald Bitell, of the History Department, will take place on a date yet to be announced.

President Lederle's Statement On Disruption of DVP Speech

The disruptions by a minority which made it impossible for Hubert Humphrey to speak to a large campus gathering which wanted to hear him, leave me feeling sick and ashamed.

A University should provide a haven for the free expression of all points of view. Apparently a minority has taken it upon itself to bring a one-sided view to this campus. They freely invite numerous speakers with whose views they sympathize, while precluding the views of the Hubert Humphreys and others. A continuation of this one-sided dialogue can only undermine the University as an open forum, and will inevitably lead to student and faculty physical confrontations rather than the intellectual confrontations which are our reason for being.

The irony of this whole situation is that the current generation of disrupters frequently complain that no one in the "Establishment" listens. After Tuesday evening's unfortunate events can anyone doubt who refuses to listen?

But it is one thing for an individual not to listen. It is quite different thing for him to cat-call, boo, shout obscenities, and prevent those who want to listen from achieving their objective. Neither the so-called "Establishment", whatever that current cliche means, nor conservative members of this academic community, have yet disrupted a Jerry Rubin meeting on campus; but that will inevitably come about if academic dialogue cannot be carried on rationally by reasonable men. The University will evaporate when we forfeit its right to support if instead of dialogue our exchanges assume the character of a back-alley brawl or of a Banana-Republic university.

I call upon the Faculty Senate and the graduate and undergraduate Student Senate to review and contemplate the events of last evening. I would hope that they would see fit to condemn in the strongest possible terms this successful attempt by a minority to deprive the majority of their right to hear a speaker on this campus. I would also hope, bearing in mind the fragile and vulnerable nature of a university that the three senates will immediately investigate and come up with any feasible methods for maintaining order at public gatherings and for assuring a free market-place for expression of this campus.

Sargent Calls for Control Of Environmental Quality

By JULIA KANE
Staff Reporter

Governor Francis W. Sargent has filed legislation calling for the establishment of an Environmental Quality Control Council, designed to serve as an environmental ombudsman channeling complaints from the citizens of the Commonwealth to the government agencies equipped to handle them. The proposed council is also designed to monitor government agencies whose activities pose potential threats to the environment, making sure they give proper consideration to pollution control in drawing up their programs. Sargent also hopes the council will serve as a focal point for all public and private pollution control groups in the state.

The council would have a paid, full-time executive secretary and staff and would have the power to subpoena records and summon witnesses. It would consist of nine members, no more than five from any one political party, and at least one member under the age of twenty-five. Members will serve without compensation, but the Governor feels that the group must be provided with adequate funds with which to hire expert consultants to aid in their investigations.

One of the council's major functions will be to report on its findings, advise on pollution control measures, and evaluate complaints and the action taken on those complaints at regular intervals:

"The council shall identify and make known to the public the emergence of new threats to the environment of the Commonwealth and shall make such recommendations to the governor and the general court as it deems advisable.

"The council shall transmit annually to the governor and the general court an environmental quality report which shall set forth (1) the state of the environment of the commonwealth; (2) current and foreseeable trends in the quality, management, and utilization of the environment; (3) the likely effects of said trends on the health and the social, economic, and other concerns of the public; (4) a review of governmental programs affecting the environment of the Commonwealth; (5) a review and evaluation of the council's activities during the previous year; (6) a review and evaluation of the complaints received by the council during the previous year and of the subsequent actions taken to deal with said complaints; and (7) such executive or legislative proposals as the council believes best serve the interest of the public in the environment of the Commonwealth."

Pollution control advocates feel that the Governor's bill is a good beginning, but are quick to add that it is only a beginning. As a spokesman from the Steering Committee of the UMass Coalition for Environmental Quality stated, "This bill is a good first step. However, we must remember that this is only the creation of an investigative group and not direct legislation against polluters and pollution itself." It is the Governor's hope that, when and if the bill is passed, the "first step" will lead to real progress in the fight against environmental pollution.

DVP Statement on Speech Disruption

The members of the Distinguished Visitors Program have chosen to issue the following statement concerning last night's lecture by Mr. Hubert H. Humphrey:

1. We recognize and defend the right to dissent.
2. We recognize and defend the right to demonstrate.
3. We recognize that there exist various interpretations of Mr. Humphrey's past actions and viewpoints on certain issues. All interpretations must be respected.
4. However, we believe that the tactics employed at the lecture by certain demonstrators went beyond the legitimate bounds of dissent. Mr. Humphrey should have had an opportunity to have his views heard by the audience.

We believe that it is the responsibility of the Distinguished Visitors Program to protect the right to demonstrate, to present various viewpoints on different issues, and to provide a forum in which guest speakers may be heard and then confronted in a question and answer period.

Two Students Nabbed In Campus Drug Raid

Two drug arrests Tuesday night confirmed the rumors that University Security Police and State Narcotics agents are about to launch a major campaign against drug usage on campus this semester.

Informed sources maintain that more arrests will be made within the next week, with the emphasis of the police campaign centered on Southwest.

Arrested in the raid Tuesday night were two University undergraduates in John Adams for possession of marijuana. The police also confiscated a quantity of drugs in Cance House later that night, however, no arrests were made.

Spanish Guest Lectures

On Friday, February 27, 1970, Mrs. Martha K. Cobb will give a guest lecture in Spanish on "La coexistencia de las tres castas en la edad media espanola." Mrs. Cobb is a lecturer at Howard University and will be going to Madrid with the UMass program this summer. The lecture will be held in 321 Herter at 7:00 p.m.

Following this lecture Mrs. Cobb will speak in English to all interested persons on "The Relevancy Today of the Spanish Major." This second lecture is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in 301 Herter. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is cordially invited to attend either or both lectures.

Senate Refuses to Consider Motion on Humphrey Incident

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

A motion to consider in special business an apology by the Senate on behalf of the student body to Hubert Humphrey for the Cage events failed, mustering barely one third in favor of consideration (special business requires a 2/3 vote). It is hazardous to deduce anything from the vote, however, as motives for refusing to consider the question at this time could range from opposition to the apology, to belief that to consider the question at this time would be premature.

Senator Steve Walt, chairman of the Social Action Committee, expressed to this reporter his intention to have the committee investigate the Cage events.

After hearing a presentation by the Committee on Environmental Quality that included display of fish and foul killed by pollution, and a slide presentation depicting the pollution of the Connecticut River and of the campus itself (a group representative charged that pollution from campus construction has caused the campus pond to be classified as polluted), the Senate responded to arguments concerning the immediate and pressing need for action to stem environmental pollution, by appropriating for the remainder of the current year $2,750 of the $3,500 remaining in the 802A Finance (emergency appropriation) account to the Committee, after overwhelmingly defeating an attempt by Senator Verrochi to lower the amount to $1,000.

At the outset of the meeting, the Senate heard a booking agent for SGP Productions announce his intention to submit to the American Federation of Musicians a grievance concerning alleged unfair labor practices by the RSO Office. The Federation could place the University on an unfair employers list that would result in a boycott by professional musicians of the Amherst campus.

The spokesman cited threats by RSO officials to kick all booking agents, and particularly SGP Productions, off campus. He further stated that RSO blocked a contract between SGP productions (which books rock bands and films, and provides certain light-sound effects for a percent of the net) and a fraternity, on the grounds that SGP was providing a service that students could and should provide for themselves.

In budgetary action, the Senate agreed that the SWAP Conference was valuable as a means of communication between faculty, students, and administration by defeating a motion to strike the SWAP budget.

Waldo Seligman addressed the Senate last night and charged that R.S.O. was discriminating his booking company.

On the strength of a poll conducted by Budget's Committee which showed a majority of students supporting continued four year tax subsidization of Index, the Senate defeated a motion to strike the Index budget.

The Senate also approved a $5 increase in the health fee, largely due to the retroactive state pay raise, and an overall increase in infirmary use by students.

Bridal Fair Opens

"Love" is the theme of the fourth annual Bridal Fair, which is to be held in the Student Union Ballroom on Tuesday, March 3. The fair, which will run from 1 to 10 p.m., will be highlighted by two bridal fashion shows, one at 3 and the other at 7 p.m.

Bridal attire and trousseaux, supplied by Forbes and Wallace of Springfield, will be modeled in the fashion shows by fifteen UMass coeds, chosen from among eighty applicants. Six male students will be appearing as grooms.

The Bridal Fair is co-sponsored by the Student Union special events committee and Modern Bride magazine. A display of new products of interest to the modern bride-to-be will be exhibited by local retailers and their national affiliates, and door prizes will be given.

CEQ Film Slated For Ballroom Today

The Coalition for Environmental Quality is presenting a film series today in the Student Union Ballroom concerning the pollution problem. The films will be continuous from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Some of these films are products of private parties concerned with the pollution situation and others are from the Department of Agriculture and the Sierra Club.

Also, many committees will be meeting tonite. These are: Population Problems, SBA 109 at 6:45; Land Pollution, SBA 109 at 7:00; Water Pollution, SBA 112 at 7:30. The Publicity group will meet at 8:00 in the Nantucket Room of the Student Union. If you care about the pollution problem you should get involved. New members are always welcome.

Nixon's All Volunteer Army And His Arguments For It

In his Presidential campaign in 1968, Nixon came out for the all-volunteer force and said that "in terms of morale, efficiency and effectiveness, a volunteer armed force would assuredly be a better armed force."

His commission said: "A return to an all-volunteer force will strengthen our freedoms, remove an inequity now imposed on the expression of the patriotism that never has been lacking among our youth, promote the efficiency of the armed forces, and enhance their dignity."

In other arguments for the all-volunteer force, the commission said:

- "Men who are forced to serve in the military at artificially low pay are actually paying a form of tax which subsidizes those in the society who do not serve."
- The draft "has been a costly, inequitable and divisive procedure for recruiting men for the armed forces."
- "It has weakened the political fabric of our society and impaired the delicate web of shared values that alone enables a free society to exist."

More than five years ago, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Congress he would be against a volunteer professional army because "the U.S. Army always has been closely identified with the broad base of population, and I like it that way."

There is no indication that Wheeler has changed his mind.

In its 211-page report, the presidential commission listed some of the major objections of the all-volunteer force, and answered those objections.

Here are some of those objections, and the commission's replies.

1. Higher pay for a voluntary force will be especially appealing to Negroes who have relatively poor civilian opportunities.

Answer: "The frequently heard claim that a volunteer force will be all black or all this or all that, simply has no basis in fact. Our research indicates the composition of the armed forces will not be fundamentally changed by ending conscription . . ."

2. "The presence of draftees in a mixed force guards against the growth of a separate military ethos which could pose a threat to civilian authority, our freedom, and our democratic institutions."

Answer: "Historically, voluntary service and freedom have gone hand in hand . . . In either a mixed or volunteer force, the attitudes of the officer corps are the preponderant factor in the psychology of the military; and with or without the draft, professional officers are recruited voluntarily from a variety of regional and socio-economic backgrounds."

3. An all-volunteer force "will undermine patriotism by weakening the traditional belief that each citizen has a moral responsibility to serve his country."

Answer: "Compelling service through a draft undermines respect for government by forcing an individual to serve when and in the manner the government decides, regardless of his own values and talents."

4. An all-volunteer force "would stimulate foreign military adventures, foster an irresponsible foreign policy, and lessen civilian concern about the use of military forces."

Answer: ". . . To the extent that there is pressure to seek military solutions to foreign policy problems, such pressure already exists and will not be affected by ending conscription. The volunteer force will have the same professional leadership as the present mixed force . . ."

5. An all-volunteer force "will lack the flexibility to expand rapidly in times of sudden crisis."

Answer: "Military preparedness depends on forces in being, not on the ability to draft untrained men . . . The commission has recommended a standby draft which can be put into effect promptly if circumstances require mobilization of large numbers of men."

U.S. military authorities and the presidential commission staff both studies closely the experience of Great Britain in shifting to an all-volunteer force.

As it receded from the old imperial world role, Britain stopped drafting over a three-year transitional period from 1957 to 1960 while its forces shrank from 700,000 to 400,000 men.

"British officials have said that the fully volunteer force is more productive than a mixed force because of lower turnover and the superior performance of more experienced servicemen," the commission report said.

However, the report noted that in the past several years, the British have felt the drop in enlistments is beginning to threaten their ability to hold their force levels.

Two Carriers Added to 7th

SAIGON (AP) - Two U.S. carriers with about 170 warplanes are adding their entire strike capability to Air Force efforts to cut North Vietnamese supply and troop infiltration corridors in Laos, informed sources said Wednesday night.

A spokesman for the U. S. 7th Fleet declined comment on aerial activity in Laos, but said no Navy bombing raids had been flown against North Vietnamese positions in South Vietnam since Feb. 15. The two carriers are based in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Other sources said all of the Navy air strikes are being flown in Laos, but they declined to give specific target areas. The U. S. Command has a policy of reporting only bombing missions in South Vietnam.

The aim is to slow a North Vietnamese offensive in the Plain of Jars area and to forestall a North Vietnamese offensive in South Vietnam by cutting the Ho Chi Minh trail in eastern Laos. The North Vietnamese move war materials and troops into South Vietnam over the trail.

Adm. John S. McCain Jr., commander of U. S. forces in the Pacific, said "Laos is critically important to the free Asian countries' efforts to withstand the Communist aggressive campaign."

McCain said in a speech to the South Vietnamese National Defense College: "It would be unrealistic to hope that a Vietnam settlement, when achieved, will end the threat of aggressive communism. Backed by U. S. ground, sea, and air power, our allies must develop and maintain conventional forces to help deter the aggressive ambitions of their Communist neighbors.

"The Soviets and Chinese Communists have shown great skill in getting troops to do the fighting to expand Communism. The choice for us is to assist our allies to fight the common enemy, or we will probably have to do it by ourselves."

Business Plans to Spend Strong Demand for Money

NEW YORK (AP) - A major economic consultant to industry sent telegrams to its clients this week advising them that business, rather than cutting its spending plans as the administration hoped, is actually raising them sharply.

The significance, it said, was this:

"Talk of a recession is not warranted. Demand for money will continue strong. There will be little abatement of inflationary pressures."

In other words, business plans to continue spending heavily despite every effort of the Nixon administration to slow the economy and wring out inflation.

Many economists are puzzled about why this should occur. Corporate profits are declining. Industry already has considerable excess capacity and seemingly doesn't need more. And financing costs are near all-time highs.

One explanation frequently offered is that some businesses, such as utilities, have little choice but to continue spending regardless of costs. They must keep a pace of rising populations and steady increases in demand.

However, the biggest increase in spending plans from September to February - as measured by Edie - came from the manufacturers, not the utilities. In September, manufacturers indicated a 4 per cent increase in 1970 spending. In February they had changed this to 9 per cent.

Commenting on the persistent strength of capital spending, the Chase Manhattan Bank stated:

"Clearly, businessmen do not believe economists. The slowdown in business activity which has been widely predicted by professional economists is just not in the purview of most business executives."

Another popular explanation for the strength in spending is that business has little choice but to modernize, automate, expand its factories in order to bring down operating costs, particularly those affected by labor.

The main hope for the anti-inflation forces is that when corporate officers really see the results of a slowdown, as indicated by smaller orders, cancellations, and shrinking profits, they may not go ahead with these big spending plans.

Pompidou Gets Polite Hearing A Subdued "Vive La France"

WASHINGTON (AP) - French President Georges Pompidou got a polite hearing in Congress Wednesday - despite the inconspicuous walkout of one member - as he said Middle Eastern peace should be sought through a four-power conference.

Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D.N.Y., got up from his seat near the middle of the big House chamber and walked out as Pompidou began speaking. There was no noticeable stir.

Pompidou had just received about two minutes of applause from the audience in the less-than-full chamber.

Members opposed to France's Middle East policy, especially the sale of planes to Libya, had organized a boycott.

However, House employees helped fill the vacant seats, along with the Cabinet and a huge turnout of the diplomatic corps.

The Capitol was heavily guarded by police and Secret Service agents - the tighest security, one police official said, in about 14 years.

Pompidou's speech, translated into English paragraph by paragraph, was interrupted eight times by applause - never tumultuous. But some senators cried "Vive la France," as he left, to more applause, pausing to shake hands.

There was applause even when the French president said:

"Allow me, as a friend, to tell you that the end of the war in Vietnam, for the United States, will be the most worthy of victories - a victory won first over oneself."

Pompidou made no mention in his address of the arms sale or other specific controversies, and mentioned the Middle East disputes only briefly.

"Believe me," he said, "France's intentions in the face of these conflicts has never been to be detrimental to any nation nor to serve another. We seek, we want only peace."

He restated France's position that Israel has the right to exist in security as an independent and sovereign state, and criticized the continuing hostilities in the area.

"Who cannot see the precarious and - in the long run - sterile nature of the victories gained?" Pompidou asked.

"Who does not understand that there is no assured future for Israel outside a lasting entente with the world which surrounds it - entente which implies renunciation of military conquest and the solution of the Palestinian problem?"

Sarge Blasts Hill As It Kills Reform

Gov. Francis W. Sargent, leading back of the House reduction, told a news conference afterward, "your legislature has just proved that it represents its own selfish interest, not the will of the people.

"To kill the people's chance to reform the legislature is to prove how desperately we need that reform."

The governor characterized the action as "a dirty fight" and said the legislative leadership "used every ruse, every type of pressure."

"I'll certainly remember how John Dolan voted," he said.

The Republican governor said he is beginning immediately to campaign in favor of a proposed constitutional convention which comes up for a referendum vote next fall.

"If adopted," he added, "I will urge that the size of the house be determined by that convention of citizens."

House speaker David M. Bartley, D-Holyoke, who left the rostrum and spoke to Rep. Dolan before Dolan changed his vote, denied there was any pressure on House members.

"I categorically deny that I brought any pressure on any legislator," he told a news conference. "Rep. Dolan has for weeks been considering this issue. I think he changed his mind for the betterment of the people."

Bartley said he commented to Dolan this way: . "I said, 'the people will be better off with a 240-member House'."

Dr. Heilmeier to Offer "Electro-Optics" Seminar

Dr. George H. Heilmeier of RCA Laboratories, an internationally known pioneer in the area of liquid crystals for use in optical information displays, will offer a seminar on this subject Monday, March 2, at 4:00 p.m. in Room 132, Engineering Building.

Dr. Heilmeier will discuss the topic "Electro-Optic Effects in Nematic Liquid Crystals and Applications." He will supply background information on liquid crystals as well as explain why these materials offer new and exciting possibilities toward the solution of the problem of flat-face TV-type displays.

The recipient of the RCA Laboratories Achievement Award in 1960 for his work in parametric and tunnel diode devices, Dr Heilmeier also received the honor in 1962 for pioneering work in the field of crystalline trgamic semiconductors and in 1965 for research in the area of liquid crystalline phenomena.

He is also co-recipient of the 1969 David Sarnoff Outstanding Team Award for basic studies in liquid crystals with imaginative ideas for their application to practical displays. In March of 1969 he received the Eta Kappa Nu award as the "Outstanding Young Electrical Engineer in the U.S.A."

All interested members of the public are invited to attend the seminar and coffee hour preceding the talk.

'College Life" Series Continues Next Week

Wednesday, March 4 at 8 p.m. the UMass Campus Crusade for Christ will be presenting another segment of their "College Life" series in the Student Union Ballroom. Jody Dillow, leader of the Campus Crusade for Christ at Cornell, will be speaking on "Twenty-seven Signs of the Return of Jesus Christ and the Coming Age of Aquarius."

Mr. Dillow's speech will deal in greater detail with many of the possibilities raised by Andre Kole, whose presentation last month intrigued many students with its implications. Considered in Mr. Dillow's address will be the relevance of the current political scene, the war, rising interest in astrology and the occult, and the widespread use of drugs to the predictions of Christ and biblical authors.

Mr. Dillow will conduct a question and answer period after his speech. Refreshments will be served in the ballroom, and all members of the campus community are invited.

Bramwell Fletcher Portrays Bernard Shaw

Branwell Fletcher will present his nationally acclaimed "Bernard Shaw" at Bowker Auditorium on the UMass campus Thursday, Feb. 26, at 8 p.m. The performance, presented by the Distinguished Visitors Program, is open to the public without charge.

Fletcher is a star of television, motion pictures and theatre. He has 32 Broadway plays to his credit, including the final 200 performances of "My Fair Lady", starring opposite Julie Andrews and Sally Ann Howes.

After his portrait of Shaw was a hit in New York and Dublin, Fletcher felt that more Americans--especially young people -- should have a chance to meet Shaw. "Shaw's views are very pertinent today," said Fletcher. "He's very up-to-date--really has something to say to the youth of today. The college students especially appreciate his remarks on education. He instructs them 'not to let your schooling interfere with your education'."

Fletcher was privileged to know Shaw personally, and he is the first man authorized by the Shaw Estate to impersonate the great playwright. He had access to all of Shaw's unpublished writings, including letters.

"My real education began when I met Bernard Shaw", continues Fletcher. "I was then just a juvenile in the theatre and was present at Shaw's house in Ayot St. Lawrence in England and saw Shaw entertain his guests for over two hours with stories of his early life, his struggles, his development and his philosophy. Though then in his late seventies, Shaw was active and agile as a young man and seemed utterly tireless. The memory of that day has remained with me and I have tried to recapture it, these many years later, with this performance."

Fletcher's "Bernard Shaw" was ranked by New York critics with Hal Holbrook's recreation of Mark Twain. Fletcher fills the stage with life, although he uses a minimum of props and settings, critics say.

Bernard Shaw said of himself: "I am regarded as general consultant to mankind on questions of sex, religion, music, drama, procreation, education, politics, war, criminal human stupidity, the destiny of man, and even American baseball." Bramwell Fletcher manages to explore Shaw's views on most of these subjects while giving his audience an entertaining provocative and moving theatrical experience.

WMUA Elects New Officers

At the February station meeting of WMUA new officers were elected by the station membership. All of the new officers are juniors who have been extremely active at WMUA in the past. Ken Horseman was voted Station Manager; Sheldon Katzman was named Assistant Station Manager; the post of program director was voted to Dick Poholek; Jay Ballard was re-elected Chief Engineer; and Mike Orloff was named Business Manager.

The new officers assumed their duties immediately. WMUA is currently at work preparing new stereo facilities and is also in the process of acquiring FCC approval to increase power from 10 watts to 1,000 watts. The officers are hoping that the station will be broadcasting at the higher power by September, 1970.

As UMass Enrollment Increases

Hadley Housing Expected to Grow

HADLEY- A probable growth in housing accommodations during the next 10 years appears to be the most concrete outlook locally as enrollment continues to soar.

Two university professors attending a meeting in Town Hall this week arranged by the Hadley Development and Industrial Commission predicted the Amherst campus student body would peak from 28,000 to 30,000 within the decade.

Chairman Jerald Gates presided. Also attending were Selectman John F. Koloski and Building Inspector Leonard J. Shuzdak.

Speaking were Prof. Ervin H. Zube, chairman of the university master planning committee and Prof. H. Jack Littlefield Jr., planning officer for the provost's office.

They said Hadley should anticipate the university growth on undergraduate and graduate levels, but as yet there have been no blueprints in the master plan to spread the institution within the bounds of Hadley.

Zube doubted the university would spur industrial construction in the area, certainly not of the magnitude along Greater Boston's Route 128. The master planning group is working on a traffic-free campus and the Department of Public Works is studying additional access to Route 116.

NO APARTMENTS

The university will require 350 apartments annually for the 1500 new students each fall. The buildings must be self-sustaining and self-liquidating. Students have been protesting an increase in room rents. While the actual tuition is low, the speakers pointed out that the students are drawn from more lower and middle income families than most states.

Hadley does not permit apartments, so new construction must not be of the multiple dwelling type. Zube said some faculty members are inclined to build or rent in Amherst because of its highly rated public school system.

The new conference center will require more housing on a temporary basis and this could increase motel constructitn in the area.

It was pointed out that many university non-academic personnel now live outside Amherst in a radius up to 25 miles. It was also brought out that a number of professors have retired in Hadley.

Zube said that after residing in Cambridge and Berkeley, he appreciates the environment of the Connecticut Valley.

The professors noted that on a percentage basis, the university is attracting more graduate students and that a greater number are enrolling from junior community colleges. They estimate that about 75 per cent of the students live on campus.

They emphasized there is no plan for land-taking in Hadley, but town officials should be aware of the situation and maintain harmony within the area.

Representatives from Hampshire College will discuss the impact of that institution on Hadley at a second session next week.

WMUA to Broadcast News Coverage Show

Tonight at 8:00 WMUA will broadcast a show dealing with objectivity in news coverage and the media. Participating in the discussion will be Ted Nielsen, Assistant Professor in mass communications of the Speech Department; Mark Silverman, editor of the Daily Collegian; and Rich Lipton, WMUA news director, and Jay Ballard, Jack Fitzpatrick, and Dick Poholek, all of WMUA, 91.1 FM.

SU Bear Removed

The Bear over the Student Union doorway is once again gone -- but it is not missing. It was removed after custodial staff noticed that the pedestal upon which the bear rests had been tampered with.

According to Art Glaude, supervisor of the Student Union, putty had been added to the bolts that held the bear after the last time it was stolen. An alert member of the custodial staff noticed that all the extra putty had been chipped away and all but one bolt had been sawed off.

In order to prevent the bear from eloping, the custodial staff removed it from its pedestal, thus removing the temptation to steal the bear.

"To those who noticed, we want to inform you that the bear is in good condition and is impatiently waiting to be returned to its traditional guardpost," said Art Claude.

Student Teaching Office has Problem

One of the recurring problems faced by the Student Teaching Office at the School of Education is how to contact and stay in contact with students planning on student teaching. It is extremely important for the Student Teaching Office to be able to meet with all students prior to their registration for student teaching so that they can describe all of the programs offered and give prospective student teachers a chance to select from among various alternatives. At these meetings the Student Teaching Office can also answer many of the questions that plague student teachers, such as questions concerning credits, course numbers for registration, certification requirements, length of internship, responsibilities, etc.

This semester the office has scheduled four meetings, two for elementary and two for secondary, for those students who plan to register for student teaching during the Fall semester of 1970. The meetings will be held in Marks' Meadow Auditorium on March 2 and 3 from 4-6 p.m. for those interested in our elementary programs, and on March 5 and 6 from 4-6 p.m. for those interested in secondary programs. You need attend only one of these meetings to receive all the information necessary to register for the Fall semester.

The Student Teaching Office is attempting to place all student teachers and interns prior to Counselling Day, May 6, 1970. They are doing this as a convenience to students so that they may make plans for living accommodations next year, and also to arrange rides and car pools for assignments within commuting distance of the Amherst campus. To meet the placement deadline of May 6, all interested students must register for student teaching by March 15, in Room 100, School of Education.

Time to Join EDUC

There is still time to join! EDUC (English Department Undergraduate Council) can be your intermediary between faculty and student, and your means of getting the grading system, teachers, and courses that have relevancy to EDUCation today. At Departmental meetings, EDUC members have a right to introduce motions, discuss any matter on the floor, and VOTE.

Next meeting is at 7:00 p.m., March 2, Bartlett 301.

All English majors welcome.

Who Is The Enemy?

Keith Bromery

I made a promise to Hubert Humphrey in Tuesday's column, promising that I would attend his Wednesday night lecture, for amusement. Well, I did and I was, tremendously, amused. And heartened. And enlightened.

But, perhaps, this needs a bit of explanation. I do not view Wednesday's demonstration as a political act. I view it as a celebration of consciousness and as a minor military skirmish. And, as a highly interested observer (I, incidentally, was seated well to the rear, with a girlfriend, out of the area of active demonstration). I must conclude that the skirmish was a resounding victory for the Committee - Conference (for the people), and an imponderable, perhaps, but certainly a chagrining experience for Mr. Humphrey, and all he represents (the system). Put more simply, from the radical's point of view it was a very good night, indeed , and from the establishment's side, it was still another example of the kind of outrageous behaviour that Mr. Agnew loves to expound upon.

Let's examine it a little closer, shall we? From the establishment's viewpoint, the demonstration was a slap at every decent person. The man was not allowed the use of free speech. This certainly, is undeniable. Further, there was considerable sentiment for planning the demonstration to this end. (As it was, however, Mr. Humphrey did engage in the explanation of his views, more or less, for about fifteen minutes.) The typical reaction of the self-described moderates is that, perhaps, it would have been much better to at least allow the man to speak, and, then in a question and answer period to follow, "nail" him with some incisive questions, and watch, hopefully, as he exposes himself for what the intuitive sense on a majority of people tell them that he is. (In truth, I would say that a majority of people on this campus feel that no matter how vehemently he denies the validity of the Chicago Trials now, this in no way alleviates him from his responsibility to the fact that he was a prime cause of the Chicago riots, from which this dripping abortion of a trial sprouted in the first place.) But, returning to the theme at hand, that is, again, a sound, indisputable point, when viewed from the establishment position.

However, to restate something that is also obvious on the surface, but, I think, not so well understood on a more basic level, the radical element rejects the establishment viewpoint completely. Pause for a second. Think what this means. It is, for them, the system, which, through its mishandling of the man to technology relationship, so eloquently stated by Galbraith, Marcuse, Brown, and more recentiy Roszak, has brought man his present (and rapidly worsening) status quo of racism, alientation, blind materialism, nuclear blackmail, depersonalization, etc. I could, quite literally, go on at great length. But, to clarify further, for this is a difficult concept to grasp, the system worships science and mathematical perfection to the elimination of the emotional element in human life.

The radicals, of all sorts, realize that to lead a full , complete, human life, one must strike a more or less commensurate balance between emotion and intellect, Dionysian and Apollinian. For one only has to look at one of the examples noted above, that of the hydrogen bomb, and one realizes something is amiss. Something is wrong with our values. Since when is the H-bomb a normal presupposition to society? Is it natural, is it normal that one man should have the capability to destroy the lives of every human being on the face of this old planet, a power widely given in the name of "peace"? This is insanity. It is also the most distinguishable reason for the rise of active extra-establishment opposition. There's no way you can hide your eyes from the bomb, it is reievant to all of your thoughts, all of your daily considerations. It permeates the atmosphere far more effectively than any industrial smog does. The smog is at least visible as an enemy.

This is not to say that the establishment doesn't wish to do what's best for humanity. I do not doubt their sincerity. But I do condemn their ability to manage, even recognize , their rampant technology.

The radicals, and their more passive brothers and sisters, realize this, and on a far deeper level than space allows me to examine here. And the fight is on. Technology employing partially human people, versus people alone. The outcome is in question, but only by a time factor. Look around you - you see rejection levels on all sides - long hair, more personal responses to life, garish, but honest clothing, total rejection of the "corporate man" syndrome, widespread acceptance of the "personal" life-style, communes, people to people to people, black to white. This is the oft-noted "silent revolution". And it's very existence eventually dooms the establishment. No technology can destroy an idea. However, a technology can destroy mankind before this new understanding becomes widespread enough to effectively reclaim society, en toto. Hence, the radical activist element, attempting to salvage the world, now, for the future.

And it is world-wide, people. Europe, Asia, Latin America, Australia, even in Africa, though that is a special case, being the depleted remains of European and American exploitation and paternalism. This is a cultural and social revolution, far transcending the political barriers erected to describe and villify it. Russia is facing the same things now that we are, that France is (remember 1968?), that England is, that Japan is, and the like. This is not a political revolution, but a spiritual rebirth for mankind.

And, finally, it is in this context that I rebuke those who would criticize the Wednesday night demonstration. You are criticizing the demonstrators precisely in the terms of the rules of conduct, of decorum, of existence of living, as set down by the establishment, precisely to deal with an honest philosophical position. Rules the radicals sincerely reject as a sham, the faulty system that spawned the rules they reject as apocalyptic.

To the radicals, and the more thoughtful of their passive brothers and sisters, Hubert Humphrey was a representative example of the enemy. THEY are the ones who are doing this to all of us. THEY are guilty. Would a crowd of rebellious slaves politely have given audience to a slave-owner, dressed up like Colonel Sanders, with a drumstick in one hand, an H-bomb in the other, and a lizard's tongue in his mouth? I think not. To my way of thinking, it was altogether fitting and proper that Hubert was gagged. To have allowed him to speak would have been tantamount to a spiritual castration. Rejoice; the spirit of truly free men lives. It's as what Paul Kantner of the Airplane wrote: "We are all outlaws in the eyes of Establishment America; And we are very proud of ourselves. It must begin here and now, a new continent of earth and fire. Tear down the walls (between people). Tear down the walls (of the Citadel). Right on.

War on All

There have been relatively few new developments in the Middle East War save one which has come to the forefront just within the last couple of weeks. The Arab attacks on a Swissair jetliner bound for Tel Aviv which resulted in the deaths of 47 persons of diverse nationalities and the terrorists attack on an Israeli tour bus carrying 37 Americans through the Holy Land have caused world wide criticism of these contemptible developments.

The horror of innocent civilians being caught up in war is nothing new to most of us. During World War II many thousands of civilian noncombatants were killed in Europe with the bombings on both sides and most especially in Japan with the first war time employment of the atomic bomb. In many cases this type of involuntary civilian involvement was unpreventable short of stopping the war all together (which really isn't such a bad idea). But in just as many cases as in Japan in 1945, helpless men, women, and children in completely noncombatant situations have been needlessly and wantonly slaughtered for the sake of expediency or to end a highly costly war by spending the innocent.

So, this new development in the Middle East War set no precedents, but they, nonetheless, warrant absolute and total condemnation. This war is supposedly between the United Arab Republic (U.A.R.) and Israel and actually involves besides the aforementioned states, the United States, the U.S.S.R., Jordan, and possibly France and a few others. My question then is why are Arab terrorists killing German, Swiss, Canadian Austrian, English, and other African peoples in attacks on civilians in Germany, Switzerland and other neutral countries? This is, in a sense, the same as declaring war on everyone. Admittedly, the Middle East War could have very well turned into a world war without these attacks on foreign neutral soil, but with such activities taking place now, the prospect of same is that much closer. The Communists chastise Israel and the U.S. for Israel's bombing raids across the Suez, but it should be well noted that at least the Israeli forces keep the Middle East War in the Middle East. Can the same be said of Russia and the U.A.R.?

Most students of the Middle East situation see a lengthy crisis involving much fighting and few settlements in the future of this section. It seems sane and reasonable that it is to the advantage of at least a majority world peace to contain this war in that section of the world where it started. It should be hoped that the U.A.R. will try in the future to at least fight one war at a time. Heaven knows, she can't even handle the war she has now with Israel without trying to pick a fight with everybody else as well. It should also be mentioned here that the major beligerents are not the ONLY guilty parties in this. The fact that Russia and the United States are essentials in this Middle East situation cannot be left entirely out of the picture, guiltless. The encouragement that these same powers have given the Middle East opponents in this war could be the very cause for same to spread to a world wide theatre, and in such a case, the blame will lie with all parties involved, directly or discretely indirectly.

Humphrey...Part of Machine

People, you remember Chicago 1968. That was when 1000's of people joined together to let Johnson, Daley, the democratic Party, and all the rulers of our country know what we think. We are fed up with their war, of their racism (and ours), of their chauvinism (and ours). That was the scene of the nationally televised police riot which attempted to terrorize our movement into hiding.

We had worked long hours before Chicago during the primaries. Some worked with the McCarthy organization. Some went out on their own. But we were together on one thing: this country had to change. Cutting our hair, calming our voice, we went clean for Gene. At first we struggled alone, but we could only gain in momentum. By the Wisconsin primary it was no longer a question if we had won but who was going to represent us come November.

But then in the shadows of the slaughterhouse, we realized how little we understood. Daley's machine, with Humphrey and all the rulers' sidekicks smiling along, showed us what Blacks and others have known all along, the Man is King. So they gassed us. They beat us. They jailed us. They also took eight of our people as hostages in Chicago, accusing them of conspiracy to riot, in a court in which we have no control of, our brothers were tried and convicted. Bobby Seale was sentenced for contempt of court - his crime was demanding the right to defend himself in court. The rest (except for 2) have been sent to jail - their crime were their ideas, their thoughts, their politics.

And so the government has demonstrated time and again that its own high holy cornerstones of freedoms (that there is more political repression now than in the 50's is understood by those who demonstrated in any way). We all are being condemned: we are called effete snobs, hippies, freaks, crazies. We all are condemned on our ideas, jailed for our talk, and murdered because of our actions. We are all part of the movement, all part of the conspiracy, all part of the New Nation. For together we shall stand; seperated we shall surely fall.

We spent 3 days last year researching Humphrey. We made a leaflet on the man who paid bouncers in the early fifties to kick out desenters from his Democratic Party (but we all thought he was for free speech), the man who fought the unions in the 50's (but we thought he was for civil liberties), the man who welcomed Maddox into the Democratic Party (but we thought he was for civil rights), yes the man who enjoyed the company of host Daley (yes but we thought he was deploring the trial). We demonstrated last year - who listened.

We have to show the Government that we mean business. Humphrey lied last night. He did not even answer the first question (or any for that matter). He was given a chance and he only made a mockery of our movement brothers and sisters. He was the one with the loud speakers, the front page. We only have our whistles and voices. Tapes of his speech are playing today on WFCR. It is therefore not a question of freedom of speech, but rather freedom of life. Our brothers and sisters are being killed, people. Even students have no say as to their lives in this institutional university. I can only regret that the demonstration did not reach its fullest potential. All Power to the People.

Three Strikes

TO The Editor:

"Two strikes....."

It comes as a profound shock to note that the free speech of visitors at the University's public forum has been silenced not once, but TWICE in the last 12 months.

This campus rightly prides itself on its evolution toward excellence in the past decade, but every member of the community here must certainly be aware that -- during these two dark episodes -- the Amherst campus by very definition of a University simply ceased for a time even to exist as an institution of higher learning.

The implications of this appalling fact, it seems to me, override any other social or political issue of the moment. For, if the straight jacket of suppressed free speech, and the iron sway of minority dictatorship, are indeed, the "new wave", then no problems of our time will be solved, save at the end of a club or the point of a gun.

It would be usefui in this hour to remind ourseives that all dictatorships, are simply governance by a minority with free speech suppressed.

The ultimate question of course is, can any of us at the University afford...

"Strike three.....?"

A Kindled Fire

To the Editor:

It would be unfortunate if the demonstration that prevented Hubert H. Humphrey from speaking at the University of Massachusetts Tuesday evening February 24 were used to cast a dark reflection on the University in particular or students in general.

The vast majority of the campus is shocked and outraged at the incredible vioiation of rights and freedom of speech perpetrated by the demonstrators on a guest of the University.

It is important to note that when Mr. Humphrey walked off stage there were 4,000 students cheering him and only 200 booing him.

Of those two hundred, there were many who were known by me not to be students at the University, and still others I was later told who had traveled from Boston for the sole purpose of participating in the disruption.

It is to the credit of the vast majority of those students present at the lecture that they did not resort to the "bar-room tactics" as Mr. Humphrey put it, of the demonstrators.

All reasonable and rational attempts to deal with the demonstrators failed.

As Mr. Humphrey noted publicly later in the evening and privately to several of us, the actions of the demonstrators can only "kindle the fire" of those who practice the politics of repression and reaction.

I offer a public apology to Mr. Humphrey

To those who demonstrated I ask that they review their tactics in the future for it is a sad irony that their actions of Tuesday night have aided those in government and the general populus who seek to repress ANY dissent.

We Are Not All Hippies!

To the editor:

We would just like to go on the record to show that some of us here at UMass. are not members of that bunch of back-alley types which Spiro Agnew characterized as "Yippies, hippies, lions, tigers, panthers, weathermen, S.D.S.'ers or God knows what."

Also we would like to thank Mr. Humphrey for even honoring those uncivil disobedients with a reply. We sent Mr. Humphrey the following telegram immediately after his speech.

"Dear Mr. Humphrey: Accept our apologies for the unpleasantness which you suffered at the Cage." We hope that Mr. Humphrey got our message. We hope that other members of the UMass community do too.

I have just returned from the cage. It is aptly named, for a cage is where these animals belong. No, I take that back. I shouldn't insult animals in this way. The verbal diarrhea we heard tonight one would not expect from primordial slime, let alone human beings.

I watched Mr. Humphrey arrive, then walked around to the other end of the cage to listen. As I reached the door, I could hear the cheering. Once I had stepped inside, I could hear the hisses and Boos superimposed. I then stepped forward to where I could see several fists raised, some with a single finger lifted in a silent salute as their owners voiced their disapproval at having the chance to listen to something constructive.

DAVID P. McKENNA

Though not a particular fan of Hubert Humphrey, I couldn't help but be impressed by the way he handled his tormentors; he gave out as much as he took, but with just that touch of humor that parents reserve for their all-knowing children. Somehow this seemed strangely apropos, one point for Mr. Humphrey.

All in all I found the behavior of some of the people at the lecture to be not unlike the odor from the cow pens north of Boyden, which one encounters from time to time while walking on campus It is something which has to be endured, but which we would be happier without.

JEFF LONG

To The Editor:

Disgust and resentment served to bring down cries of outrage from students in the audience, in the speakers behalf, but to no avail. We, as students, do not feel that the actions of the NUC should reflect upon the University Community and hereby state that those who organized, encouraged and participated insuch an undemocratic and uncivilized demonstration least belong at the University where the objective is the free exchange of ideas. The overwhelming opposition to the demonstrators serves to reaffirm the goals of this University.

Last night the students and faculty of the University of Massachusetts showed that they are members of a second-rate university when not one person took the microphone to demand that the very reason for the University's existence be upheld by allowing Hubert Humphrey to express his views. The minority that deprives the majority of the right to hear the views of a person, whether they agree with him or not, in the name of "bettering society," are being hypocrites of the worst degree.

NORMAN WEEKS

To the Editor:

We're losing the right of free speech and gaining the fear of personal danger for maintaining certain ideas. The nagging thought that people will kill to keep us from expressing an opinion unless expressed quietly away from public places.

I am disgusted and do indeed fear the loss of free speech. I'm not afraid of what people will decide on as true, but rather that people will not get the chance to evaluate two sides of a problem. If we're to sacrifice this freedom, I hope we'll do it knowing precisely what we're doing.

Mr. Humphrey:

The fiasco at the Cage last night was disgraceful and unrepresentative of the campus community. It is a pity that those who insisted on the right to voice their opinions would not reciprocate. Make Love Not Noise

To the Editor:

Mr. Humphrey answered the protestors by suggesting that if the "meeting was therapeutic he was very grateful." Yes, perhaps we are being driven mad by our exposure to the daily violence.

Yet our response to this usually turns out to be "merely therapeutic." !Let Mr. Humphrey answer this charge: "Why must we feel impotent when we attempt to act politically in the traditional manner?" Participation in the corrupt political processes of modern day America only makes people more depressed. You "go clean for Gene" while the War against the People continues. Perhaps therapy is all that we are left with. It seems empty to get out side of our own heads if we can't act effectively in the spiritual wasteland that is modern politics.

Yet therapy must be more than just the cathartic venting of hatred and resentment. I empathize with this and I understand how these feelings arise from a sense of outrage combined with a deep feeling of powerlessness. But I feel that these feelings must be transformed.

These negative feelings are even tactically useless and futile. They alienate people, rather than bring support and they cloud the issues over with talk about freedom of speech. No light can be seen through the dark cloud of hatred.

The question is: can we transform hatred and resentment into the more positive feelings of compassion, caring and love? Can't we find some people to care for and to love rather than look for objects upon which to heap our scorn and ridicule.

As an alternate tactic I respectfully suggest boycotting future speeches like that to stay home and make love. Then we can circulate a petition attesting to that fact and thus demonstrate that we have much better things to do than to yell or to be bored. MAY THE FORCES OF LIFE TRIUMPH OVER THE FORCES OF DEATH.

A Mythical Day

Brother and Sisters:

Tuesday night's action in the Cage was taken in defense and support of the Chicago 7 and their lawyers. Bobby Seale was manacled and gagged, Attorney Kunstler was given four years in prison, yet Hubert Humphrey and other supporters of our present system can go from state to state, college to college expressing their beliefs and life styles, but dissenters are suppressed, behavior not according to the norm of American society is condemned.

Indeed, Humphrey's freedom of speech was limited, but he made no attempt at effective communication, gave vague answers and tried to insist upon a university situation -- what the hell is that?

Who are Humphrey's Johnny-come-latelys --"radical" students, Black Panthers and supporters? In a later press conference he stated his main point was to be that it is essential that we reexamine our commitments and position in the world in the 1970's. That point does not need to be made or discussed any longer, it should have happened a long time ago and the time for positive action is NOW.

Are we who ask for peace supposed to sit back and wait for our fearless leaders to grant it to us some mythical day? We are, but we will not.

Perhaps last night's behavior was not the most effective means of accomplishing the desired end, but it was done and it was done without violence.

Students must reexamine their own positions, think before they condemn another man's action, and look at the justifications. President Lederle has asked the Faculty and Student Senate to condemn Tuesday night's action - DO NOT.

The social structures and institutions of our society must be changed to prevent racism, poverty, crime, and pollution. ACT NOW.

Hypocrisy!

To the editor:

A person who infringers on the rights of free speech of another while proclaiming his own rights of free speech is guilty of duplicity. The activities of the "Conspiracy" while systematically disrupting the speech of Mr. Humphrey lead me to doubt their dedication to the concept of personal rights. How can one loudly proclaim the right to free speech and petition while denying the enjoyment of these rights to a person whom they may disagree with.

Something '70-Modular Credit

Something '70 is designed to complement learning within the classroom and offers the unique opportunity to explore various areas of educational concern not usually found in regular classes.

Each activity lasts an hour and is the equivalent of one modular credit. Fifteen modular credits equal one semester hour of education credit. The credits may be used by Ed. majors towards graduation and by any other student requiring credit from the School of Education.

The Modular System is an accredited program of the School of Education which provides you with the chance to break away from the routine of the classroom educational experience. Gymnasts Fall to No. 1 Springfield

Redmen Frosh Complete Undefeated Season

The UMass varsity gymnasts suffered a 159.00-151.75 defeat at the hands of Springfield College Tuesday evening. Springfield was never in danger as the Redmen met their worst defeat since they opened the season against Syracuse.

UMass' low score is largely due to an unusual number of major breaks. The Redmen experienced difficulties in almost every event as is displayed by their unusually low event scores.

The first event, floor exercise, saw the Redmen drop behind 26.65-25.80. Joe Cents of Springfield won the event with a 9.1. For UMass, Tony Vacca came through with a strong routine to earn a tie with Jeff Wiles of Springfield for second place. Tony received a well earned 8.95 for his efforts.

The next event, side horse, spelled out the doom that would follow the Redmen for the rest of the evening. UMass was able to muster only 23.9 event points as Springfield increased its lead to almost three points, 52.55-49.70. Rick Riley was UMass' highest scorer in the event with an 8.5 and third place.

On the still rings, Springfield took first and second places on the strength of 9.3 and 9.0 performances by Chuck Shiebler and Dave Ellis. Joe Reed came through with a fine routine for UMass that netted him an 8.9 and third place.

In the long horse vault, Springfield outscored UMass 27.0 to 26.7. Steve Cary and Springfield's Jeff Wiles tied for first with 9.15. Joe Reed was third five one-hundredths of a point behind Cary and Wiles.

Springfield's Jeff Wiles and Mike Provencher were first and second on parallel bars with 9.2 and 9.2, respectively. Joe Reed took third for UMass with an 8.8. UMass was outscored in the event 26.45-25.10.

Tony Vacca came through on high bar with an 8.85 routine to place third for the Redmen. The first and second positions went to Jeff Wiles and Kirk Ridgeway of Springfield.

One of the few bright spots for the Redmen was Norm Vexler's performance in the all around competition. He was the high scorer in the meet with 49.65 points edging out Wiles of Springfield at 48.45. All six of Vexler's scores were 8.0 or better.

The win was especially satisfying for Springfield in that it gives them sole ownership of the Eastern League title. UMass is still in contention for second as they meet a tough Temple University team this Saturday to wrap up the regular season.

The UMass frosh took some of the bite out of the varsity loss by whipping the Springfield junior varsity, 121.2 - 104, Monday night. The win ended a perfect season for the Little Redmen, who finished 6-0.

In the all-around event, Steve Scuderi outclassed the opposition by scoring 41.05 points, over four more than the nearest Springfield competitor.

In floor exercise, Mark Berner placed first with a 7.8, Scuderi was second with a 6.95 and Bill Henry third with a 6.5. Henry, a consistent performer for the UMass frosh all season, has been one of the reasons for the success of the Little Redmen.

On the side horse, Al Mancini placed first for UMass with a 6.7. Smith and Califano tied for second for Springfield with 6.45.

Jay Aronstein put forth a strong 7.95 effort on still rings to edge out Kokinalis of Springfield at 7.8. Oliver was third for UMass with a 7.55.

UMass dominated the long horse vault taking all three top positions. Mancini scored an 8.7 to win the event. Scuderi was second with an 8.5 and Shermer third with an 8.35.

Scuderi, at 6.9, was edged out for first place by Cassara of the Springfield frosh, who scored a 7.15 in the parallel bars event. This was only event in which Springfield outscored the Little Redmen.

Celtics Win, 147-124

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics exploded for a National Basketball Association record 54 points in the final period Wednesday night to break open a tight game and rout the San Diego Rockets 147-124.

Don Nelson, with a career high 40 points, and John Havlicek with 36 led the attack all game long for Boston and also did most of the scoring in the last quarter blitz. Elvin Hayes of San Diego took game scoring honors with 46 points before fouling out late in the game, while Rookie Bobby Smith contributed 25 for the Rockets.

The Celtics trailed 97-93 going into the final period, but after the teams traded a couple of baskets apiece, Havlicek and Nelson combined for 10 straight points to put Boston on top 107-91.

Hayes led a flurry which tied the score at 108, but the Celtics then went on a 21-4 binge to move ahead 129-112 and they coasted in from there.

The 54 points broke the record for one period of 52 set by the Celtics against Minneapolis on Feb. 27, 1959, and equaled by Baltimore in a game against Detroit on Dec. 18, 1965.

The Celtics also wound up with 90 points in the second half, missing by one point the NBA record of 91 which they and two other teams share.

Killebrew, Robinson Sign

Harmon Killebrew and Frank Robinson, a couple of home run sluggers, agreed to terms Wednesday for the coming baseball season.

Killebrew, the Most Valuable Player in the American League for 1969, signed for an estimated $90,000 with the Minnesota Twins. He hit 49 homers and drove in 140 runs last season.

The veteran Robinson, who won the AL triple crown in 1966, signed for an estimated $125,000 with the Baltimore Orioles. He socked 32 homers in 1969.

Outfielder Bob Allison, another dangerous hitter, also signed with the Twins as did rookie Herman Hill.

Other signings at the various spring training camps included pitcher Diego Segui and first baseman Don Mincher with Oakland and first baseman Lee May with Cincinnati.

First baseman Richie Allen, pitcher Steve Carlton and outfielder Lou Brock still were unsigned as the St. Louis Cardinals opened training in Florida.

Outfielder Ron Swoboda of the world champion New York Mets also still hasn't come to terms.

Redmen Ravage St. A's Behind The "Big E's"

"Not Even Boston Can Make Us No. 2"-Leamen

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

MANCHESTER, N.H. - Solidifying their claim to an NIT bid, the Redmen out-basketballed St. Anselm's by 31 points for a big 94-63 conquest here last night in a real team effort that featured the scoring of Ray Ellerbrook and Julius Erving, the floor-leadership of John Betancourt plus the outstanding contributions of Dick Samuelson, Jack Gallagher, Dennis Chapman and Ken Mathias.

Samuelson hit for the first two points of the game with 19:28 showing on the clock and UMass began to calmly and slowly take control of the early minutes of play. Four minutes into the affair the Redmen were on top 10 - 2 after an Ellerbrook jumper and a Samuelson free throw completed a three point play with 16:13 left.

However, behind the offense of Dave Sturma, St. Anselm's, climbed right back. Six straight points by the 6'7, 225 pounder brought the Hawks within five, 13 - 8, with 13:34 to go.

Two minutes later Sturma committed his third foul and had to leave the game. But guard Tom Gentile took charge and St. A's was on UMass's heels for the rest of the half.

With five and a half minutes to half-time, an Erving tapof a missed Chapman free throw put the Redmen in front, 26-20. Gentile answered this with a 20 foot jumper and a driving layup for a typically close 26-24 count.

Four points by Erving, who started to heat up for the first time in the contest, and a bucket each by Betancourt and Ellerbrook established a Redman 34-29 advantage at the mid-way point.

UMass scoring in the first half was just about evenly divided among Betancourt, Ellerbrook and Erving. The latter two had nine points apiece; Betancourt tallied ten. Leading rebounder was Samuelson with six.

The second half got off to a bang for the visitors as Erving foul hoop followed by two key Chapman tap-ins and two big Ellerbroook baskets pushed the Redmen in front by twelve, 43-31.

Having achieved such a boost in momentum UMass kept on rolling to build-up leads of 54-38, 66-47, 70-51, 78-53, 86-56, and the final 94-63 count.

So very prominent in the Redman surge to victory was the torid shooting of Ellerbrook, the rebounding and scoring of Erving, the outstanding pivot play of Samuelson and Mathias and the superb floor-generalship of Betancourt.

Before they retired to the bench late in the fray, Erving and Ellerbrook had scored 17 and 13 points respectively in that second half surge. The Redmen breathed their biggest sigh of relief when, with 8:12 left and riding a 66-47 lead, St. A's Sturma fouled out. The remainder of the road to victory was easy.

HOOP NOTES - Redman fans were phenomenal as they gave their boisterous support to UMass inspite of the overwhelmingly partisan St. Anselm crowd. . .They chanted, "NIT, NIT, NIT!" as the affair approached its waning moments. . .When they have something to cheer about, Hawk fans are really wicked, but the play of the Redmen kept them in silence for most of the game. . .The play of the centers, Samuelson and Mathias, was possibly the best pivot performances the Redmen have received all year.

DICK SAMUELSON had another strong night, muscling under the boards for the Redmen.

JULIUS ERVING broke the single season scoring record with 22 points last night. The spectacular soph needed 17 to top the previous high of 554 held by Clarence Hill. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti)

ECAC Penalizes Yale

NEW YORK (AP) - For the second time in six weeks, prestigious Yale University was put on probation Wednesday by a group of athletic administrators for knowingly using an ineligible basketball player who participated in the unsanctioned Maccabiah Games in Israel last August.

By a secret ballot vote of 104-50 following an emotional two-hour membership meeting, the Eastern College Athletic Conference upheld a penalty handed out by its executive council placing Yale on probation until June 3, 1971.

Last month, the National Collegiate Athletic Association slapped a two-year probation on Yale for continuing to play back Langer, a 6-foot-8 reserve center from Fort Lee, N. J., who went to the Maccabiah Games with Yale's permission.

The entire controversy stems from the long-standing dispute between the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union over control of United States teams in international basketball competition. Ironically, that battle seems close to being resolved with the establishment of the International Basketball Board, a 21-man NCAA-AAU group which would control the sport in this country.

The NCAA approved participation in the Maccabiah Games by college athletes in sports other than basketball. It refused to sanction basketball, a move described by Walter Byers, the NCAA's executive director, as an attempt to persuade the AAU to give up the fight.

The ECAC is an affiliate of the NCAA and the nation's largest athletic conference. The ECAC originally gave Langer permission to play in Israel pending NCAA sanction which never came.

Wrestlers Wreck WPI

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

In one of the quickest meets in recent memory, the UMass wrestling team destroyed WPI last night 39-5. The meet, which lasted about 60 minutes, featured six pins and a forfeit in the ten matches.

TOM YOUNG

There were many stars for the Redmen, who won their eighth straight in upping their record to 14-4. Nick DiDomenico got things started with a pin in the 118 lb. match. He set the tone for the night by completely dominating Kanaguta and was leading 10-1 when he pinned him in the third period.

Dave Reynolds followed up with an early second period pin over Dion in the 126 lb. match. However, the UMass momentum was momentarily stopped when Phil Davis was beaten by Ed Polizatto. Polizatto, one of the top 134 pounders in New England, was behind 2-1 after the first period, but he kept his unbeaten record intact by pinning Davis in the second.

The string of pins was momentarily broken when Steve Jones won a 7-0 decision for UMass. Steve completely dominated the match and had Bienick on his back for the last minute of the match. Clay Jester did everything but kill WPI's Zorradidian in the 150 lb. match, but had to settle for a decision. He won by the incredible score of 18-0 and had 7:45 riding time in the eight minute bout.

Mike Brauner wasted little time in pinning Dickson. The UMass 158 pounder lead 2-0 after the first period and quickly put Dickson on his back, scoring the fastest fall of the night at 2:25.

Tom Young continued the rout in the 167 lb. match. He showed signs of returning to his top form by pinning Petry in the third period. Tom led 14-1 at the time of the pin.

177 pounder Bruce Buckbee won his tenth match in eleven tries this season by pinning WPI's Koijebeck at 2:30. Captain George Zguris nearly had a pin in the 190 lb. match but had to settle for a 10-1 decision. Zig had Geetersion on his back twice and may have had a pin but the referee said no.

Students Panic Over Drug Busts

Four Students Arrested On Marijuana Charges

Four people have been arrested by the Massachusetts State Police on the UMass campus since early Wednesday morning. According to Dean of Students William Field and head of Campus Security John Marchant, the State Police consulted with the Campus Police only hours before the first arrests were made. Mr. Marchant said that it is the usual procedure, but not a required one, for the State Police to notify the Campus Police of any arrests that will be made on the campus.

Two campus policemen accompanied State Police with search warrants for marijuana and other drugs to Cance House at 1:30 a.m. on Wednesday morning, February 25. No arrests were made at that time, for the residents of the room were not in, but a quantity of marijuana was confiscated. Around 2:00 a.m., the police went to John Adams Upper House and made two arrests. The State Police again had a search warrant.

At 1:45 a.m., fire alarms were sounded in Moore and Pierpont Houses, which are adjacent to Cance House.

In the late evening of Wednesday, February 25, Campus Police, who had kept Cance House under surveillance, entered Cance House, unaccompanied by State Police, with the intention of apprehending the two people named in the warrant who had not been in their rooms. The Campus Police learned from the youths, that they had turned themselves in to the State Police earlier that day. This was confirmed by the State Police.

All four youths were arraigned in the Northampton District Court yesterday morning and pleaded innocent.

A student living in John Kennedy Tower was taken by Campus Police for questioning early Thursday morning, February 26. This has not been confirmed by Campus Police. A rumor of police entering George Washington Tower and Coolidge Tower early Thursday morning brought crowds of people together in the lobbies of these dorms. Adding to the confusion were numerous fire alarms.

Another, as yet unconfirmed, rumor was of a police search of a room in Thatcher House, in the Quad. The unconfirmed source said that the police had no warrant, and that they were searching for a 15 year-old run-away from Southbridge, Massachusetts, who had last been seen allegedly with a resident of Thatcher House.

Other rumors stated that police had entered Dickinson and Field Houses on Orchard Hill. Also, there were rumors of police searches at Baker House and on the Hill last weekend. Most of the rumors failed to differentiate between Campus Security, Campus Police and the State Police.

Several rocks were thrown through windows at the Berkshire Dining Commons and the "Little Hatch" in the Hampden Commons at approximately 2:00 a.m. on Thursday morning. Five windows were broken with damage estimated by the University News Bureau at $1500.

Late Thursday morning, a janitor in Cance House found a plastic bag alleged to contain drugs. It was turned over to Campus Security.

Administration officials are currently investigating all rumors of police actions. The Dean of Students Office asks that any student who has factual information concerning police actions to contact them. The Office further stated concerning the drug arrests, that there is "no reason to believe that UMass is being singled out."

In order to discuss and decide on local implementation of the Spring actions against the war the New England Anti-war Conference Committee, composed of many peace groups in New England, has put out a call for a regional conference at MIT in Cambridge, Mass. Feb. 28-March 1.

There will be all sorts of workshops and discussions on various aspects of the war. Registration for the conference begins at 6 PM Friday night. The Boston Student Mobilization Committee Regional Office urges all student anti-war activists to attend this important conference and to be present at an SMC Regional Caucus meeting at 7:30 PM. (Specific information will be available at registration). Since the national SMC conference has already passed a number of resolutions concerning actions in the Spring we should meet to discuss how we can put these various ideas before the plenary body of the conference and win people over to Spring mass actions. Student Mobe is holding also a Regional Meeting on Sunday Afternoon so that students can get together (many of us for the first time) and discuss how to build the anti-war movement.

Brooks Makes Statement About Drug Bust Rumors

I requested permission from WMUA tonight to interrupt their previously scheduled program to discuss with you and to respond to some of the concerns that are apparent, regarding allegations of large scale drug busts on campus the past 2 days. I have asked Director of Security John Marchant to join me to respond to questions of law (he is an attorney) and policy matters.

1. First, in reference to the busts, the facts are these, this information based on information on the State Police and University Police logs, and my own information and investigation: At1:30AM Wednesday morning, State Police with a search warrant and accompanied by 2 UM Police officers, went to a room in Cance House. The occupants were not there but a quantity of marijuana was confiscated. The occupants, on advice of their attorney, turned themselves in later in the day. At 2:00 AM that same morning, 2 students were arrested in John Adams Upper House. No other arrests for violations of statutes relating to the possession and use of marijuana, and allied statutes have been made on this campus since then.
2. In neither case did the university police have advance information that the arrests were to be made.
3. The State Police have concurrent jurisdiction with the University police on this campus. Assuming that they have a properly obtained warrant, there is no way this office can prevent their coming on to campus, making an investigation, and arresting alleged offenders. They have been asked by Chief Blasko to clear through the UM police when an arrest is to be made. Investigations by them, however, may occur without our knowledge.
4. Mass arrest warrants, e.g., for all students in a particular residence hall, are virtually impossible to obtain.
5. Since the creation of the discipline board, consisting of 4 faculty members and 4 students, jointly approved by both senates, no case has come to that body regarding suspension of a student for violation of the student handbook rule against the misuse of non-prescribed harmful drugs and use of marijuana.
6. The University does not, under any circumstances, give financial rewards to students who report matters relating to the violations of drug laws to the University police. When allegations of such behavior were made several years ago, I personally checked every student pay voucher that could in any way be associated with this student and could find no such payment. Further, this office has solicited from students, the names of any other student or students allegedly being paid for such services. We have asked for such information repeatedly - no names have ever been forthcoming.
7. We have heard over the past few days continuing rumors about bus loads of police sweeping Orchard Hill. We have been unable to confirm this information and have had no direct information from any student that they actually saw such activity.
8. This office subscribes to the policy statement of the national Assoc. of Student Personnel Administrators published last month: Namely:

A. All use of illicit drugs should not be indiscriminately equated.

B. Marijuana use, we believe, has been falsely equated with the problems and dilemmas associated with hard drug use.

C. Campus policies should be based on moral and educational rather than legal grounds, and we are more concerned with dealing with the causes and reasons for drug use than merely symptoms and control measures.

D. Most important of all, while the campus should not be an environment within which students are immune from the law, presence of outside police on campus is undesirable, save for situations concerning the health, safety, and security of students.

9. One of the many calls we received today, asserted that we could show our real concern in this whole area by supplying attorneys for the alleged wrongdoers. In this regard, we can easily prepare a list of attorneys who will have previously indicated to us their interest and desire to offer assistance. Further, it seems to me that an RSO account could be established against which students could draw money, from funds supplied by other students for bail or defense funds. There is no way I know that state funds can be used for bail money.
10. Whether or not you agree with statutes on use of marijuana is not germaine, for the violation of statutes in this regard is a felony - any legal action taken involves a permanent police record.
11. We urgently solicit FACTUAL information from any source regarding alleged violations of civil rights in connection with questioning and/or arrests relating to marijuana.
12. Further, please try to ascertain facts - because those of you who have not and who wish to believe what you would like to have created the hysteria that now exists on this campus.
13. I can commit Dean Field, Dean Fitzpatrick, and any other staff member in student personnel to respond to your questions and to investigate substantive matters in this regard that you may care to bring to us.

I am sure that this hastely drafted response does not wholly serve to allay beliefs that the campus is becoming a police state. I hope, however, that it will, in part, indicate our concern with your concern and reflect a sincere attempt on our part to deal with this matter equitably and openly.

Statement of Senate Exec. Committee

In light of the recent busts on campus, the Student Senate Executive Committee lists the following points of action:

1. Raise alarm.

2. For your own protection, get as many witnesses and/or pictures as possible.

3. Cause confusion, ask questions, DEMAND YOUR RIGHTS.

4. Notify the Student Senate of any suspected informers 545-2822.

Don't Panic!

Despite the efforts of the MDC staff to verify rumors concerning campus drug busts, very little solid evidence has been turned up. Only four arrests have been confirmed. Rumors that State Police have the authority to spot check any dorm on campus, that dozens of students are languishing behind bars, and that the only safe smoke is Camels are unsubstantiated. Our advice to you is DON'T PANIC. The facts as far as they are known are contained on this page.

Tippo Delivers His First Major Speech as Chancellor

Urges Reworking Of UM Governance

By CLAUDIA HAMBERG
News Editor

In his first major speech as the Chancellor of UMass, Amherst, Oswald Tippo yesterday presented plans for wide-reaching and prompt improvements in the areas of university governance on the campus and departmental levels, administrative organization, and campus communication. He delivered his prepared address to approximately 100 members of the Student Senate, Faculty Senate, and the Graduate Student Senate assembled in Bartlett Auditorium.

Tippo called for the three Senates of the University to establish a Joint Governance Commission to propose "an alternative to our fragmented three-senate system." A joint resolution of establishment will be sent to each of the three senates for consideration next week. He stated his hope that the Senates would act on the resolution no later than March 12, that the Commission would be operating by March 16, and that the Commission's final report could be presented to the campus by May 1, enabling the new governance method to be in operation by next fall.

He proposed that the Commission be composed of four undergraduate student senators, two graduate student senators, four faculty senators, and two administrators.

In explaining the need for a new method of campus governance, Tippo cited the lack of informed judgement, trust, and one workable group to deal with the recent rent controversy. He commented, "It seems clear that our campus institutions obstruct our progress far more than do the mistakes of persons who are trying to operate within them."

He further explained that a new mode of governance must accommodate "the commonality of our interests as a group with our specialization of interests as students and faculty members." He expressed the hope that the campus community would be united under a new governance which would work under common concern, mutual respect and trust, and would provide institutions to better deal with community concerns and issues.

Tippo next moved to a discussion of the University as a social institution and representative of the public interest. Showing some emotion, he spoke of Tuesday night's speech by Hubert Humphrey, which Mr. Humphrey was forced to leave when a small minority of the audience would not allow him to speak, as "the most shameful episode in the history of the University of Massachusetts." He stated, "Wherever free expression is curtailed there is no genuine intellectual community, no true university." He asked that the three senates and the administration work immediately to design procedures which will "forestall recurrences of Tuesday night's events."

Turning to the subject of departmental governance, Tippo urged that departments continue and expand their efforts to experiment with committees through which students and faculty explore curricular and related matters. Under related matters, he stated that in some departments students are consulted on personnel matters and termed this "a practice which should become general."

Next he discussed evaluation of teaching, saying, "We must use the best systematic method of teaching quality that we can develop. It seems clear that the judgements of those taught should be an important element in the evaluation. The evaluation must be given appropriate weight and careful consideration in making decisions on promotion, reappointment, and tenure."

Tippo stated his hope that a University-wide evaluation, possible an enlargement of the present College of Arts and Sciences committee on teaching evaluation, could be in operation by next fall at the latest.

The second major topic of Tippo's speech was administrative reorganization. He stated his intention to propose a plan for reorganization, and asked for suggestions from the entire campus. Once the basic organization is agreed on, new or vacated positions must be filled. He outlined a procedure where the filling of each senior administrative position will be investigated by a separate search committee comprised of faculty, student and administrative representatives. He allowed that further consideration may be needed on the procedure and promised a written statement in the future.

To bring agency heads together during the reorganization and discussion, Chancellor Tippo established an interim Administrative Council to be comprised of the presidents of both Senates, the moderator and secretary of the Faculty Senate, deans, masters of residential colleges, representative department heads, and the like. The Council will discuss general University problems and advise the Chancellor on campus operations.

Tippo recognized the need for additional means of communication during the semester of reorganization. He suggested an experimental University Gazette which will present official agendas, reports, resolutions, and policy to the campus community, a program of visits to the residence halls and departments by administrative personnel, and a resumption of weekly informal discussions with administrators in the Colonial Lounge.

The Chancellor's address mentioned several other important issues facing the campus including Black Studies, a campus ombudsman, student social autonomy, and enrollment pressures on teaching manpower.

He concluded, "I believe that we have the determination, energy, and good-will equal to the work ahead. I hope that in unity we will also find the necessary wisdom."

MLK Meeting Becomes Confrontation

The MLK Board meeting began in a business-like manner but quickly escalated into a confrontation concerning the recent Hubert Humphrey incident and the priority of black needs over white needs.

Argument developed initially upon a request for the MLK Council to endorse the violation of Humphrey's freedom speech Tuesday night at the Cage. Gil Salk called for the MLK Council to issue a statement condemning Pres. Lederle's recognition of Humphrey's constitutional rights being violated since he was heard over radio broadcasts. However they decided to endorse neither statement.

Carl Brown initiated a heated debate when he proposed that all money left in MLK's account, which amounted to $605.99, be allocated to Black program broadcasts over WFCR. Mr. Brown demanded the dissolution of the King Council since it has not served its function in aiding the Black community and has served only the White community. He condemned the MLK Council for making him function as a "house nigger." Mr. Brown's belief that Black programs should be first on the priority list in funding disagreed sharply with Gil Salk's idea that MLK has a need to reach the whole UMass community.

Bramwell Fletcher Brings Shaw to Life at Bowker Aud.

Bramwell Fletcher, a British actor, presented a dramatic portrait of George Bernard Shaw last night at Bowker Auditorium to a sizeable crowd. He casually aired Shaw's views on education, sex and marriage, British theatre, Darwinism and religion, and vegetarianism through autobiographical anecdotes. The show was sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

With an armchair, desk, and hat rack, Fletcher staged in a living room style, series of conversations between the audience and Shaw. Putting the audience immediately at ease by referring humorously to Amherst, he then proceeded to share Shaw's philosophies and life.

"Let me introduce myself - Bernard Shaw, a ghost of the future. . . Don't let your schooling interfere with your education. . . I have a kindly dislike for my fellow man. . .Being truthful has its difficulties. .. .I had to put things in a matter that was joking --or else people would hang me. . I haven't an enemy in the world, but none of my friends like me. . . They should start sending the older men off to war first. . .Imagine an infinity of G.B.S.'s."

With a standing ovation, the audience eagerly responded to the essence of Shaw and demanded five curtain calls.

5 Marines are Arrested In Viet Murder Incident

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) - All five members of a U. S. Marine patrol were under arrest Thursday on charges of murdering 16 Vietnamese civilians last week on a night combat mission. The victims were five women and 11 children, Marine spokesmen said.

Neither the identities of the Marines-all enlisted men-nor the circumstances surrounding the slayings were disclosed, Spokes' men said the investigation is continuing.

The 1st Marine Division, parent unit of the accused men, said the alleged killings occurred Feb 19 in hamlet No. 4 of Son Thang village, about 27 miles south of Da Nang. This is 60 miles northwest of My Lai, where the Army charges U. S. soldiers massacred more than 100 Vietnamese civilians on March 16, 1968.

Marine spokesmen said the bodies were found the next morning by villagers who reported their discovery to another Marine patrol operating in the area.

The settlement is in what U. S. officers describe as highly contested territory about a mile and a half southwest of Landing Zone Ross, headquarters of the 1st Battalion of the Division's 7th Regiment. Many war refugees live in the region.

"This location has been the scene of almost continuous sniper fire and booby trap casualties since Marines commenced operating there," a Marine headquarters statement said.

"Officials did not say whether the patrol had encountered enemy five on the night of the alleged killings.

Marines have clashed around Son Thang with both Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops since moving into Landing Zone Ross last August. A South Vietnamese militia patrol attempting to reach Son Thang Thursday was driven back by heavy enemy fire, field reports said.

1st Division spokesmen said the men who were arrested Monday would not be named nor their company or battalion identified until after their families had been notified of their arrest and charges.

The investigators' findings, officials said, will be reported to Maj. Gen. Edwin B. Wheeler, the commander of the 1st Division, who will decide whether the men should be brought before a court-martial.

Wallace Announces He is Candidate for Governor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - George C. Wallace announced Thursday he will seek the Alabama governor's office again, saying his candidacy would be "a thorn in the side of the Nixon administration."

He predicted at a news conference that President Nixon "is going to make some concessions on school integration he wouldn't make if I weren't running, and he'll make even more after I'm elected."

To be elected, Wallace must defeat at least four other candidates in the May 5 Democratic primary and any candidate who might run in the general election. But the race shapes up as a two-man battle between the 50-year-old Wallace and the current governor, Albert Brewer.

Wallace, a third party presidential candidate in 1968, insisted that he now is running only for governor but he said: "There won't be any future for Nixon if he doesn't give the schools back to the people."

He called on the President to "either put up or shut up as far as this section of the country is concerned."

The administration, he said, "wants me defeated in Alabama."

Answering one question, Wallace said: "The only reason I would ever consider running for president is if we don't get some relief for our schools and from high taxes and if the people wanted me to run. But running for governor probably would make it unnecessary to run for president."

Solar-Lunar Boom Expected in March

NEW YORK (AP) - Scientists around the world will be listening for the fall of a shaeow on March 7. The e'll be an eclipse of the sun that day, as the moon passes slowly darkening it. And the cooling shadow of the moon will fall on the earth, The scientists want to see if the shadow produces a "solar-lunar boom." They want to see whether the shadow moving faster than the speed of sound through the earth's atmosphere produces a sound wave, just as an airplane moving faster than the speed of sound produces a "sonic boom."

When the shadow of the moon hits the atmosphere, according to the idea, it will result in a slight cooling of the air. Surrounding air would move in, pressure would drop and the wave would be produced,

If the "solar-lunar boom" does exist, it won't be like the startling sonic boom. You won't be able to hear it.

This unusual experiment, one of many to be performed when the moon blots out the sun, was described by Dr. Richard K. Cook, chief of the geoacoustic group of the Environmental Science Services Administration, ESSA, in Washington.

In the attempt to detect the "solar-lunar boom," if there is one, ESSA scientists at nine stations will each set up four to five large microphones, several miles apart to listen, measuring strength direction and speed.

The ESSA stations are in Washing, Boston, Boulder, Colo., San Diego, Calif., Pullman, Wash; College, Ala., Huancayo, Peru, La Paz, Bolivia, and Tel Aviv, Israel.

The total eclipse will be the first since 1963 to be visible within the continental United States.

The shadow will touch down far out in the Pacific, then move across Mexico, eastern edges of the United States and through Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. It will leave the earth in the North Atlantic.

If it isn't too cloudy, millions of Mexicans, Americans and Canadians will be able to see the total phase. Partial phases will fall on virtually all of North and Central America and the northwestern section of South America.

The prime observation post for astronomers, however, will be in the mountains of southern Mexico, in the village of Miahuatlan.

There, at an elevation of 8,000 to 9,000 feet, in thin, dry mountain air, the chances are good there will be a clear view of the spectacle.

Misunderstanding Causes Delays in Book Delivery

Midterms are approaching, yet nearly 10% of the books ordered for this semester have not been delivered. Bud Wilks, book department manager for the University Store, gives lack of cooperation and understanding as reasons for the delays.

Wilks said that 50% of the faculty did not make the Nov. 25th deadline for placing orders. Changes in course loads and shipping delays during the Christmas rush caused most of the problems. The faculty also insists on over ordering because they think the store cuts their orders, or because of the inability to plan properly. The expense for returning the books can run as high as $12,000 each semester.

"The students and faculty do not understand the scope of the operation or how it compares with similar businesses," Wilks said. For example, one half hour waits are not uncommon in most campus book stores. Our store handles about 80,000 volumes and a half million dollars each semester and yet the longest wait was ten minutes. We save the students money, too.

"The book department operates on a discount basis. That is, the suggested retail price set by the publisher is cut by 5%. After expenses are met, any profits go to a trust fund, that is used to pay the mortgage on the Student Union and the new Lincoln Campus Center. Actually, the University Store is in all respects a student store. It is governed by students (SUG Board), and the profits are returned to students through the enterprises it sponsors. The store also offers the opportunity for students to make contact with the business world, through its direct dealings and employment of students."

According to Wilks, the books will remain in the present location at the power plant warehouse until May, when the new store will be ready at the campus center. The cost of moving is $2,000, an expense that will be saved by staying until May.

Police Sergeant Denies $1000 Ticket Rampage

Sergeant James Grybko (Badge #84 has denied alleged rumors that he had issued $1,000 in tickets during a week of duty here at the University. Grybko, a native of Deerfield told the Collegian that he did not know how such a claim developed in an MDC letter. He certainly did not issue that number of fines.

Grybko, single and 28 years old, continued his explanation:

"I have no quota in the number of tickets I am supposed to issue. I am assigned areas by Bob Ferriter, the Parking Co-ordinator, and work from 7 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. 1 ticket only those cars parked illegally and that number could not have been 41,000 worth of fines during the week I was accused."

In explaining the role of the UMass Police in parking areas, Grybko stated, "There are six areas that are patrolled. Parking decals are necessary to park in certain restricted areas and we are given booklets of tickets for those cars unlawfully parked. We patrol at various times in order to keep areas free from violating cars."

"It has been my experience, he said, that some people abuse parking rights repeatedly. On the day of this interview, he issued only two tickets he said.

Grybko is currently stationed in the Engineering Area. Tickets draw fines of $5 on the first violation and $10 on every one thereafter, meaning Grybko would have had to issue at least 100 tickets during that week. In response to letter writers' claim, the University Policeman shrugged his shoulders, laughed, and continued his duties.

New Library to Create Good Study Atmosphere

Room for study and a departure from the traditional library atmosphere are the goals of Katherine Emerson, co-ordinator of the new library plan and assistant to director David Clay.

The seating capacity of the 28 story building will be about 3,000, with more than 700 individual study desks that will be arranged to afford the student ultimate privacy. Bright colors and windows with views will be the theme of the world's tallest library. Perhaps one of the most exciting innovations will be the "departmental study rooms."

Mrs. Emerson explained that each department at the University will be awarded a special room There will be forty such areas that will be laid out each in a "lounge" type study. Each lounge will be equipped with about 1,500 volumes, mostly reference material basic to that department's field. These books will be in addition to 2.25 million copies that will be made available through circulation.

One example of the use one department plans for its study room is the establishment of the J.W. Swanson Memorial Fund. The room will serve as a memorial for the late Dr. Swanson and "Hopefully, the study will be a gathering place for faculty and students interested in philosophy according to a department spokesman. The money raised will be used to buy extra books and perhaps better furnishings than would ordinarily have been afforded.

Soph Open Meeting

In response to the recent controversy over the actions of the sophomore class officers and their handling of class funds, the officers are extending an invitation to all sophomores to attend a meeting of the class of '72 Exec Council.

The meeting which is open to all class members, will be held Sunday, March 1, at 9 p.m. in the Council Chambers, Student Union. At this meeting, students will be elected to the President's Council, and chairmen for the council will be appointed.

Steve Driscoll, class President, has stated that there are many positions in class government open for students who are interested in the way the class is run. The officers feel that there is much undue criticism directed at the officers, which is really related to the fact that most students are too apathetic to do anything for the class.

Since much of the criticism has been related to handling of class funds, the budget will be discussed and suggestions for class activities will be considered. This meeting, according to the officers, will give all sophomores a chance to show how interested they are in the running of their class.

Alcoholism is Topic Of WFCR's Call-in

This Sunday evening at 9 o' clock WFCR's CALL-IN Program will present a discussion on alcoholism. CALL-IN co-hosts Art Cohen and Mark Mills will have as their guests two members of Alcoholics Anonymous. They will describe their lives as alcoholics, how they finally decided to go to AA, and what it was like to break the gripping effects of the disease.

The second portion of the program will feature Professor Neyer Belovicz of UMass. Professor Belovicz will conduct a statistical experiment with the listening audience. He will ask people to write down what numerical quantity they would assign to such terms as "occasionally" or "frequently". For example, using 100 as a maximum figure, one might say that "frequently" meant 85 times out of 100. After reading his list of twenty quantitative terms, he will disclose the average assignment for each term given by a large number of people who participated in the same experiment. This may demonstrate how widely people differ in the interpretation of terms that are "often" taken for granted.

Listeners can speak with guests on the air by calling collect at 545-0100 (413).

FROM OUR SIDE

Chancellor Tippo Speaks

The University of Massachusetts, Amherst campus, has its first Chancellor. The proposals for improvement of this University offered yesterday by Dr. Tippo further prove that he possesses an excellent understanding of the problems this University faces. But more importantly, we have been shown that this man will do his best to help us to work together to improve UMass.

We share Dr. Tippo's desire for an improved system of campus governance. Replacement of the present three Senates with a new system will be a massive undertaking. Hopefully the objectives of all possible speed and careful consideration will not be incompatible.

Teaching evaluation has been a long time in arriving. The student body eagerly awaits its implementation. The proposed University Gazette and open weekly discussions with administrators should both prove to be very useful communication lines.

We are glad to see that the student voice has found a receptive audience where it counts most. We are also glad that the new Chancellor has made us an audience to the sometimes secretive workings of educational bureaucracy.

We hope that Chancellor Oswald Tippo will receive complete cooperation in acting on his proposals and that we may expect to see long-needed changes soon.

We also hope that the proposed measures will be the first step toward curing the sour taste of Whitmore lingering in so many mouths.

School Desegregation

An issue that has received little attention in the past few days is the administration's decision regarding the desegregation of schools, particularly in the South. What is called the "legalistic" approach could result in duel school systems--one black and one white. As expected, the White House responded to the statement saying the issue was "too confused" at present to give answers.

The argument is that apparently the Constitution does not require racial balance in the schools; it only states that each child ought to be treated the same. Any action that a school takes contrary to this should be eliminated. Yet, by this same law, all-black neighborhood schools are allowed. Says Jerris Leonard, a presidential advisor on civil rights, "In other words, if we took the position that a neighborhood school system is a viable concert, then we know that we are going to leave substantial numbers in bigger cities of all-black schools." He also refuses to believe that "sending that kid across town just to sit next to some white kids as opposed to having that child have a better quality education" is a truthful argument.

The conception of neighborhood schools is already the battle cry of the South and Mrs. Louise Day Hicks. They maintain that each child attend the school in his district. It is a very good idea--and maybe we should consider ourselves lucky to live in a society where every neighborhood has its own school. But what if that neighborhood is a ghetto? The blacks then retain their dilapidated buildings, inadequate facilities, indifferent teachers -- and the same second-rate education they have been receiving all along.

Busing children which has recently been the reply to neighborhood schools is considered by the Nixon administration as unnecessary. "We have no way to force a school board to bus children. The fourteenth Amendment does not say that you have to bus kids to school." We do not have to bus kids to school. Kids do not have to attend new schools, with modern facilities and enthusiastic teachers. Kids do not need a good education, Black kids, anyway.

Thus, living patterns will dictate the education one will receive. If you're white--all right. If you're black...and live in a black "neighborhood" . . .you haven't got a chance!

Humphrey Aftermath

In the aftermath of Hubert Humphrey's visit to the Cage Tuesday night, two basic interpretations of "free speech" have been argued. There are those views which abide by the existing power structure in this country. Those who believe, by and large, in the way the government now stands, would have liked Mr. Humphrey to make his full speech. They wanted to play the sit-and-listen game, . .their intentions were good:behave in a civilized and respectful manner so that the representative may talk. The morality of intention is what a man like Hubert Humphrey stands for. Is that good, bad, or mediocre? Intention being the acceptance of man as the fallen creature whose redemption and ultimate happiness lie in catering to his desires for well-planned security. Religion accepts this--that man is fallen and must take the weight of guilt off his shoulders and give in. . .go to the church of his choice. . .fight for his country. . . promote free enterprise. . .do what mother says. . .and don't take candy from strangers.

This free man accepts he is fallen. He forgets this by standing up for all the things that are set up so he can call himself a free man, and finds a way to overrule threats to his domain (Humphrey vs. McCarthy at the convention. . raids on Black Panthers). This is his freedom: the old simon says game--simon says do this. . simon says do that! A nice game if you condition yourself properly in beating other people so you can win first prize. These are the people who stockpile weapons and wage wars and throw people in prison for extended periods of time. Material security is the supreme being--the only thing the free man can put his finger on. . . material wish fulfillment of objects and vanity exchange. . .and of course, possession of the best heart-shaped swimming pool on the block.

The happiness to which our parents are accustomed to striving for is in most cases addiction. The middle class addiction is most pronounced because these players appear to be the hungriest. To be happy in this context is to glorify the bad with the good. That is what most marriages are about: settle down. . .to what? living creatively? or living comfortably. . .lethargically. . .covering and diluting irritating truths. . .surviving in a beerdrinker's opium dream: a refrigerator by the ty set (or appropriate substitutes). That is the freedom we were raised on--reward and punishment. Maybe if we are all nice to Hubie and listen to his tasty morsels, maybe maybe then he will get a good impression, if we clap loud enough: and maybe he will take this good impression of UMass and the younger generation, and tell his friends in Washington all about it.

The "conspiracy", as it is so rightly called, feels that the power structure is all wrong, and will not be a part of the game in any way. . .this game of appeasement and applause for the distinguished visitor who by definition should be honored while people are being bombed and others are starving in the ghetto. Those who on principle could not sit through Humphrey. . . in their quest of free speech, are motive inclined. Don't think you can bargain with a motive. They don't work that way. Motives will not compromise, just as an animal won't compromise with a slab of meat if he is hungry. They do not say: Humphrey is here tonight. He is a representative of my government. Let us see if he can be worthwhile tonight. They ask rather: will I be able to respect a man I do not respect? This philosophy is dangerous to organized religion.

Those who seek to change the government must do so not out of hate but out of hope. . .the hope that a government may exist as an instrument of the people and not the sadist and idol. The Judeo-Christian culture is primarily one of sacrifice and subjection. Cruelty and pain are its basic attributes arising out of the imprisonment of the spirit. The free man is running amuck. . . congratulating himself that he has a white man's burden to fulfill. . . vain imperfect creature who needs a couple of drinks to make his dream seem worthwhile. A loud minority is in revolt against the currents of a religious neurosis that has taken almost 2000 years to blossom into a most irritating itch . . .too deep-rooted to be treated with sweet smiles and calomine lotion.

Well, so who is the true exerciser of free speech. . .the active member of which group? Our present reality or an ideal. There are still masses and masses of people that want to be led, no matter which way they tread. God is on Humphrey's side. . .or no! maybe he is a buffoon at that! Are the only free people in this country the ones who are its slaves . . .playing simon says?

(stage direction. . .lights dim: the power structure seems to be fading. . .the theatre is darkened but the audience can still see shadows) Sexually hungry politician is dictating his sublimations to the free men. So tense when he holds the microphone. And how quick he is to leave it. . .when hassled. (stage direction. . .lights flash and the audience decides to leave) Free speech?. . .it's a tossup.

Earthism

Racism and sexism are quite apparent problems. But earthism as a problem seems to be buried in our unconsciousness as yet. In fact, you might ask, what is earthism? Just as racism is discrimination against blacks and other "Colored" minorities and sexism is discrimination against women, earthism is discrimination against the planet. It is oppression of the soil.

Franz Fanon's book the "Wretched of the Earth" is about Blacks. But, "the Wretched of the Earth may turn out to be the Flowers too. Where have all the flowers gone? They have left us....

The usual aspects of discrimination are apparent in earthism. We feel superior when we hate "inferior" things. We dominate the helpless. The earth cannot fight back. Man is the crown of the universe. Everything is put there for his own use, i.e., the earth has no rights.

Mother Earth is considered, like all other discriminated against groups, to be dumb, i.e., irrational. Because she is dumb we must submit her to our rational control in an attempt to make her understandable or rational. Through the use of our scientific understanding the earth becomes an object to be manipulated for our technological purpose.

Compare this to the animism of the Eskimos where they have prayers saying "The earth cries out when we touch her! We will not defile the sacred Earth."

To say that the ground "cries out" is not rational. Were the Eskimos stoned when they made that up?

It is a metaphor. But that metaphor is not just religious nonsense. It means that, in terms of your actions, if you believe that the Earth CAN cry out, you will not desecrate it. You will treat it as something alive. OUR ENVIRONMENT LIVES.

LIVING BEINGS ARE HOLY. WE MUST LOVE THE HOLY LIVING THINGS WHICH SURROUND US. OUR EARTH MOTHER IS DYING! HER DEATH NEED NOT BE....

Amid Cheers and Boos

Part of the United States Constitution states that citizens in our country have the right to freedom of speech. It seems that a certain group of people on this campus either don't believe in this right or are too ignorant to respect it. Last night Hubert Humphrey was willing to answer questions by students and faculty concerning the Chicago 7 trial. He was willing to do this before he gave his prepared speech on our foreign policy - his original purpose for being here. Instead of allowing a civilized discussion to be held, students and a faculty member (to my knowledge there was only one faculty member) erupted into hisses, boos, whistling, and popcorn throwing - popcorn throwing is definitely a mark of intelligence. These people made it clear that they wanted to be heard. They were. However, why should we be expected to listen only to them and not at all to the man whose presence was our purpose for being there? Mr. Humphrey was never allowed to complete a sentence without a group of agitators interrupting with derogatory remarks and obscenities.

The point is not whether Mr. Humphrey's arguments were correct. The point is that Mr. Humphrey had the right to present these arguments without interruption from a group of people too narrow minded to listen to another's point of view.

CAROLYN NIGHTINGALE

We would like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to Howie Gadlin and his little friends for their fine performance on Tuesday evening in the Curry Hicks CAGE. It is a truly embarassing and humiliating situation when such a prominent man as Hubert H. Humphrey makes a rare appearance at the University of Massachusetts and is not even given the opportunity to speak. We hope that that small group of agitators amused themselves with their childish tactics and obscenities because very few others found it humorous. We find it a very pathetic situation where students at an institution of higher learning such as this university display such disrespectful and immature conduct. The vast majority of the crowd were interested in what Mr. Humphrey had come to say, although he never got the opportunity due to the inconsideration and ignorance of a small minority.

So once again we express our gratitude to those of you who claim to want democracy and justice and yet do not have the couth to allow the former Vice-President of the United States a chance to speak. Thanks!!!

What happened in the Cage Tuesday night did not surprise me. It's happened here before....each time by a relatively small number of people who, by supposedly representing the "will of the people", deny the very rights they claim others are denying them. Many of the claims they make demand serious thought and action; there are serious wrongs in our society which must be corrected. Accordingly, their behavior -- in denying Mr. Humphrey an opportunity to speak -- is most likely accounted for by their alienation from the system that originated and maintains these wrongs - in particular the court case concerning the "Chicago 7", which is very much the issue at hand.

But alienation is not a justification for their actions. If that minority of protestors ever wishes to increase in size and power, then they are going to have to respect their own standards. There were many other people in the Cage who came to hear Humphrey speak. Their willingness to hear him out does not necessarily reflect upon their lack of concern for the wrongs existing in our society -- only their consistency in allowing others the same rights they desire for themselves.

RICHARD PERKINS

I was greatly distressed to read about the reception accorded Mr. Humphrey by the UMass students Tuesday night. Not only was it discourteous, it was down right assinine coming from so-called intellectuals, the citizendry of tomorrow. God bless our America for the country certainly cannot expect much from the likes of you!

So you are frustrated over the Chicago 7 verdict! Why let your frustration control your intelligence? It is sad to realize that a minority can so readily dictate to the majority. Little consolation for the majority for allowing them to get away with it. Whether you students participated in the disturbance or not, you are all devoid of responsibility and are utterly discourteous. Don't tell me that you could not have muzzled the culprits and if need be bodily ejected them from the premises. Shame to all you students for such conduct.

One other subject while I'm at it. Who are you to dictate who is to run the University? Your tuition fees do not support the university. They represent but a minute portion of the monies required to run such a large organization. The taxpayers of Massachusetts maintain the University of Massachusetts and accordingly, through the medium of the Board of Trustees, will dictate who is going to be chancellor,president, etc. My hat is off to the members of the Board of Trustees for deciding for themselves who is best qualified to administer OUR affairs at UMass. What a farce that a teen aged, inexperienced punk had the audacity to question and even contradict the judgement of men of experience with her dissenting vote. But then, the whole lot of you are all part of a big farce....so I guess your student senate president was well chosen after all!

MARCEL R. PELISSIER

To the editor:

Not only did the antagonists create a totally unfavorable climate for those who desired to hear Prof. Humphrey, but they acted like immature, irresponsible, and spoiled children, not befitting either their age or their intelligence. They refused to treat Prof. Humphrey with the same respect that he accorded them. How can they expect that what they have to say will be listened to, and dealt with, when the manner in which it is presented befits not adult-like analysis, but childlike, irrational, emotion.

Prof. Humphrey acted with tremendous dignity, and we admire the manner in which he handled the revolting confrontation. He too may be guilty of some injustice; however, at least he conducted himself as a respectable, human being. Can we say as much for the demonstrators?

ELIZABETH CLARKE
MARION RICKER
MARSHA MCLAUGHLIN
JANET NELSON

To the editor:

Mr. Humphrey asked, he pleaded with the demonstrators to give him a chance, but this was denied. Even a professor on our own campus would not be dignified enough to let Mr. Humphrey deliver his lecture.

Personally, I think demonstrations could be a wonderful thing, after all they let people deliver their feelings. I think, however, that it is a shame that demonstrators are too shortsighted to realize that what they want, what they are trying to achieve, and what their entire thesis is about, they deny their fellow man. As much as they have a right to be heard, and they were willingly heard by Mr. Humphrey, they denied the four thousand people in the Cage of hearing Mr. Humphrey deliver the lecture that was scheduled.

Civil Liberties is probably a great thing, many people seem to be pushing it as a necessity and I commend them for this. I just think that it is a shame that some people who preach things are so ignorant that they can't practice them. If Mr. Humphrey was willing to let the demonstrators be heard, the least they could have done was be as polite and fair to him as he was to them.

To Mr. Humphrey, I commend you for the way you handled yourself and the inconsiderate minority who made fools of themselves and who hurt their own cause of civil liberties. Believe me, the majority of the campus was on your side.

ELLIOTT C. MARGOLIS

Good Luck

To the editor:

I hope to God that you'll print this for all to read. At the time of this writing I am sitting in a room pondering what to do with my life. Right now I'm trying to find a lawyer to turn myself into the police. Last night, when my roommate and I were out, the police cordially entered my room and ransacked it looking for drugs. Luckily for me I have friends who warned me to stay away.

God only knows what I'm going to do next. I'll eventually have to turn myself in, but before I do I just want to say something to the "distinguished" students of this University.

I have one simple question to ask. I just want to know how much more crap you students are going to take? Last night, Humphrey talked about freedom. Well, someone tell me where the hell is my freedom and many others like me.

Tell me, who eats food and ends up with ptomaine poisoning, who pays $160 per month for a square room. You and I do and man how much more are you going to take. Well, good luck to everyone and don't forget to go back to your room tonight and study.

Far too Long

To the editor:

As the Vice-President of the Student Senate I feel compelled to attempt to explain to the student body the implications of the action taken by the Board of Trustees in regard to the appointment of a Chancellor. Quite simply what has happened is that the chief academic and administrative officer for the University of Massachusetts/Amherst has been appointed without ANY APPRECIABLE student consultation or involvement.

The action by the Board of Trustees dispelled many thoughts I had on the validity of the Board, I had never accepted the rationale for a Board of Trustees nor had I accepted the clearly subordinate role students have been forced to play in the decision making process. After the November SWAP meeting I had become somewhat optimistic about the prospects of the student body, through the Student Senate, working with the Board of Trustees of this University. The total disregard by the Board of Trustees of the Student Senate position negated everything that had been discussed at the SWAP conference. My opinion of the Board has changed from feeling that it is a misguided group of individuals with the good of the University at heart to a feeling that the Board is a group of self-righteous individuals caught up in the power game and resistant to any type of major change including the idea of recognizing the competence and RIGHT of students to have a PROMINENT role in the decision making process at this University.

I cannot help but feel contempt for the Board of Trustees as a group and have myself felt utter frustration over the entire situation at the University. I am not militant, but we have attempted to use words and rational discussion for SO LONG. Where do we go from here? We have lost the most important battle, we have been raped. What tactics must we revert to now? I have no answers at this time.

GLENN ELTERS
Student Senate Vice President

As a student and a human being, I was apalled by the way Mr. Humphrey was treated the other night by an unsilent minority who seem to draw their fire from satan. As a member of the silent majority, I have been pushed too far and feel it is now time to come alive. I wish to apologize to Mr Humphrey on behalf of myself, my friends, the UMass campus, the town of Amherst, the state of Massachusetts, and this great country of ours which was founded on the premise of liberty and justice for all. Of course, looking at this realistically, I must say that such uncourteous displays will probably continue to occur, as history has a way of repeating itself. And furthermore, I wish these anarchists would take a hint from their hearts and from the rational men of civilization, and apologize along with me and promise that they will never do it again.

The Just Cause—Think!

To the editor:

Many people believe that free speech is the main issue in the Humphrey lecture. Many of us in SDS and many others feel this clouds the real issue. GE strikers have prevented scabs (strike-breakers) from crossing picket lines, otherwise the workers powerful weapon of the strike would be destroyed. The U.S. troops is Vietnam are denying the right of the Vietnamese people to create a society for their own interests. Also the Vietnamese are denying the U.S. troops the right to oppress the Vietnamese people. THE REAL ISSUE IS NOT FREE SPEECH, BUT WHAT IS THE JUST CAUSE. This is why the Collegian cartoon showing student radicals as Nazis is an attack on all progressive students.

Humphrey wanted to speak as a "teacher" on a university campus yet he has been instrumental as Vice-President in setting up policies that have killed hundreds of Black people in ghetto rebellions in America and killed thousands of Vietnamese in a war designed to increase the profits in this country. So what was done to Humphrey on Tuesday night was justified.

WAS it a good thing to do? Many people in the Cage felt the demonstration was an attack upon them. This is an unfortunate thing. We in SDS who were in the demonstration didn't do so to attack the students, but to attack Humphrey.

Most demonstrators felt that Humphrey is a part of the government which has initiated policies of genocide against Blacks in America and the Vietnamese people.

This demonstration will not work in stopping the Vietnam War, Racism, or other forms of economic exploitation by U.S. Imperialism.

What can work? What is needed is to gain the support of workers (blue-collar, white-collar, and the unemployed of all ages) and students to actively fight against Imperialism Racism, and all other forms of exploitation. Why ally with these people? Because workers are the people who produce all the wealth in this country and it is in their power alone to stop the War Racism.

SDS at UMass has supported workers struggles when it fought alongside 17 Hatch worker to keep compensation when they were threatened with layoffs during the month of January. The workers, SDS, and other students set up a fighting alliance which forced the University bosses to give the 17 workers their jobs back for that month.

The only way in which students can deal effectively against Imperialism and Racism is to ally with workers. A worker-student alliance could be effective in fighting ROTC and recruiting.

On March 5 the MLK Committee on Militarism and UMass SDS will have a demonstration against the Honeywell Corp. who will be recruiting on campus. Honeywell makes cluster bombs (anti-personnel bombs) used to terrorize the Vietnamese people. We shall demonstrate against this company, that like all others, makes profits by exploiting people all over the world.

To the editor:

I will not allow anyone on this campus, in this community, or in this country to deny me the right to express my agreement or displeasure with a speaker. In my opinion Hubert Humphrey must take a large share of the blame for not restraining the monster mayor of Chicago in 1968. Five good men have recently been convicted and jailed on charges relating to the police riot which occurred in Chicago in 1968. I felt it my right and a duty to go and tell Humphrey that I feel this way. I did go to the Cage. I did tell him, over and over again, what I thought of him. I am glad I did it. And if Humphrey comes here another time, I will tell it to him again.

FRANCES WARING '71

Self-Defense

To the editor:

The recent rash of drug busts on campus and in the area is a cause for deep concern. Our brothers and sisters, both "guilty" and innocent, are being awakened in the middle of the night by police raids strongly reminiscent of the friendly calls of the Gestapo in WW II Germany. Is it possible that the raids are reprisals by Big Brother for the unfriendly treatment of Appeaser Humphrey? Or could it be part of a power play between our popularly chosen new Chancellor and his long-standing rivals, our beloved Treasurer and Chief of Police? Nationally publicized efforts to protect the public from crazed marijuana addicts would certainly increase the bargaining power of Blasko and his employer, Johnson, in the new regime headed (no pun intended) by the Wizard of Oz (Tippo).

Or could it be that the drive for student self-determination at UMass is getting dangerously strong, and that the busts are an effort to split the issue? News about pot-smoking UMass students, combined with the carefully controlled press releases about the confrontation with Hubert, will act to destroy the public legitimacy about our efforts to build a university community which will challenge the already unsteady legitimacy and power of the Provost/Chancellor.

In any event, the community must unite to defend itself. We must begin to recognize that we are our brothers' keepers, and that we must act to protect them. A few suggestions listed here should be considered and augmented at defense meetings in each dorm on campus. (1) Don't wait for someone else to call a defense meeting - do it yourself - tonite! (2) Encourage the brothers and sisters not to keep dope in their rooms. Nobody can get busted for possession of drugs in a public place. (3) Make contingency plans to alert the dorm that a bust is taking place. (Using the fire alarm for this purpose is illegal, so I can't suggest it.) (4) Have all residents of the dorm confront the police in the halls, the lobby, or, if at all possible, outside the dorm. The police are attempting to enter YOUR home - you each have a right to demand a search warrant which, by law, must specify exactly what the police are looking for and where they expect to find it. They may search ONLY those specific places mentioned in the warrant. (5) Appoint teams of representatives/witnesses to follow the police, without obstructing them in any way, and record their badge numbers and exactly what is said and done from the time they enter the building until the time they leave. This will deny the police the opportunity to plant drugs or to otherwise exceed the limits of the search warrant.

To my brothers and sisters living off campus. Apartments are more vulnerable to harrassment, so stay cool. Keep your place as clean as possible. Cops are good at their jobs - there's no such thing as a "safe" hiding place. If you must keep a stash, hide it in a public place. Make written note of everything said and done if you're busted.

To all: Keep an eye open for informers. Report any you know of to an officer of the Student Senate for action.

Let me conclude by publicly stating that I'm clean. If I get busted for possession, it will be because I wrote this letter or because of my politics. Keep that in mind.

Peace,
GILBERT J. SALK

To the editor:

I realize that many students, echoing the beliefs inculcated in them by parents, school and the "old" society media, will be writing letters "deploring the actions of what their elders have told them to call an "immature minority." To give another viewpoint, then, I should like to say that I find their mindless puppeting, and the childish reaction of the Collegian to be immature.

As for those beautiful "young" people who exerted their freedom of speech and refused to defer to the father-image Humphrey who allowed our sisters and brothers to be beaten in Chicago, I applaude you. You are to be congratulated for refusing to be, in the words of David Dellinger, good Germans and refusing to act like good Jews.

We have passed our verdict on the "old society. We are going to make a revolution. Dear Mr. and Mrs. America, start looking under your beds, there is a CONSPIRACY, and I am proud to be part of it.

Teacher Award Selection Lacks Student Response

There is little undergraduate participation in the nominations for the Distinguished Teacher Award.

A faculty member will receive $1000, sponsored by Standard Oil of Indiana, for distinguished teaching (which is designated by six criteria).

According to Richard Conklin, non-voting recording secretary for the DTA committee, the few undergraduate nominations that trickled in were on scraps of paper and were hardly worth considering. This means that undergraduate choice in the nomination of these distinguished teachers is non-existent this year, although criteria for nomination apply directly to the student.

As modified by a committee on Jan. 20, 1969, the criteria are: 1. The ability to stimulate students through challenging ideas and effective communication techniques. 2. Thorough knowledge of a subject matter in a discipline. 3. The ability to interpret and relate the results of contemporary scholarship through his teaching. 4. The ability to relate to students and colleagues as to advance the general purposes of the academic community. 5. Sincere interest in counseling students. And lastly, 6. Evidence of a consistently distinguished teaching record for at least five years at UMass.

A number of candidates may be nominated from each department, and a committee consisting of a representative of each department, a representative of the graduate senate, two representatives of the undergraduate senate, the winners of the previous two years and the preceding chairman, suggests the winners. Chancellor Tippo chooses and his word is final.

Last year a flyer was produced explaining all this and an article was prepared for the Collegian and the Amherst Record. There was no advanced warning given this year.

And so it seems that this year the Distinguished Teacher Award is going to be judged solely by graduate, faculty and alumni points of view.

Skiers Head to N.H. For Sat-Sun Meets

Again traveling to the White Mountains of New Hampshire, the UMass ski team will hope to increase its load in the N.E.I.S.C. Conference and boost its win-loss ratio to an incredible 66 wins and only four losses. With only two weekends left, a win on both Saturday and Sunday will most probably assure the Redmen of first place in the Conference.

Because of the lack of snow and the excess of rain, UMass will once again be racing on blue ice. Blue ice, unlike packed powder, doesn't get as rutted under course conditions but is much more of a test of the racer's ability. Racing on it requires a razor-sharp edge as well as a great deal of skill and coordination on the racer's part. So far this season the Redmen have been showing this skill, and their ability to out-ski the other teams right off the hill. As a result they have built up a highly impressionable lead in Conference points.

On Saturday, Northeastern which is currently in second place, will host a two run slalom. This event was the cause of one of the Redmen's losses and is also one of NU's stronger events.

However, with Ted Martin back in action after last weekend's illness, Jim Garstang, who has won the last three races, and the rest of the team to back them up, the skiers can almost be certain of a win on Saturday.

Sunday Babson College will hold a two run Giant Slalom. This is UMass' strong event; it has only suffered one loss in it all season. The loss came last weekend when John Gray, Jerry Curran and Jim Latimer, who had fine first runs, fell prey to the ice and chatter marks on their second attempt. This cost the team valuable seconds and the win.

However, this weekend the Redmen willlbe ready for this, and will undoubtedly put two good ones back to back on Sunday.

Frosh Pucksters Away For Dartmouth Tilt

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

Defensiveman Dave Branch will be back in the lineup Saturday as the UMass freshman hockey team travels to Hanover, N. H. for a game against the Dartmouth frosh.

Branch had to sit out last Saturday's big win against Brown University because of illness. Coach William Richards was thus forced to move forward Rich Anderson back to the point to help out defensiveman Don Lowe and Bob Shilalie, who both saw a lot of ice time against Brown, and both played extremely strong games.

If scouting reports are an accurate indication, Dartmouth figures to give the Little Redmen sextet all it can handle.

The win against Brown brought the frosh record to 7-3. Commenting on the very creditable showing by his team so far this season, despite the fact that it lacks any depth whatsoever, Coach Richards cited team play as the reason for the success.

He feels that every player on the team has had an equal hand in bringing about the good season record. In fact, he was reluctant to single out any individual player, although he did mention the steady job that goalie John Kiah has been doing in the nets and also the fact that center Don Riley has been coming up with some important goals in the more recent victories.

Extramurals Tomorrow!

The Annual Extramural Competition between UMass and the University of New Hampshire will be held at UMass on Saturday, Februar y 28th, in the Boyden Gymnasium. The top three UMass Intramural Basketball and Handball Teams will meet their counterparts from New Hampshire. The schedule of games is as follows:

BASKETBALL - Boyden Gymnasium

Varsity 'M' Vs. Wizards On Sunday

The Harlem Wizards, court jesters of national fame will combat the UMass Varsity 'm' Club all-star team at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Cage. The exciting tilt is sponsored by the local chapter of the Lions Club, with the proceeds going to a worthy cause, the Massachusetts Eye Research fund.

Tickets for the contest will be $2.50. The game should be of special interest to UMass fans, who will be able to see five former Redman players, stars of the past five years, performing on the court once again. They are Clarence Hill, Jim Babyak, John Lisack, John Dreyer and John Shockro.

Stockies Win

Stockbridge walked over Northampton Jr. College, 71-50 in a Wednesday night game in the Cage. After falling to the Stockies 53-48 last week, Northampton seemed determined to win as they trailed by only one point, 29-28, at halftime.

In the second half, Stockbridge played a spectacular defense and held their opponents to eight field goals. Except for two free throws, Northampton was scoreless for nearly seven minutes. With 14:09 left on the clock, Okraska made the first two points for NJC in the second half. This Friday, Stockbridge will play Greenfield Community College for a second time.

Trackmen at Peak Condition for Saturday's NE Championships

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Coming off its most impressive showing of the season last weekend in the Yankee Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships, the UMass track team will be at peak condition and competitive edge for tomorrow's New England Championships at Storrs, Conn.

An outstanding field of teams will assemble tomorrow on the UConn campus to fight it out for the track supremacy of New England.

With a field as strong as tomorrow's is, a matter of only a few points is likely to separate the first six or seven teams in the final standings. There is no clear cut favorite and it is doubtful if any team will make a runaway from the rest of the field.

The "class" of this meet are the teams from UConn, UMass, Boston College, Northeastern University, and Coast Guard, with Boston University, Boston State, Rhode Island, and Central Connecticut relying on only two or three top individual performers to make a run at the favorites.

The favorites are extremely equal in track talent. UConn and UMass had only seven points separate them in last weekend's conference meet. Boston College and Northeastern were second and third respectively in the Greater Boston meet behind Harvard, and this past week the Huskies evened the score as they defeated the Eagles in a dual meet.

Coast Guard was second last year in this same meet and was first outdoors. Each of these teams is capable of placing ten or eleven men in the scoring column. On the basis of these facts, the team title shapes up as a real dog fight and should come down to the last couple of events.

Each event has an outstanding field entered in it and many records will be in jeopardy of being erased from the books. With individuals such as Art Dulong of Holy Cross, UMass' Ron Wayne, John Vitale of UConn, and Yankee Conference hurdle champ Peter Wilkins from Rhode Island, this meet will be a showcase of the best track and field competition that New England has to offer.

Starting time is at 10:30 and the morning program will consist of the final in the shot put and the trials in the hurdles, the dash and the 1000-yard run. These trials are of particular importance to the Redmen. If they are to have a shot at the title, the hurdlers, the dashmen, and shotput and yard ace, Dave Evans, must qualify for the afternoon finals. Time and time again throughout the season these men have come through in the clutch with the big effort and tomorrow they will need their biggest efforts of all.

Eddie Acaro, the steadily improving UMass weightman will be competing in the shot put tomorrow. In this event he will be facing the stiff challenges of Craig Connors of UConn, who set a Yankee Conference shot put record last weekend, Phil Conway of BU and Paul Krause of BC.

The hurdles and dash are the toughest fields in the meet. Jim Graves and Gerry Spellman are in their best form now and are two of the favorites in the hurdles, along with Peter Wilkens, the Yankee Conference champ from R.I. Other hurdlers to watch are Burke from BC, Sweeney from NU, and Lacallade from UConn.

Yankee Conference champion Dave Marble leads his Redman teammates Eddie Mayo and Ron Harris against the other top dashmen in New England. Their competition comes from Wilkens, George Carter and Walter Jones of Boston State, Tom Johnson of B.C. and Jeff Smith of UNH.

The 1000-yard run features Steve Flanagan of UConn, the defending champion in this event, against Evans who has proved himself to be one of the best in New England in this event in the last couple of weeks. In the YC meet Flanagan nipped Evans at the wire and Dave will be out to even the court tomorrow. Another runner to be concerned with in this race is Frank Kelly of NU who has been running very well in recent weeks and placed high up in the standings in the Greater Boston meet.

In the afternoon the events in which the Redmen have chances of picking up points are the high jump, the relay and the mile and two mile runs.

Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey, one-two finishers in last weekend's conference meet, are highly rated performers in the high jump. The favorite is Mike Karafotias of Springfield who has cleared 6'10 this season. Other performers to watch in this event are John Winskowitz of BU and Ed Platz of the Coast Guard, Carpenter and Shaughnessey have been outstanding performers all season and should give UMass some points in this event.

The mile is the feature race in this meet. And when one looks at the field he can see why. Art Dulong of Holy Cross, Ron Wayne of UMass, Craig McColl and John Vitale of UConn. Lou Ruggiero of Boston State and John Iles of BC.

There is no need to have to describe what kind of runner Dulong is. Wayne has been an outstanding runner all season for UMass and is ready for a big effort in this mile. McColl and Vitale are no strangers to any UMass cross country and track enthusiasts. These two have given UConn the top one-two mile tandem in New England this past season. Ruggiero and Iles might be strange names, but they have the credentials to give any of the above mentioned runners a run for their money on any track.

The two-mile field has only two definite "name" runners in the race. They are Rich Spruling from UConn and Marty Robb from Providence. If Dulong, Wayne and Vitale are able to they also will compete; however, the mile might be so fast a race that these three might not be ready to give a second all-out effort. If the team scoring is close between UMass and UConn and both have a chance for the team title, Wayne and Vitale will definitely be in the field.

The meet could be decided in the relay. The UMass relay team will be comprised of Gerry Spellman, Dave Marble, Al Mangan, and Dave Evans. Each of these runners will be competing in their second or third race of the day.

The hope here is that UMass' last big effort will be a winning one, not only for a relay victory, but also for a team victory in the New England Championships.

"Seniors Night" Highlights UMass-Maine Tilt

"Their Loss will Be Felt the Most."; Hoopsters Host Bears

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

It will be "Senior Night" for Ray Ellerbrook, Dennis Chapman, Jack Gallagher and Dick Samuelson at the Cage Saturday when the UMass basketball team hosts Yankee Conference opponent Maine in the last home appearance for the above four seniors. Tap-off time is 7:30; the Redman frosh team will open up festivities with a 5:30 encounter with tough Rockwood Academy.

"We've lost many seniors since I've been at Massachusetts and, undoubtedly, this group has contributed the most and their loss will be felt the most," coach Jack Leaman commented yesterday afternoon in reference to Ellerbrook, Chapman, Gallagher and Samuelson.

In fact he could not find enough nice things to say about this foursome. He praised them when he said, "They have been the heart of the development of the basketball program at UMass."

Leaman pointed to the various milestones these seniors have achieved. "Unless by major catastrophy, these kids will never have lost a Conference championship," he made clear and went on to boast of their three-year Yan-Con record of 23-5, and their overall mark of 47-24. And, should the Redmen win their last two regular season games against Maine and New Hampshire, those marks will read 25-5 and 49-24.

Individually each has contributed something in his own way and style. Leaman took time out to clarify each player's significance to the growth of UMass basketball.

Ellerbrook's role must be looked at first. Everyone is well aware of the Redman captain's accomplishments as a shooter and scorer. Leaman had many things to say but put it best when he concluded, "We would not be where we are today if it had not been for his outstanding abilities."

In discussing Chapman, the head coach said, "He has played some sensational ball. He is a great clutch performer and is willing to take chances on the basketball floor."

Leaman refers to the recent emergence of Gallagher as a star performer as "just a tremendous story." Gallagher's performances as a defensive specialist have been excellent. His coach put it this way, "When we pick our all-opponent team, it will probably be made up of the men Jack Gallagher has covered."

As for Samuelson, Leaman praised him thusly. "He has been an outstanding performer in our recent 11-1 streak. Sam played in the shadow of Peter Gayeska for two years and has emerged as a star in his own right."

Collectively these four boys have made a major contribution to the recent emergence and prowess of Redman basketball. Leaman calls them the "number one seniors of the number one team" and affirms, "Our basketball family will miss them." The UMass basketball fans feel the same way.

As regards the Black Bear squad UMass will face Saturday night, it is the same team the Redmen thumped, 84-66, last weekend in Orono. They should have little trouble with 6-15 Maine for, even though UMass had an off-game a week ago, it still outdistanced the Bears by 18 points.

UMass has yet to receive an NIT bid. Four teams were selected Wednesday, Louisiana State, St. John's, Marquette, and Georgia Tech.

A lot of people have different arguments as to why the Redmen should or should not be invited to the NIT. Leaman has postulated the following theory: "Since we're the number one team in New England, and since Boston College did a great job as the number one New England team in the NIT last year, they (the tourney committee) should give UMass a bid."

HOOP WHOOPS - Ellerbrook has really gotten hot lately and is playing his best ball of the year... In fact Leaman commented, "He's playing as well right now as he ever has for us."...In the freshman tilt Wednesday night, the UMass quintet fell victim to the St. Anselm's frosh, 75-66 ... Rhode Island and Connecticut go after each other Saturday night at Storrs, the winner of which game will remain tied with UMass for the Yankee Conference lead... After the Redmen dropped some early season toughies to URI, U-Conn, AIC and Fordham, hopes for a post-season tourney bid were just about non existant...What a difference a few weeks can make! ...UMass stands on the brink of a trip to New York City and coach Leaman is justifiably proud of his squad when he boasts, "Since January 21, we've played as well as anyone in the country. We're 11-1 since then."...Julius Erving who was selected to the All-ECAC weekly team for the fourth time, established a new Redman single-season scoring mark against the Hawks when his 22 points gave him a total of 559, five more than Clarence Hill tallied in '65-66...Ellerbrook moved into fourth place on the UMass all-time scoring list when he hit for 26 against St. A'S...His career total is now 1173 which is 22 points better than fifth place Rodger Twitchell and 84 short

Hockey Team Faces New Hampshire Tonight at Orr Rink

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Concluding their 1969-70 regular season play, the Redmen hockey team hosts two home contests against the Division I Wildcats of New Hampshire Friday night, and the Ephs of Williams College Monday night. Starting time for the New Hampshire game is 7:30.

The Wildcats have had their ups and downs this season, losing to Division II rivals Vermont and Bowdoin; but last week they beat highly-touted Boston University, who beat Boston College Wednesday night, 8-1.

One of the major reasons for New Hampshire's inconsistent play has been the poor play of its goalies. Coach Charlie Holt lost last year's starter Rick Metzer, second team all-ECAC, via graduation, and has been forced to rely on little-used senior Larry Smith and sophomore Peter Ommiston.

Despite their defensive shortcomings, the Wildcats have an explosive offense led by last year's leading scorer, junior Lou Frigon, 33 goals and 11 assists. Other returnees include wings Mike McShane (8-22-30 pts.), co-captain Allen Clark (14-13-27 pts.), co-captain Ryan Brandt (9-16-23 pts.), Al Catto (4-11-21 pts.), and John Gray (12-11-23 pts.).

The defensive corps will consist of veterans Pete Stoutenberg, Bob Davis, Gary Jaquith and sophomore Paul Knight and Paul Brunelle.

Redman coach Jack Canniff is expected to counter with four lines, hoping to wear down the fast skating Wildcats. This tactic has produced excellent results lately, especially against Brown University, even though the Redmen eventually lost, 5-2.

P.J. Flaherty is expected to start in goal despite the fact Bruce "Mr. Zero" Crawford has had three shutouts in a row including Tuesday night's 9-0 white-washing of the Holy Cross Crusaders. In six games this year, he has allowed only four goals for a .667 goals against average.

UMass still has a slim chance of making the Division II ECAC playoffs. As it stands now Bowdoin is currently ranked number one with Middlebury, Vermont and Merrimack each having four Division II losses. The Redmen's Division II record is 9-5. A loss by any of the above would put the Redmen into immediate consideration for the fourth playoff spot.

Right now UMass' best chances are with slumping Vermont playing Salem State tonight at Lynn. A Salem win coupled with an upset win by the Redmen against UNH and a Monday night victory against Williams would give UMass a better than 50-50 possiblity.

In season play against Vermont, UMass split, losing the first game 4-3 in overtime at Vermont, and winning the second 3-2 in a typical Orr Rink "Cardiac Finish."

ICE CHIPS - WMUA will broadcast Friday night's game, this being the first time a UMass hockey game has ever been broadcast live over the university station... "Bruno" Charlie Donovan will not wear his skates to the rink..."Solo" McMann would like nothing better than to get that elusive "hat trick" against the Wildcats... "Mashed Villian" Bartholomew challenges "Fast Eddie" and/or "Big Ed" Riley for the championship in a Texas Death Match.

Mermen in Sat. Action

Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, the UMass swimming team will host MIT at Boyden Pool in its last home meet of the year.

Due to a small turnout of swimmers this year, six originally and now nine, the UMass swimmers have had a poor season. Their record is now at 1-7 with losses to such teams as Amherst, Wesleyan, Vermont and Central Connecticut, all of whom are strong swimming schools and contenders annually for honors in the New England Championships.

In their last home meet against Worcester Tech., the small contingent from UMass, attended by an equally small gathering of loyal fans, fought the meet all the way to the last relay. The Redmen were right on schedule, having won just enough points to be in contention at that relay.

WPI, however, due to more depth, came up with two fresh swimmers out of four for the relay to compete against four from UMass who swam in at least one and six, in three cases, two events prior to the relay.

The Redmen were confident that they could beat WPI in the relay since their fastest relay, a school record-holder, had gone 3:38.0. However, WPI broke that record by four seconds and won the relay, 3:34.0 to 3:35.6.

This is an indication of what has happened all year to the undermanned UMass squad. Seeing their last dual meet action for UMass on Saturday will be seniors Brian Leach, Dennis Moulton, Geoff Senior, Mark Miller and captain Al Northup.

Of this group, Senior is a member of the school record-holding freestyle relay team, Northup is a co-holder of the record in the 200-yard breaststroke and Miller holds school records in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle holds.

Along with Ed Jagab, Maurice Lynch, Herb Schuster, Mark Cleaves and Paul Joy, the above seniors are looking for some good races tomorrow.

Grapplers Meet MIT

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Winners of eight straight and ten of its last eleven, the UMass wrestling team closes out the dual meet season this weekend with away meets at MIT and Boston College.

The Redmen, now 14-4 on the season, have been almost invincible since Christmas. After starting the season with three straight wins, they proceeded to lose three straight on a trip to Pennsylvania. Since then, a 27-7 loss to number one ranked Springfield has been the only blemish on the fine record.

Coach Homer Barr's matmen should continue to roll this weekend. MIT, whom the Redmen face on Friday night, is currently ranked seventh in New England with a 10-5-1 record. UMass has never beaten the Engineers, but MIT has a lot less talent than a year ago. Gone are heavyweight Fred Andree and middleweight Norm Haekins, who were among the best in the area last year.

Coach Barr feels confident about Friday night's match. The Redmen are pointing the New England tourney and Barris putting his men at their strongest weights. Sheldon Goldberg should return to the lineup at 134 and Clay Jester will go down to 142, a weight which he will wrestle at in the tournament. Replacing Jester at 150 will be Jim Godkin.

The remainder of the Redman lineup will remain the same with Nick DiDomenico, Dave Reynolds, Mike Brauner, Tom Young, Bruce Buckbee, George Zguris and Chris Hodson.

Among MIT's best wrestlers are 126-pounder Baron Whealon at 150, Price at 167 and Davies at unlimited. Barr expects close matches in these weight classes and, if the Engineers are going to pull an upset, they will have to win all of these critical matches.

Boston College, the Redmen's Saturday night opponent, should be a breeze for UMass. The Eagles are not ranked and their record has more losses than wins.

Student Sickness Finally Subsides

Meeting Tonight Discusses Problem

By DENISE MAGNELL and BETH GOODELL
Staff Reporters

Following last week's apparent food poisoning in Southwest, the hundreds of students affected all seem to be back to normal health. Most students missed only one day of classes, and all patients admitted to the infirmary have now been released. The infirmary stresses that this was not a case of ptomaine poisoning, but that the vomitting and diarreah were symptoms of an "acute gastro-intestinal ailment."

University Health is running tests on samples of the food served in Berkshire Dining Commons which caused the illness. It will be a matter of days or possibly weeks before the exact source of contamination can be positively determined. All evidence points to the roast beef, and the tests should give some idea as to how and where the meat was contaminated.

The illnesses last week will be the main topic of a Southwest Assembly-sponsored meeting being held tonight in DC#7 (Hampden Commons, Southwest) at 7:00 p.m.

Participants of the discussion, to whom students may direct their questions, will include Joel Stoneham, Director of University Food Services, Gerald Grady, University Business Manager, and a representative of the Student Senate.

Prof. John Hunt, Master of the Southwest area, will officiate as moderator of the proceedings.

Aside from last week's food incident at Berkshire Commons, discussion topics will include elimination of excessive waiting in dining commons' lines, the extension of the Southwest Hatch weekend closing time to 2:00 a.m., frequent public health checks on dining services, and the possible elimination of compulsory meal tickets.

Many students have also expressed an interest to some Southwest Assembly members that they would like to see the health report on the Berkshire incident made public.

The meeting is open to all members of the campus community, but residents of the Southwest area are especially urged to attend.

Bridal Fair Opens Tues. Amid Feminist Protest

"Love" is the theme of the fourth annual Bridal Fair, which is to be held in the Student Union Ballroom on Tuesday, March 3. The fair, which will run from 1 to 10 p.m., will be highlighted by two bridal fashion shows, one at 3 and the other at 7 p.m. Bridal attire and trousseaux, supplied by Forbes and Wallace of Springfield, will be modeled in the fashion shows by fifteen UMass coeds, chosen from among eighty applicants. Six male students will be appearing as grooms.

The Bridal Fair is co-sponsored by the Student Union special events committee and Modern Bride magazine. A display of new products of interest to the modern bride-to-be will be exhibited by local retailers and their national affiliates, and door prizes will be given.

Feminists from the UMass community have announced that they will be protesting the Bridal Fair in the Student Union tomorrow. The women say that the Fair is put on primarily for the purpose of exploiting women who wish to marry by promoting unrealistic illusions about the institution. They claim they want to make clear that they will be protesting against the Fair as a means of this exploitation, and not against girls who attend.

Women's Liberation has arranged to present and discuss alternates to marriage in the Colonial Lounge, and also to have leaflets available at a table in the lobby. Some of the scheduled events in the Lounge include a discussion of women's collectives at 2 p.m. by Alice Zapt of Springfield Women's Liberation, and Brotherhood of Life services at 4 and 8 by the Leyden-Heath commune.

A day long participatory collage depicting the American Woman will be provided by Wendy Manzer. Also on hand throughout the day will be women from Womens Liberation who will answer questions and discuss other alternatives such as celibacy or "extended families."

SIMPLY "LOVE" is the theme of this year's Bridal Fair.

Mt. Holyoke Calm After Takeovers

A Mount Holyoke College administration spokesman said last night "the school has returned to normal and classes will proceed in usual fashion tomorrow" after a "weekend's cooling down" from the takeover of seven campus buildings Friday by blacks from the five area colleges.

He reported that blacks will continue to meet with College President David R. Truman this week to discuss the demands presented Friday.

Those demands included a stepped up black admissions program, greater financial aid for blacks, a series of changes in theblack bridge program, and more cooperation in the development of a five college black studies program.

The take-over began at 12:30 a.m Friday, as 50 students occupied seven buildings, including the administration building. The occupation lasted for 14 hours, and administration sources stated Friday afternoon that no damage resulted from the demonstration.

In a prepared statement, the blacks explained that they had "taken symbolic action," against Mount Holyoke, because "it is the hardest nut to crack" of the five institutions asked 10 days ago during the Amherst College protest to speed up reforms which the blacks felt were needed.

They called the Mount Holyoke administration, "basically apathetic and uncaring" toward the needs of the five college black community.

After the blacks left the building Truman said, "I deeply regret our failure in the past (to meet their demands), . .but a better method (to achieve their demands) would have been through reason. discussion and understanding."

He admitted that the number of blacks on the Mount Holyoke faculty were "fewer than I'd like," but added, "it is difficult to find black faculty members who are willing to live in South Hadley."

Truman doubted that the bridge program, which is currently tutoring 14 blacks who will be admitted to Mount Holyoke next fall, could be greatly changed in the near future without disrupting the training of the 14 girls. He also doubted that any substantially larger number of blacks could be admitted to the school next fall.

Recruiting Slow Off the Mark

As predicted, the 1969-70 college recruiting season is off to a slow start, according to Robert J. Morrissey, director of placement and financial aid at the University of Massachusetts, one of 14, representative colleges in the College Placement Council's Salary Survey.

The Council is the non-profit national service organization for the college placement and recruitment field, serving 1300 colleges and 2100 employers.

Data published in the Council's first of three salary survey reports for this year indicate that there is a substantially smaller number of offers being made to college seniors. In addition, there is a slowing-up in the rate of increase in the dollar value of beginning salary offers. The survey covers actual offers made to male college students at all degree levels.

In sharp contrast with last year, the over-all volume at the bachelor's level has dropped 20 per cent.

Tippo Issues Statement On Mills Incident

Chancellor Oswald Tippo last night released the following statement concerning the Mills House situation.

1. Mills House has been designated as a black culture center. Plans are now being made to remodel the upper two floors so as to convert the whole building from dormitory use to academic space that will accomodate interests associated with the black cultural center.

2. Investigations are being continued t o determine exactly what happened Thursday night. The facts which are being obtained are helping to dispel the rumors that have caused some of the dangerous tension.

3. Every effort is being made to assign comparable space to the white students who were in Mills House as quickly as possible, so that they can live together. The residence and student affairs personnel in neighboring dormitories have been helpful in providing temporary accomodations for those displaced students. Restitution will be made for the expense and inconvenience that the displaced students have been subjected to, and the University will move their belongings as quickly as possible.

4. Student Senate leaders and Central Area Council members have responded magnificently and we are deeply grateful for their help. They have been meeting with the involved groups to work for constructive solutions to the problems which have developed. These efforts have already begun to reduce tensions.

Cance Co-op Strives To Better Dorm Life

Last September, the Cance Cooperative Living Venture was instituted in Cance Dormitory in Southwest. This program was conceived with the hope that it might provide an alternative to normal dormitory and University life. One aim of this venture was the hope to bring a sense of dorm unity between the occupants, and that an air of respect and academic maturity would prevail.

A major difference of this idea was the formation of a Tenants Association. Half of these members were either among the founders of the idea of the living venture or were chosen after consideration by Dr. John Hunt, master of Southwest, and by James Scharfenberger, head of residence of the living venture. The rest of the T.A. members serve in the capacity of counsellors, in that they are responsible for dormitory security and supplies, for example.

T.A. members also act as legislators of the dorm. Weekly meetings, open to all, are held on Monday nights, when such dormitory business as activities, finances and classes are discussed. The T.A. is run by a chairman, who is also the head of residence

One difference with the Tenant, Association is that members receive less pay per month than counsellors do, and there are no single rooms in the dorm. Everyone is treated the same.

Committees, composed partially of the T.A. members and of dorm residents, plan the proceedings of the dormitory for the year.

The main object of the Cance project is eventually to establish a residential college with its own curriculum. To date, several student-oriented classes, open to all on campus, have been instituted . More are in preparation.

Students help decide what will be studied in such courses. These courses have a maximum enrollment of 15, and involve such subjects as Marxism, photography, Yoga, Tolkien, Shakespeare and drugs. T.A. hope s that by next semester each resident will take at least two courses from within the dormitory.

Another project of the dormitory, in conjunction with the Southwest Patriots, is a 24-hour "crash pad" available to all as a place for the lonely, the bored, or just the curious to be able to spend the late hours. Painting the walls, singing, playing records or just talking are some of the things that can be done.

By most standards, the Cance Living Venture is a success, and T.A. sees its outlook as good. The hard work of the Tenants Association, members point out, is helping to make this experiment a possible permanent venture.

Valley Peace Center Asks Non-Payment of War Tax

By BETH GOODELL
Staff Reporter

An appeal for war tax resistance was expressed at a meeting in the Senate Council chambers on Sunday afternoon. Sponsored by the Valley Peace Center, the meeting was attended by approximately 55 members of the University community - administrators, faculty, students, and townspeople. The purpose of the gathering was to inform the community of the tax resistance movement's development.

According to speaker Bradford Lyttle, a member of War Tax Resistance, (WTR), his organization is working to gain national prominence. It wants to build the issue into a major one by April 15, the deadline for income tax payments.

In its efforts, WTR explains that the U.S. government spent $103 billion in 1968 for present and past wars and for preparations in case of future wars. Approximately $16.2 billion were spent on improving the health, education, and general welfare of the people of the country.

Methods of refusal include the following: refusal to pay that percentage of your tax which goes for war (66%); refusal to pay the 10% surtax; refusal to pay the federal telephone tax; suing the government to refund your taxes; or reducing the amount of taxes withheld.

Lyttle suggested that the best step for studenty to take might be to refuse to pay their telephone tax. Federal law does not require the telephone company to collect the tax - just to bill it. Many thousands of people are reportedly deducting this "war" tax from their bills already.

Among those attending the meeting and expressing interest in the cause were Dean Allen, Head Psychologist of University Health Services, Mrs. Russell of the Foreign Studies Department and Professor Isidore Silver of the School of Business. Anyone desiring more information on this movement should contact the Valley Peace Center, One Cook Place, Amherst, (253-3683).

Mills Upset Over Relocation; Whitmore Urges "Keep Cool"

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

In the crowded barrenness of the Brett House T.V. room, administrators, Math Dept. faculty and Mills House students met last night. The primary goal at the start of the meeting was to work out the housing and re-location problems involved in the sudden conversion of Mills House into a Black Cultural Center for the University.

But the students abruptly forced to move from Mills House soon changed the tone of the meeting into a platform from which the facts involved in the entire Mills incident from two weeks ago to the present time were disclosed.

Earlier Sunday afternoon, the Math department had met and agreed to make room for some of the groups from Mills House desiring to remain together. Three distinct groups from Mills House desired to remain together. At the Sunday night meeting, some Math department faculty expressed reservations over the utilization of Arnold House, Math department headquarters (at one time Arnold House was a residence hall) as a residence hall.

The administration was represented by Dean of Students William F. Field, Associate Provost Robert Gluckstern, and Area Coordinator William Idol.

The official administrative priority list, according to Gluckstern was: (1) "Trying to keep things cool", (2) Finding space on campus for the displaced Mills House residents, and (3) attempting to get communications on campus straightened out.

The basic concern of most of the students from Mills House was that they wanted to stay together. The three groups broke down as follows: approximately fifteen people moved from Greenough House; twenty people from Pi Lambda Phi; and approximately thirty people who all had lived on the third floor of Mills House and desired to maintain the group.

It was emphasized that the three groups did not wish to move together, but only wanted to keep each individual group intact. The administration had previously been under the impression that they were faced with finding room for approximately fifty people in a group.

This discrepancy changed the nature of the problem considerably. Mills House students then proceeded to report on other incidents that had not been general information at a previous date.

Contrary to the reports in Boston papers, there was considerable opposition to moving out of Mills House. Previous to the Thursday night incident residents of Mills House had begun drawing up conditions under which they would consider moving. According to one resident "a lot of sentiment changed after Thursday."

At a meeting held Wednesday night there had been general agreement that eventually Mills House would become a Black Cultural Center; possibly by spring recess and definitely by next Fall.

Thursday night's incident precipitated the sudden change of plans and accelerated evacuation of Mills House the following day.

Mills Residents Relocation Set

Decisions reached late last night have solved much of the relocation problem created by the Mills House incident. The nineteen members of Phi Lambda Chi, a fraternity that had occupied part of the fourth floor of Mills House are now being moved into T.E.P., another fraternity at the University. It was also learned that the fifteen students who were originally housed in Greenough have decided as a group to live in Brett House.

The thirty students who have occupied the third floor of Mills House are the only remaining displaced residents. "The administration", according to A. C. Bill Idol" will really appreciate" any ideas from anyone on campus as to solution for the dilemma. The thirty people wish to move together.

Dean Field gave the administration's story. He claimed that he had to make a "personal decision."

Dean Field appeared somewhat weary as he explained that a decision had been made earlier that it was "untenable" for the people living in Mills House to continue living there.

"We were concerned with the physical safety of the people living in Mills House," said Field. The major concern was to get the people from the third and fourth floor out of the building.

For a while Field had considered calling in the State Police after deciding that the University Police were not a large enough force to safely move the residents out. "I was scared," stated Field. Field feared that the feelings in Mills House after the fight were "beyond belief." "I felt it was unsafe for police action," disclosed Field.

Mills House residents told of being ordered to first get out of the building "within ten minutes" and then being barricaded on their floors. Mills House residents alleged that Blacks had taken guard positions "one carrying a machete and a switchblade."

Blacks downstairs who had taken "refuge" after deciding against carrying a fight with clubs and other weapons to a fraternity house, blocked everyone except Mills House residents from entering the building for a couple of hours.

The Mills House residents told of growing tensions and repeated incidents leading up to the Kappa Sigma incident. The cultural center had apparently been attracting large numbers of Blacks from off campus. Reports of thefts ran the total into the thousands of dollars. Weekends were cited as being particularly explosive.

Some Mills House residents expressed the sentiment that people in Mills House could actually have gotten killed, and plied the administrators present for a reason that the situation had not been recognized before.

"Why didn't the administration back up the residents of Mills House," cried one irate displaced student.

Ironically, Thursday at noon, a letter had been received by the Dean of Students' office setting a meeting to work out the problems at Mills House with the Black Peoples Movement, next Tuesday.

Do you plan to student-teach this Fall?

The Nation and The World

Desegregation is Slower In North, West, than South

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary Robert H. Finch of Health, Education and Welfare Sunday voiced the strongest administration criticism to date of what he termed confusing and misguided court decisions on desegregation.

He condemned particularly court ordered racial precentages for schools in Charlotte, N.C., and Los Angeles, calling them "totally unrealistic . . . and moving in the wrong direction" because extensive busing would be required.

Finch gave his views in an interview on the Metromedia Radio News program "Profiles".

He appeared to shift the burden for necessary new desegregation steps from the South the the North and West.

In most Southern school districts, the secretary said, "the old dual systems have been broken up."

Although no final figures are available for the current school year, government officials estimate about one black child in three in the South attends school with an appreciable number of whites.

The secretary conceded also a Senate passed provision calling for nationwide application of school desegregation guidelines would, "as a practical effect," slow down desegregation in the South if it is finally put into effect.

The Nixon administration, Finch said, "is confused by what the courts have said. There are a number of areas where the Supreme Court has not spoken at all.

Pompidou Disturbed By Chicago Reception

NEW YORK (AP) - French President Georges Pompidou might cancel his visit to New York City Monday and Tuesday unless he gets assurances from the U.S. State Department that it will not be disturbed by hostile demonstrations such as in Chicago Saturday night, reliable French sources reported Sunday.

French sources said Pompidou was to make a decision Sunday night on whether to maintain his visit in New York or return straight to Paris.

Saturday night in Chicago Pompidou was booed by some 10,000 demonstrators as he arrived for a dinner organized by the Alliance Francaise and the council of foreign relations.

Sunday morning, upon leaving Chicago, he used harsh words to condemn the demonstrators.

"They were carefully organized to close in on me," he said. "I think that these demonstrators put a stain on America's forehead and they damage their own cause. But they will not damage French American friendship which is far above such demonstrations of impoliteness."

Laotian Raids Loom

SAIGON (AP) - Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, has authority from President Nixon to order air strikes inside eastern Laos against the North Vietnamese threat to American troops in Vietnam, informed sources said Sunday.

The report coincided with fresh attacks by American B52 strategic bombers against the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos and the northern entrance to the A Shau Valley just inside South Vietnam.

Sources say a massive North vietnamese supply operation is underway in this region.

Abrams apparently has had authority to direct air strikes inside Laos for some time, but this is the first time that it has been made known against a background of demands in the U.S. Congress that more information be made available on American involvement in Laos.

Before , it was not clear who had such authority. It had been thought in some quarters that Abrams had to first clear such raids with the commander in chief of American forces in the Pacific at Honolulu or the Pentagon in Washington.

A U.S. Command communique reported four B52 missions in South Vietnam late Sunday, all in the A Shau Valley area.

Other B52 bombers attacked North Vietnamese supply depots just inside Laos from which war materials are shipped across the border into the A Shau for North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops fighting in South Vietnam.

Informed sources said that with anemy activity in South Vietnam limited for the time being to terrorist and rocket and mortar attacks, some B52 missions were diverted to attack the North Vietnamese supply depots in Laos.

SUFFOLK DOWNS PRESIDENT BILL WEECK convinced Governor Sargent to back his stadium proposal, and thus it appears that the Boston Patriots will finally have a place to play. The proposed stadium, which still needs legislative approval, is scheduled to be built by the 1972 football season.

MLK Meeting Today Focuses on Four Declaration Referendum

The Committee of Student Self-Determination of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Council will meet Monday, March 2, in the Council Chambers of the Student Union at 9:00 p.m. New members are invited to attend and participate.

The meeting will focus primarily around the upcoming referendum on the Four Declarations establishing the University as a community, protesting fee increases and administrative appointments without full community participation.

Copies of the referendum are available in the King Council office in 207 Hampshire House. People desiring representatives of the Committee to come to their dorm or Fraternity or sorority house should call the King Council office.

Discussion of the referendum will include tactics for getting the widest possible participation in the vote. There will also be a discussion of the implications of the referendum should it pass. According to Gil Salk, temporary chairman of the committee, nobody should be encouraged to vote yes on any question unless they fully comprehend the implications of such a vote, and are willing to act to enforce it if the referendum passes.

If time permits, the committee will also discuss the recent drug busts on campus, their implications, and what the community can do to protect itself. In addition, there should be discussion of the treatment of Hubert Humphrey, what alternatives might have been used, and how publicity of the incident is detrimental to the community. Salk cautions, however, that the meeting will seek only constructive criticism and suggestions. There will be no time for simple fault-finding and finger pointing. The emphasis will be on how a community seeking self-determination must deal with dissent and disunity within its own ranks.

Also on the agenda for Monday's meeting are the election of a permanent chairman and a secretary. Voting for these positions will be restricted to those who have attended previous meetings and are familiar with the work of the committee and its members.

Student Teaching Registration Information Available This Week

One of the recurring problems faced by the Student Teaching Office at the School of Educato fice at the School of Education is how to contact and stay in contact with students planning on student teaching. It is extremely important for the Student Teaching Office to be able to meet with all students prior to their registration for student teaching so that they can describe all of the programs offered and give prospective student teachers a chance to select from among various alternatives. At these meetings the Student Teaching Office can also answer many of the questions that plague student teachers, such as questions concerning credits, course numbers for registration, certification requirements, length of internship, responsibilities, etc.

This semester the office has scheduled four meetings, two for elementary and two for secondary, for those students who plan to register for student teaching during the Fall semester of 1970.

The meeting will be held in Marks' Meadow Auditorium on March 2 and 3 from 4 -6 p.m. for those interested in our elementary programs, and on March 5 and 6 from 4 - 6 p.m. for those interested in secondary programs. You need attend only one of these meetings to receive all the information necessary to register for the Fall semester.

The Student Teaching Office is attempting to place all student teachers and interns prior to Counselling Day, May 6, 1970. They are doing this as a convenience to students so that they may make plans for living accommodations next year, and also to arrange rides and car pools for assignments within commuting distance of the Amherst campus. To meet the placement deadline of May 6, all interested students must register for student teaching by March 15.

Guarneri String Quartet Employ Novel Programming

On paper it looked impossible - a program beginning with Berg's mind-draining Lyric Suite for String Quartet, then making a rapid transition to Mozart's serenly nonchalant B flat, K. 589 Quartet, and finally back to the underworld with Beethoven's gloomy F minor, Opus 95 Quartet. Yet the Guarneri String Quartet were the artists at hand Friday evening at Bowker Auditorium under the auspices of the Concert Association's Chamber Music Series. Like the pro-professionals that they are, the Guarneri performed with an attack of concentrated coherence and ingenuity that left no question about the novel programming.

Alban Berg's Lyric Suite for String Quartet, composed in 1926, was such an intensely muscular work that one might question the title, "Lyric". The drama and chilling momentum of Berg's writing had a nightmarish quality that left one gasping for air. Movements such as the Presto delirando were uncompromising in tension. Relief came only in the guise of the sardonic Andante amoroso or the strangely enchanting Adagio appassionato. Perhaps the frenzied sinisterness of the Allegro misterioso was the most frightening, but for me, the brief Tristan theme within the quiet terror of the final Largo desolato was the staggering climax to a work of unlimited proportions.

I won't try to describe the change in tempo from Berg to Mozart's String Quartet in B flat, K. 589 - suffice to say everyone breathed more regularly. It was a deeply solid Mozart that came from the Guarneri. Rich and soothing tones were present throughout. It wasn't forced color; the Quartet's applied control let the Mozart sing with uninhibited pleasure.

The foreshadowing of dramatic complexity and mystery that Berg so aptly utilized in his Lyric Quartet was a mainstay of Beethoven's Quartet in F minor, Opus 95. The Beethoven dealt with contrasting moods of somberness and lightness of melodic line. The Guarneri interpreted the F minor as a mature, though moody piece, stressing the vast dynamic resources within the music.

The Living Revolution

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands (and/or cultural chains) which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers (the totally free men) of the earth, the equal and separate station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions (the moral self-respect) of mankind (ourselves) requires that they (we) should declare the causes (being the negations imposed upon our self-evident truths) which impel them (us) to this direction.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, (true), Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments (and cultures) are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government (and Culture) becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government (and culture), laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes (indeed); and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design (consciously or not) to reduce them under absolute Despotism (moral and cultural tyranny), it is their Right, it is their Duty, to throw off such Government (such culture), and to provide new Guards for their future security.

Such has been the patient sufferance of those Colonies (of these peoples); and such is now the necessity which constrains them (us) to alter their (our) former Systems of Government (and culture). The history of the present King of Great Britain (the present established political and cultural systems of the United States and the entire Western world), is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these states (over these minds of men).

We (here, now, today) have not been wanting in attention to our British (American) brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations and correspondence. They have been deaf to the voice of justice and consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America (the Conspiracy, for a sane new world) in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies (of our generation, irregardless of age) solemnly publish and declare, that these United Colonies (these free men) are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States (free and independent souls); that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown (to the established political and cultural order), and that all political (and cultural) connection between them (we, here) and the State of Great Britain (established political and cultural order in the United States of America, today), is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States (men), they (we) have full Power to levy (to outlaw) War, Conclude (maintain) Peace, contract Alliances (with our Western brothers), establish commerce, and do all other Acts and Things which Independent States (free and independent men) may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our Sacred Honor.

Peace, Brother

There is a difference between a segregated dormitory and a dormitory in which the residents have separated into a community out of their own volition. Blacks have just as much right to an all-Black dorm as Whites have to the Daughters of the American Revolution. Only when one group imposes their life style on another group, or oppresses an unlike group, is their claim for separation wrong.

It is unfortunate that the Mills House incident happened. It is unfortunate that the Whites in the dorm were forced to move in the middle of a semester. It should not have happened.

But only the foolish take revenge, only the immoral harp back to a past that cannot be changed. It is commendable and right that Dean of Students William Field agreed to the requests of the Blacks, that he refused to be a "proud" man, that he put Peace above war. It remains for the rest of us to follow in the steps of Dean Field and keep our campus a campus of Peace.

Men . . . . Above All

Snow glistened, falling near lonely streetlights; blanketing dirty sidewalks and pockmarked expanses of frozen mud. Black-White confrontation for all eternity; snow and the night.

Black-White confrontation.

Man can perceive color contrast. Man has never quibbled or confronted how to recognize and categorize color contrast. Man has trouble with people-people contrast.

Racial and ethnic contrasts, throughout the history of man, have caused death, suffering, segregation, extinction, genocide, fist-fights among UMass students.

We are part of a problem that has plagued man for centuries. (Congratulations!)

We have solved . . . we will never solve . . . the problems of living in a confined space, such as th e earth or UMass, with people of difference human conditions; being black; being white; being American Indian; being Jewish.

Or, things will always be confused with half-answers.

Consolidated half-answers: Area Governments, culture centers, armed forces, police . . , and things like that.

Black and white walk arm in arm. There is tenderness and love between individuals, even as there is hatred in battle . . . at UMass. Men are conditioned to react in battles, even as men are conditioned to react in friendship and brotherhood.

The man.

He creates wars and confrontations; people, groups, races get pushed into the ground. We are all the man. We all have the ability to push people into the ground.

Black-White confrontation; created by the man . . . created by the people.

Excuses: ignorance, economics, self-interests, group interests. You have to create the answers and solutions yourself. We have run out of excuses that work.

We can start as individuals.

Going Far Away

It is my personal opinion that the great "majority" of students on this campus "deserve Humphrey and all he stands for. The problem is, that neither Humphrey, nor these students are harmless. They are forging the next iron boot in an eternity of iron boots. I am going away soon, to look for a place where "fuck" is only a word for sexual intercourse.

Food Power, Food Service

To The Editor:

Yesterday, about 1000 students were poisoned by food services. This is but another blatant example of students being denied their rights at UMass. Students joke about dining commons food and accept the fact that all undergraduates (unless over 21 on Orchard Hill, or able to move off campus) absolutely must eat institutionalized food and pay people to plan their meals, handle meal tickets, cook and serve their food, clean up after them, do public relations work, prepare an occasional elaborate dinner, and put up a huge quantity of holiday decorations. The food services have consistently denied exceptions to this rule for personal convictions such as being on a Macrobiotic Diet. This seems to me clearly to be a denial of a person's right to manage their own food and money, if they so desire, and the right not to subject themselves to the possibility of poisoning because of negligence on the part of those who handle their food for them. Students here don't seem to realize or care about the fact that a large enough group of people asserting their basic rights with a little bit of commitment can win them. If enough people are willing to put in a little bit of work against this rule, which is only one example of repression of students at th's university, meal tickets can be made optional starting immediately, with refunds for those who choose to handle their own food and money. How much do students have to be pushed around to react?

Power to the people,

ED LIGHT

P.S. If the Student Senate does not pick up this issue, plans will be forthcoming to organize concerned people.

To The Editor:

Last semester it was a poor little grey kitten, lost from Pierpont's basement, and this semester it is a little calico one. Who could be so cruel and neglectful as to confine a cat in a dorm basement?

If these people profess a feeling for animals, then they should refrain from bringing them to the campus, or sheltering them here, when they are unable to provide proper facilities for them (which the Pierpont basement has proved itself not to be).

To Speak or Not To Speak

To the Editor:

I deplore the notion of silencing Humphrey--or anyone else. No one's freedom to speak should be violated (although it is disingenuous to think Mr. Humphrey has not had and will not continue to have more than ample opportunity to make his views known to us).

I especially deplore the waste of an opportunity to argue with and expose Mr. Humphrey, and to help thereby, perhaps, further the education of a large audience of students. When he agreed to a question period before his prepared address (an agreement that would not have been won without the agitation), the radicals and dissidents were given a wonderful opportunity to expose Mr. Humphrey's complicity in our Vietnam policy, the Daley terror in Chicago (he was, after all, the ranking Party man in town and could have stopped the police riot with a phone call), his careerism and disgusting subservience to Lyndon Johnson. It would have been child's play to expose Mr. Humphrey's sanctimony and hypocrisy; and all of it could have been done rationally and intellectually, in a way to win over an audience of university people. Instead, for understandable reasons, to be sure, there was a series of emotional and theatrical gestures.

There is a danger now that members of the university community will react in an equally emotional and theatrical fashion. Let's not go in for overkill; let's keep our cool. Let us, indeed, affirm once more the fundamental importance of free speech in our community --for everyone. But don't let us kid ourselves about the sanctity of Mr. Humphrey's appearance on our campus. It was frankly political (see early news releases to this effect) and NOT just another Professor delivering a lecture (Mr. Humphrey's mask for the occasion), at least partly paid for by a not disinterested Big Business. Neither he nor we should be surprised at a political response--especially so soon after the outrage committed against all our freedoms by the government and judge in Chicago.

As a matter of fact, as one who has had an opportunity to watch Mr. Humphrey in action in Minnesota and elsewhere for about twenty-years, I was rather surprised that he gave up when he did the other night. I thought he had a very large part of the audience with him, and probably could have won the day had he persisted. Could it be that the old pro is weakening? And if so, why? This is pure speculation, of course, but it seemed to me that one of the best questions asked him, about Vietnam (his fudging and lying answer to which had me aghast), and the shouts of "Guilty! Guilty!" may have reached some deep recesses in Mr. Humphrey, his spirit failed him, and he threw in the towel.

Give the Man a Chance

To the editor:

On behalf of Hubert Horatio Humphrey, I would like to extend apologies to the members of the UMass community. He deeply regrests that he was unable to participate in a program where members of the audience felt free to respond to his irrelevancies and contradictions before he had a chance to build them into im - pregnable mountains of Hump - dump. (For the uninitiated, this is the special Hubert Humphrey version of what Professor Howard Gadlin termed "bullshit.")

Contrary to the opinions of those wht prefer to take their Humpdump straight, Hubert's right to speak was not infringed upon. What WAS imposed upon him, however, was the right of people to have their questions answered honestly and directly, the right to have a speaker made aware of the way an audience is responding to his statements, and the right to respond to what one is being told. The freedom to speak is inalienable, but so is the right to object to your brothers and sisters being buried in an ever-growing mound of Humpdump.

Hubert is used to hostile audiences, and has a set of witty retorts calculated to silence isolated hecklers. He has always, prior to his UMass appearance, managed to complete his speeches, regardless of concerted efforts to drown him out. He has no way to deal with a concerted demand for relevance which allows him to make a statement and then responds with immediate criticism. This approach demands honesty, and Hubert, as a politician, has a natural aversion to honesty. (Rumors that he breaks out in hives are unsubstantiated, but symptoms of plastic smiles and requests to convene to the Drake are easily verifiable.)

Those attempting to engage Hubert in discussion were willing to demand honesty, the plastic smile, solidified to the point that he could only stutter the names of a few local bars, and confronted with a strong anti-Humpdump faction, felt that the only way to add sufficiently to the pile was to bravely confront the unquestioning eye of the television camera, where nobody can ask questions which other people will have to listen to--and possibly learn from.

I apologize for Hubert's expected but unexcusable behavior.

GILBERT J. SALK

Free Speech Primer

To the editors:

See Bobby Seale. He is shackled to a chair. He is gagged because he demanded his freedom, because he spoke when he should have been quiet. See Tom Hayden, Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin, Dave Dellinger, Rennie Davis. See them in jail. They crossed state lines with intent to make a speech - against murder, against oppression, against racism. See their lawyers. See them go to jail. they talked when they should have kept quiet. See Freedom of Speech.

See Hubert Humphrey. He speaks with the thunderous voice of the mass media. He speaks with power. He has guns and policemen and courts to guarantee his freedom of speech. He speaks for racism, war, and exploitation. He is law'n'order. See him not allowed to speak at UMass. Poor Hubert!

Those in power can speak, but, what's worse, act. Those with no power are out of order and go to jail. Do you have the feeling that the deck is stacked?

Fred Hampton and James Rector had freedom of speech, but the pigs spoke louder.

GERALD GILLESPIE

On Freedom

To the Editor:

Depending on the source of information, there is too much freedom of speech in the U. S., just enough freedom of speech, or not enough freedom of speech. But regardless of how much freedom of speech we have, there will be far less in the future if events such as the Humphrey incident go unchecked. That is, if we do not allow a person to speak because we do not agree with his viewpoint, then a dangerous precedent is being set. Only a fool could ignore the consequences of such a precedent: if someone does not agree with OUR viewpoint, he will not allow US to speak. We will ultimately have a situation in which, NO MATTER WHO IS IN CONTROL OF THE GOVERNMENT, change can be brought about only through violence, not through debate. We who detest the killing in Viet Nam must realize that destroying freedom of speech will lead to a form of government, WHETHER IT BE FASCIST, REPUBLICAN, DEMOCRATIC, OR COMMUNIST, where change can be brought about only by killing.

Oh, Woe is Me

To the editor:

You'll never believe what happened Tuesday night. It's too fantastic! Unbelieveable! First, upon crawling into bed, I found that I couldn't sleep because of a funny feeling in my stomach so, after dozing off and on until about 2:30 a.m., I heard the fire alarm go off! So I said to myself (having no one else in hearing range) "Peg, old girl, go see what's happening." So with this intent in mind, I went outside to my corridor and said, "What's happening?" In bewilderment I searched for an answer.

Finally I found out that there had been a bust in a dorm next to mine and some "considerate" person had run over and pulled the fire alarm to warn us. (Thank Goo for thoughtful people.) But knowing that I had nothing to worry about, I proceeded on my way back to bed, only to discover that it would take over an hour to shut the alarm off. So, still having a funny feeling in my stomach, but feeling perfectly sure that I would awake and feel well in the morning, I fell back to sleep at about 4:30 a.m.!

But, alas, all was not over; for at 8:00 a.m. I was awakened to find that most of the residents of my dorm, as well as most of Southwest, were stricken with Ptomaine poisoning! Hooray for our food services! So I had to stay up and wait for a doctor. Hooray for our health services--it only took him an hour or two to get here! But, then, who had slept anyhow?

But that 's not all either. Will we be allowed to sleep tonight? No, because there's going to be more busts, so of course about 2:00 a.m. our faithful alarm will go off, or like earlier, some kind person will get on the intercom and let us know just what dorm is being busted now. Anyhow, how was your day?

PEGGY FORFA

Cry Wolf

To the Editor:

I would like to address this letter to the idiot creeps who published the following notice and posted it around the residence halls in Southwest. "In case of bust, rake action--- 1. Sound the fire alarm, etc."

Are you really high? You must have taken or pumped yourself so full of shit that you forget that the fire alarm is used for fires. One of these times, the alarm is going to sound, and everyone will say, "Oh hell, it's a bust." and will go right back to sleep. When they drag their charred remains out the following day, I hope you'll finally realize the folly of your idiotic request. But then, you probably won't. You can erase that memory with the needle or tab.

Too bad a needle or tab can't bring a pile of burnt flesh back to life.

MICHAEL T. KAVANAGH

In the Future . . .

To the Editor:

You will no doubt receive many letters regarding the disruption of Mr. Humphrey's speech so I will leave this topic for someone else. I would, however, like to make a suggestion about the future of the Distinguished Visitors Program on this campus.

Several DVP lectures in the past have indicated that this campus is not the best place for a mass-audience, live lecture, especially when delivered by a controversial figure. In the future, I suggest that DVP lecturers be asked to deliver their talks from the studios of WMUA or WFCR. The radio stations would select a handfull of students who represented various viewpoints and allow them to come to the studio to pose questions to the speaker. Questions from all other students would be answered over the telephone. This method would insure freedom from disruptions while making the speaker available to answer all questions.

To have to rely on the above method (as opposed to live lectures) is, quite frankly, an insult to the students. It is, nevertheless, necessary if the Distinguished Visitors Program is to continue to bring controversial figures to UMass.

JEFFREY DRUCKER

HH is Dead . . . Dig?

To the Editor:

After Tuesday night's Humphrey fiasco I found myself engaging in a sort of retrospect. During the "lecture" I was too confused and excited to really think, but afterwards, the thoughts that occurred to me were rather startling.

Think back to the time when you first became concerned with issues such as war, racism, poverty, pollution. Think of how enthusiastic you felt at your first march or demonstration, a totally novel experience. Think of how beautiful it is to truly believe in something and to act on that belief.

By now you've formed attitudes and opinions on many things. You may be confused or frustrated by many of the perverse aspects of our society, but generally, you know where you stand. You're for saving the environment, you're for peace, for brotherhood of men. You've become part of the Movement--and there IS a movement, a movement which, thro' evolution, is becoming America itself. We will become susceptible to diseases such as "silent majority," "middle America," and "nine to five suburbanite."

Think of how we're going to stop their pollution, their wars, their politics, their hate, their bigotry, when the responsibility becomes totally ours. If your answer involves such tactics as making scapegoats of individual hypocrites, we're doomed to a stagnant existence, an existence where progress in solving real problems is impossible. We must learn to think (myself included) before we act; for what we are doing may be damaging to our own cause. We must not become obsessed with a ritualistic dissent. We must, rather, learn to recognize areas of power and use them to their fullest. We must disregard the Hubert Humphreys, the lame ducks of our society. We must not waste time with them or jeopardize our cause (s) by dealing with them. If we are truly sincere in our positions, we will be able to go over the heads of petty politicians and bureaucrats, for they represent only themselves in a context of an outmoded politics. We represent the society of the future, a society which will inevitably be different and hopefully better.

The tragedy of the Humphrey incident lies not in the damage done to Humphrey's ego, but in the blind righteousness of those who disrupted the lecture. Humphrey is politically dead. All we can do now is attain a parochial self-satisfaction--at the cost of closing our minds-by chastising him for being the politician that he is.

Swami Yahoo

To the Editor:

See what happens when no one reads Yahoo? Everyone gets diarrhea and ptomaine. Yushnik warned you on page 2 of the January issue of Yahoo: "And Joel Hamstone, who brought you 'Dining Commons' and the special feature 'Mandatory Meal Ticket', is working on another film called 'Sweet Ptomaine.' "

And not long ago I did a special announcement on WMUA which was also made in the back of the Hatch, and other appropriate places, to the effect that a major bust was in the works at our friendly local police station. And no one listened. Look at the result. So this time, please listen. Those busts in Southwest are NOT the last to come in the near future, unless everyone cleans up and word gets out. Certain cons want to make headlines, and they will get them if they can pull of f their carefully planned bust -- so be careful, people, real careful.

Poison

To the editor;

After what happened to us after eating in the Dining Commons last Tuesday night, I find that I have a grudging admiration for the cunning directors of the Food Service Department. They poison us this week but next week when they tell us about the increase in board, they will no doubt promise that this increased fee is necessary to guarantee that these unfortunate accidents do not happen again.

To the editor,

Fraternities Host Young Visitors

Nine UMass fraternities gave 100 Holyoke youngsters a day of fun and excitement and a first-hand look at the state University Saturday.

Francis Smith, a graduate student in English and an industrial arts teacher at J.B. Lawrence Jr. High School in Holyoke, some time ago promised his students a trip to a UMass basketball game. He appealed to the fraternities for assistance in arranging the trip.

A full day's itinerary was planned and organized through Smith and the Inter-Fraternity Council. Alen Janoff served as chairman for the day's events.

The 100 seventh, eighth, and ninth graders arrived on campus Saturday morning and were given a tour on the campus by Arcon from 11 until noon.

The students were then treated to lunch at the nine houses and one sorority. Between 12:30 and 2:30 the junior high schoolers played basketball at Boyden and swam at Curry Hicks pool with their "big brothers".

At 3 the group journeyed to the Student Union where assistant football coach Dave Kelly showed filmed highlights of the 1969 Redman football season. Another short promotional film on U-Mass was also shown.

A spaghetti dinner was held for the visitors at the Newman Center. And finally all headed for the event of the day - the UMass cagers and the UMass fans and another high scoring win for the Redmen.

The visit was planned with the aim of arousing an interest in college education now, so that young students who may not at present have the initiative or funds for college may make a better effort through their high school years and make it into college.

Participating fraternities included Sigma Alpha Mu, Alpha Tau Theta Chi, Delta Chi Participating fraternities included Sigma Alpha Mu, Alpha Tau Gamma, Zeta Nu, Kappa Sigma, Theta Chi, Delta Chi, Phi Sigma Delta, Theta Epsilon Phi, and Sigma Phi Epsilon.

The visiting students were treated to lunch and brotherhood at nine fraternity houses. (MDC photo by Pat Lempart)

Gymnasts Drop Last Meet, to Temple

By JOE PARNAR
Staff Reporter

Dropping their last meet of the season to Temple University, 160.00-156.15, the UMass varsity gymnasts dropped into fourth place in the final Eastern League standing.

Temple's Ron Clemmer won the floor exercise event with a 9.15. Tony Vacca tied Rick Lund of Temple with a score of 8.95 for second place. Mike Kasavana was the second highest scorer for the Redmen with an 8.7.

On side horse, a weak event for the Redmen all season, Temple took the three top spots, outscoring UMass, 27.35-23.85. Jay Long won the event with a 9.55, the highest score of the meet. Rick Riley was high for UMass competitors with an 8.2.

On still rings Joe Reed was edged out of first place by Pete DiFurio of Temple. DiFurio was first with a 9.15 and Reed second with a 9.1. Mike Peloquin put in a strong effort to score an 8.9 in the event and fourth place.

Clemmer took the second of his four first places for Temple in the long horse event as he scored a 9.4. Steve Cary and Vacca tied for second with 9.15 for UMass. The Redmen outscored Temple, 27.15 to 27.10, in the event.

On parallel bars it was Clemmer once again in first place with a 9.3. Barry Weiner was second for Temple at 9.15 and UMass' Cary third with an 8.9.

The final event, horizontal bars saw Clemmer take his fourth and final first place. Vacca and Scott Stover tied for second with 8.85's. UMass outscored Temple, 26.35 - 24.95 in the event, but the damage had already been done.

Clemmer ran away with the all-around title with 54.25 points. UMass' Reed had 50.8 points and Norm Vexler had 49.0 in this competition.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday the Redmen will be at Syracuse for the Eastern Championships. Compulsory routines will be on Thursday afternoon, optional individual and team competition on Friday and event individual finals on Saturday evening. The winner of the Championships will represent the Eastern League at the Nationals.

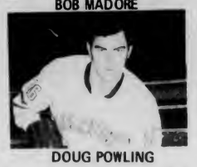
Puckmen Honor Seniors vs. Williams

BILL McMANN

BOB MADORE



DOUG POWLING

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Still hoping for an ECAC Division II play-off bid, the UMass hockey team will take on Williams College tonight at Orr Rink. Face-off is seven o'clock. Currently UMass is in contention with Middlebury, Merrimac, and Vermont for the last three berths.

Williams, though inconsistent this year, is capable of comin up with the big game. It has an experienced goal-tender in Phil Bartow and a strong scoring line in co-captains Gary Bensen and Whit Knapp. Jim Stearns is the center. The Ephs' weakness is the lack of depth and experience at the defensive positions and forward lines.

Tonight will be the last home collegiate game for four Redman seniors. Doug Powling, a defenseiveman, unsung hero this year, effective checker and an excellent defender in the Redman offensive zone. He is the leader of the sophomore defensive corps, and his strong play has been invaluable to the fine showing of the team this year.

John Hartnett, a center, the play-maker of the team. His passes have set up numerous goals for his teammates this year. Hartnett is more than just an offensive player, he is used by coach Jack Canniff as a penalty-killer, and one of the most effective forecheckers on the team.

Bill McMann is Mr. Hustle of this team. Despite his tag of "Solo", he is one of the most dedicated hockey players on the team. Moved from defense to a forward position, he gave the team a big defensive wing capable of scoring.

Bob Madore, a center who has been regulated to the fourth line this year, but everytime he has taken a turn on the ice he has given 150%. Canniff has taken notice of this and Madone has taken a regular turn since the Connecticut game. His performance has continued to be impressive. He is an xtremely aggressive player around the net and has also improved his forechecking, making him a complete two-way player.

Stockbridge Finishes 9-2

Stockbridge finished with a 9-2 record Friday night as it fell to Greenfield, 55-60.

The first point for Stockbridge wasn't made until 7:28 into the game when Bob Carpenter made a free throw. Greenfield already had 7 points.

With 4:05 left in the first half, Bob Carpenter put Stockbridge ahead for the first time at 20-19. Stockbridge held their lead and finished the first half 26-23.

But with a little less than 5 minutes left to play, Mike Evans, the only relief man Stockbridge, fouled out of the game. This forced Bob Harmon to play the last 3 minutes of the game with an injured ankle. Greenfield won by 5 points, 60-55.

Highscorer for the game was Kakelmeyer for Greenfield with 26 points. Bob Harmon came through for Stockbridge with 9 out of 12 free throws and a total of 19 points.

Trackmen Place 3rd in N.E.'s
UMass Garners 22 Pts.

Led by their speed merchants and high jumpers, the UMass track team racked up 22 points to place third in the New England championships on Saturday. Host team, Connecticut ran off with the team prize as it piled up 35 points to outscore second-finisher Northeastern by eight.

The Redmen broke on the scoreboard early when Ed Arcaro took fifth place in the shot put, but his point would be the only one UMass would get through the first few events.

New England records were broken in most of the events in the two-year old meet with impressive marks being set in the 600 by New Hampshire's Jeff Bannister in a fast 1.11.1, Frank Kelly of NU in the 1000 in 2.11.8, and Marty Robb in the two mile in an impressive 8.50.2.

UMass started scoring again in the mile run. Representing the Redmen in the race was Ron Wayne. He was in with class competition with Crail McColl of UConn, Art Dulong of Holy Cross, and Larry Josephs of NU.

McColl took the lead and ran through the first quarter in 61 seconds. He slowed the pace down, with Wayne and Dulong following closely on his heels, crossing the half in 2.06. Dulong decided to pick up the pace and bolted into the lead. Wayne went with the HC star The Crusader went through the three quarter in 3.08 and started to kick home. McColl came back on Wayne at this point and moved into second. The two Yan-Con stars battled each other to the finish separated by just four tenths of a second.

Dulong was first in a new record of 4.05.9. McColl and Wayne also both finished under the old record in 4.09 and 4.09.4. By going under 4.10, Wayne joins the first and second place finishers in qualifying for the Nationals in Detroit later in the month.

Sprinter Walter Mayo was the next scorer for UMass in the 60-yard dash. Along with Mayo, Redmen Ron Harris and Dave Marble had qualified for the semi-finals but could not make the finals. In the finals, Mayo flew out with a fast start and battled BC's Mike Hohnson and Amherst's Art Reid to the tape. Reid outleaned Mayo for first at the finish with both timed at 6.3.

The hurdling team of Jerry Spellman and Jim Graves came through again. The two hurdlers, who have no place to practice except for the smooth, hardwood floor of Boyden Gym, raced to second and third in the finals. Peter Wilkens of URI won the title. However, it was Spellman who set the new New England record for the 60-yard event as he strided through at 7.5 in the semis, beating Wilkens. A poor start for the Redman junior prevented him from repeating his performance in the finals.

UMass' high jumpers, Cal Carpenter and Ed Shaughnessy, both placed in the top five in their event. Carpenter took third place with a jump of 6'6", equalling his best performance. Both the first and second place finishers also went 6'6" but they had fewer total jumps than did the UMass junior. Soph Shaughnessy scaled the 6'2" mark and nabbed fifth.

Four Redman speedsters picked up the last three points of the competition. UMass was entered in the unseeded heat of the relay against UConn and Holy Cross. Spellman flashed out into the lead on the first leg and ran a 51-second quarter handing off to Harris. The Redmen sprinter was up against UConn's Pete Hilmar, who had placed second in the 600 and feels quite at home in the quarter. However, Harris ran a great leg, holding off the Huskies star all through his quarter.

UConn took over the lead on the handoff to the third runners. Al Mangan held close to the leader throughout his leg, handing off to anchor man Dave Evans. The Redman captain trailed by about four yards for over a lap before closing in on the UConn runner and catching him as they went around the last turn and out of sight behind the bleachers. Coming back into view, Evans was all alone and ripped through the tape with a quick 49.3 clocking. The relay placed third overall. J.D.F.

Grapplers Overpower MIT and BC

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Winning eighteen out of twenty matches, the UMass wrestlers clobbered MIT and Boston College over the weekend. On Friday night, the Redmen ran up nine straight wins before losing the heavyweight match in a 31-5 win over MIT. Then, on Saturday night, the Eagles of BC proved to be even less competition as they went down to defeat, 35-3.

Outstanding wrestlers for UMass were 177-pounder Bruce Buckbee and 190-pounder George Zguris. Buckbee, who raised his personal record to 12-1, pinned both of his opponents. He scored an early second period win over Robertson of MIT and was losing 2-0 to Genovese of BC when he pinned him at 4:28.

Zguris, who follows Buckbee in the lineup, was not to be outdone. The defending New England champion warmed up for this week's tourney by winning both of his matches by pins. Zguris got involved in one of his typical brawls against Pullar of MIT, leading 9-1 and then getting put on his back before ending the bout at 6:03. On Saturday, he started fast again, but remained in control as he pinned Baker halfway through the second period.

Although none of the other wrestlers scored pins, the team wrestled well. Double winners for the Redmen were Nick DiDomenico, Sheldon Goldberg, Clay Jester, Jim Godkin, Mike Brauner, Tom Young, Buckbee and Zguris.

The Redmen had little trouble with MIT. Dave Reynolds' 4-3 victory and Mike Brauner's 3-2 win were the only close matches. DiDomenico won 12-4, as did Godkin, and Goldberg returned to the lineup in fine fashion with a 13-0 win and 7:00 riding time. MIT's heavyweight Mike Davies handed UMass its only setback as he pinned Chris Hodson in the third period.

The BC meet was almost identical. Pins by Buckbee and Zguris and forfeit wins by DiDomenico and Brauner provided all the points the Redmen would need. Clay Jester dominated BC's Lally and nearly pinned him in a 14-3 romp. Tom Young was in command all the way in a 5-0 win over Morschella.

Goldberg won a close 3-1 decision and Hodson bounced back from his Friday night loss with a 2-1 win on the strength of 1:00 riding time. BC's Larry McDade kept his unbeaten streak with a 6-2 win over Dave Reynolds in the 126 pound bout.

The two wins upped the Redmen record to 16-4, finest in the school's history, topping last year's 11-6 mark. Coach Homer Barr was very pleased with the progress of the team and thinks it is ready for a run at the New England title. He praised the work of Buckbee and Zguris and thinks he will stick with the same lineup for the tourney.

Redmen Rout Maine, 103-71, As Fans Honor Seniors

E's Lead UMass Closer to NIT Bid

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

"To the NIT with JULIUS 'E'" a banner in the Cage stands read as the Redman basketball team bumped off Maine, 103-71, behind the offensive prowess of Julius 'E' (E for Erving) and Ray 'E' (E for Ellerbrook), to advance its record to an NIT-worthy 17-6 before 4200 Saturday night fans who came to see four UMass seniors play their last home game.

The two Big Redmen, E's, who have helped bring UMass to within hours of an NIT bid, were at it again Saturday evening.

Erving had 28 and 23, which these days goes without saying to mean he tallied the former number of points and grabbed the latter number of rebounds. The sophomore glitter guy hit only one shot that was more than five feet long as he converted 12 of 15 layups of various types and sorts. His overall shooting percentage from the field was 81%.

Ellerbrook had another great shooting night as he continues to enjoy his best play of the season. The Redman captain made good on nine of 13 shots from the field and on five of six from the line and joined his fellow seniors, Dennis Chapman, Jack Gallagher and Dick Samuelson, in being enthusiastically and warmly thanked by the appreciative fans at the Cage for three memorable years of winning basketball.

The just-mentioned three guys and their captain, Ellerbrook, were accorded special pre-game introduction. Chapman was called out first, followed by Gallagher, Samuelson and Ellerbrook in that order. The 4200 people on hand were on their feet applauding from the time Chapman first went to the center of the court until all four of them returned back to the bench.

In light of the topsy-turvy campus events of the past several days that preceeded this seniors' night, this happening was indeed a happier and healthier experience for the players and the fans alike.

As for the game itself, not a great deal can be said. It started off very slowly and, after the first six minutes had elapsed, the underdog Black Bears were leading, 15-9.

It took the Redmen some time to get untracked but a threepoint play by Ellerbrook, an Erving tap-in and two Chapman foul shots finally put UMass on top, 16-15, never to look back.

The home team never really dominated play until, with just over four minutes to go to halftime and the Redmen out in front by only six, 32-26, Rick Vogeley entered the lineup. The 6'5 soph teamed up with fellow sophomore

Mike Pagliara and, together, the two took UMass on a scoring scourge that put the ballgame away.

Seven big points by Pagliara were the major impetus for a 12-point UMass streak that was unanswered by Maine and the Redmen had a 44-26 advantage with 2:23 to go to halftime.

A baseline turnaround jumper by Vogeley, his second straight, made it 46-28; two Pagliara charity shots made it 48-31 and a Vogeley 20-foot swisher with 0:04 showing on the clock made it 50-31.

Even though Vogeley and Pagliara were instrumental in the first half surge, neither saw much second half action as coach Jack Leaman gave his attention to the seniors.

He filtered them in and out of the lineup and, with the score reading 92-56, sent all of them in along with junior Bob Dempsey to push the team past the 100 point mark. With 1:32 remaining it was significant that Ellerbrook hit a driving layup for a 101-63 count.

The Redman fans responded to this boisterously, chanting "NIT, NIT, NIT!" Chapman tallied the last UMass points moments later. Samuelson had retired to the bench with a slight injury with two and a half minutes to go; Chapman, Gallagher and Ellerbrook left with 0:28 remaining. Again, as before, the people displayed their gratitude.

NIT NOTES - Various rumors are in circulation at this time as to if and when UMass will receive a bid to the National Invitational Tournament...More bids are scheduled to be released today, how many no one really knows; some say all remaining 12 bids will be sent out today while others say that the committee will take three or four more days to complete its picks....Andy Laska, Athletic Director and head basketball coach at Assumption is a member of that committee....

HOOP NOTES - The Redmen play their last regular season away game tonight against New Hampshire at eight o'clock....The Wildcats are 12-10 and are pointing toward their first winning season in 15 years....Ellerbrook had a great assist tonight with eight, giving him a three year total of 284 for second place on the UMass all-time list, five better than George Burke's 279 and a lot less than Joe DiSarcina's 431...Samuelson played another fine game under the boards, collecting nine rebounds. One of Erving's many lay-ups was one to behold....Although hugging the baseline, he jetted upward and outward at a difficult angle for a most beautiful lay-in....John Sterling was Maine's best scorer with 21 points....Vogeley, even though he was a sparkling three-for-three in the first half, was not sent back into the fray until there were only 28 seconds to go....The Redmen tied the record for most wins in a season, set by last year's squad at 17, and must win tonight to break that mark.

UMass Icemen Shine in Tough, 4-3, Loss to Powerful UNH

Crowd Cheers as Redmen Go Overtime with Wildcats

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Before a spirited, cheering SRO crowd, the Redman hockey team was just edged out, 4-3, in overtime to the University of New Hampshire at Orr Rink Friday night. The name of every game is to win, but despite the fact UMass came out on the short end of the final score, there is a silver lining to this loss.

New Hampshire, 22-6 last year, was currently 16-8-2, and will be one of the eight teams selected for the ECAC Division 1 playoffs later this month.

Monday morning coaches figured the Redmen to be easy prey for the high-scoring Wildcats. During the opening minutes it seemed they could be right. UMass had trouble clearing the puck from its own zone, and its offense was unable to get started.

Offside penalties, poor passing and inaccurate shooting plagued the Redmen. At 6:50 Dennis Grabowski went off for tripping. The Wildcats quickly capitalized when Lou Frigon sent Mike McShane in the Redman zone with a pass from midice. McShane broke to the right side of UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty, and left a drop pass for teammate Bob Blewett. Blewett took a quick shot on Flaherty, beating him cleanly to the far side of the net.

The goal brought the Redmen back to life momentarily when John Hartnett sent a centering pass across the crease to Jack Edwards. Edwards, UMass' most dangerous scorer, tried to flip a backhander past goalie Larry Smith. Smith, somehow, managed to get his skate on the puck, kicking it out.

New Hampshire came right back at the Redmen though, putting constant pressure on Flaherty. Effective forechecking by the Wildcats caused erratic passing on the part of the Redmen as they tried to clear the puck from their zone.

The pressure and the persistence finally paid off when Frigon unleashed a close shot on Flaherty. He blocked the shot but no one was there to clear the rebound. New Hampshire's Dick Umile took the rebound and quickly passed across the crease to Allan Clark, who beat Flaherty to his glove side. As far as UNH was concerned, it was the last effective series it would have during the rest of the game.

UMass started to backcheck more effectively as the wings came back, not giving the Wildcat attackers any room along the boards. But the real heroes of the game, the Redman defensivemen, started playing their finest hockey of the year. After the second goal, unsung Doug Powling dropped Bill Munroe with a vicious check, the crowd roared and the Redmen suddenly gained new wind.

Powling continued his effective checking, literally crushing the New Hampshire forwards. The second time Powling hit Monroe, the latter just didn't get up. Brian Sullivan started giving the crowd a Bobby Orr show, displaying dips and fakes as he effectively cleared the puck from the UMass zone.

At 8:50 Sullivan broke into the UNH zone leading a three-on-one break. Unfortunately, before he could get his shot off, he was hooked from behind by Wildcat wing Dave Hinman. The Redmen began to pass more effectively, putting more pressure on Smith, but they were unable to beat him.

The second period started just as the first ended. Led by Powling, the Redmen began to hit. At 3:31 senior Bob Madone broke in on Smith and let loose a high shot to the near side. Smith couldn't control the rebound as Paul Riley came in trailing the play. Riley, in his haste to get the shot away, didn't hit hard enough and it sent to the right side of the net.

The effective backchecking by the Redman forwards and the hard checking by the defensivemen, especially Powling was slowing down the Wildcats considerably. Both teams played up and down hockey but the Redmen clearly controlled the tempo of the game. The SRO crowd was on its feet cheering at every crushing check, and oohing at every missed shot the Redmen attempted.

Finally the Redmen made good when they scored on a power play at 10:48. Previously Smith held Edward's shot too long and the referee blew a face-off to his right. Hartnett won the face-off but the puck went around the boards to the left corner. Charlie Donovan dug out the puck and passed to Hartnett who quickly returned the puck to Donovan. He took a couple of steps toward the goal, sent a centering pass to Edwards who beat Smith. The crowd erupted as the place rocked with chants of "Go Redmen Go."

New Hampshire tried to come right back but Powling checked Brunelle, knocking him down as time was called out, and he had to be helped to the bench. The fight and spirit of play was quickly eluding the Wildcats. UMass was clearly dominating the play as the crowd continued its rythmic clapping.

At 16:11 Mike Waldron tied the score when he tipped in AL Nickerson's shot. The period ended and the bench jocks, who were calling romp and massacre before, were yelling for upset. If the Redmen continued their forechecking and backing, they could stop the Wildcats' offense. With Sullivan and Bob Bartholomew clearing the puck effectively, the Redmen were beginning to take control of the affair.

When the Redmen came out for the third period, the chanting and clapping began once again. UMass was having trouble finishing off its plays in front of the UNH net. This hurt it on several occasions, when passes went away in front of Smith.

It was evident that the Redmen couldn't score quickly against New Hampshire, but it was also quite clear that the Wildcats weren't going to outplay the Redmen and score. Breaks would be the key in the final period.

New Hampshire got the first of two when a pass eluded a Redman forward in the UMass zone and went up the boards where Pete Stoutenberg took it and shot from the point. The break occurred when Bartholomew, checking a Wildcat attacker near the net, slipped and fell; the shot hit his stick and bounced into the net.

A lesser team would have gotten down after that, but UMass truly showed it was a great team Friday night. At 7:21 Nickerson took a pass from Powling, broke past the UNH defender, breaking in alone and scoring the tying goal at 7:23. Once again the crowd exploded as the Redmen were ready for their first Division I win. Their inability to score quickly hurt them and time ran out with the game tied, 3-3.

After a brief rest period, a ten-minute sudden death period ensued. The Wildcats, if they were to win, would have to have another break, equal if not larger than their last one. UMass was hitting as hard in the overtime period as it was at the end of the first period. Continuing their aggressive fore-checking and back-checking, the Redmen needed a series of good passing as they had gotten on Edwards' goal in order to penetrate the New Hampshire defense.

But the end was quick and sudden; few fans realized the tilt was over until Flaherty left the net and headed for the dressing room. At 2:55 there was a face-off to Flaherty's right with Blewett of UNH drawing against Hartnett. Both skaters swung and the puck flipped into the air, unseen by any of the players. Flaherty played close to the post, felt something hit him, instinctively he moved and the puck fell over the goal line.

Redmen Close With Two Wins 5-1 and 92-75

Guess Where?

Although the lobby is back to normal now, this picture should give some indication of the havoc created among the displaced residents of Mills House. Some forty of them were moved into Brett House on Friday and Saturday. Lack of further plans as to the new homes of the Mills residents caused large piles of personal belongings to appear in the lobby of Brett. As time went on the piles seemed to multiply, but by six on Monday the housing had been pretty much straightened out. (MDC photo by Ken Stevens)

The Great Southwest Poisoning Becomes History, Hopefully

DENISE MAGNELL
Staff Reporter

"If we are at fault, and I dearly feel that we are not, we will take every measure to see that it will never happen again" were the words of Joel Stoneham, Director of University Food Services, concerning the food poisoning incident at Berkshire Dining Commons in Southwest last week.

His words were directed to a group of Southwest residents attending the Southwest Assembly sponsored open meeting last night held at DC #7 (Hampden) in Southwest.

Other participants of the discussion, to whom students aired their complaints about the dining services, included Gerald Grady, University Business Manager, Dr. Warren, Supervisor of Snack Bars, Dr. Thomas McBride, Health Services, and Dr. Howard Peters, Environmental Health and Safety Division of Health Services. John Hunt, Master of Southwest, acted as moderator.

In regard to the results of the week's testing of the meat served last Tuesday (the night of the "epidemic"), Dr. Peters stated that no bacteria has yet shown up on laboratory cultures, and the contributing factor to the "acute gastro-intestinal ailment" that affected approximately 650 students is still unknown. He added that federal public health officials have taken samples of the meat to Washington, D.C. for further testing.

Mr. Stoneham assured the students present that blame for the occurrence cannot be put on the quality or condition of the raw meat used for supper on the 24th since not all of the 1100 served at Berkshire that night were taken ill. He further stated that general food handling procedures of the University Food Services are "as good as can be found anywhere," however, as an added precaution, all kitchen surfaces at the Berkshire Commons were scrubbed the next day with an anti-bacterial solution.

Gerald Grady, with Mr. Stoneham, answered questions regarding the possible elimination of compulsory meal tickets. He feels that since a direct recommendation to this effect has never been brought before the Board of Trustees, students should make their appeal known to that body.

No objections (by the administrators) were made to the suggestion that an uncut version of the public health report of the Berkshire incident be published.

Southwest Assembly President Larry Kravitz remarked towards the close of the meeting that if small grievances of the students, such as lessened waiting in lines, could be satisfied.

N.E.S. Tutors to Meet, New Programs Explained

Wednesday, the N.E.S. Coordinating Committee will be sponsoring an orientation for all its tutors. The orientation will be at 7:30 p.m. in the New Hatch of the Student Union. All tutors are asked to attend one of these meetings but under no circumstances should they miss their tutoring session in Springfield.

At the Wednesday orientation there will be a preliminary meeting of all students who are interested in starting a Cultural Enrichment program in conjunction with the regular tutoring. Generally, there is a need for black involvement in both the tutoring and cultural aspects of the N.E.S. program.

The conductor of Wednesday's orientation, Bill Hassan, is one of the two grad students from the School of Education who will be giving the orientation. These orientations will be worth every tutor's attention. Tutors are also asked to attend to give their opinions on the N.E.S. program and future structural changes that probably will take place.

Although N.E.S. of Springfield is a specific organization working to improve the education of children in economically deprived areas of Springfield, the concept of tutoring is a universal idea. Therefore, N.E.S. at UMass will be moving with other groups that are forming in Holyoke and Northampton.

N.E.S. at UMass has already made one move with Action Lab. It is hoped that one unified organization may form while each part of the group did its own thing. N.E.S. tutors children in school while Action Lab will be aiming at the more difficult problem of the high school dropout.

Last year's Cultural Enrichment involved rolling in the grass, wading in the campus pond or just feeding a cow. One of the first programs for this year will be high school students from Springfield trying their hand at a soul show on WMUA.

Nixon on Knees

NEW YORK (AP) - President Nixon, who flew to New York Monday to apologize to Georges Pompidou, raised a glass of champagne at a dinner honoring the French president and exclaimed: Vive la France!

"France is our oldest ally and our closest friend," Nixon said. "That friendship is so deep and so long that no minor difficulties or bad manners are going to impair it, . . . in the course of our friendship our forces have been joined together - always on the side of freedom."

Pompidou, replying at the end of Nixon's speech, toasted: "In spite of all, allies and friends."

Up With U.P.

On Wednesday morning, February 4, a very beautiful thing happened in Marks Meadow Auditorium. What happened was that U.P. (Undergraduate Power) had its first meeting and what is beautiful is the result of that meeting.

The Undergraduate Power movement is a positive, quiet revolution. Its purpose is to address itself to some of the problems faced by undergraduate Education majors. U.P.'s main function is to combat student apathy and disunity. It seeks to build a coordinated mechanism to deal with problems within the School of Education.

A U.P. committee was formed which consists of five undergraduate Education majors: Leonard Smith '71, Robert C. Henderson, '71, Bill Ashley '71, Thelma Benn '72, and Linda Mscisz '70. They drew up a list of the five most vital issues for undergrads in the School of Education. They are: (1) inadequate counseling, (2) lack of course descriptions, (3) relationship between students and faculty, (4) need for unity among undergraduates, and (5) course priority. Education undergrads, along with the U.P. committee, proposed solutions to these problems at Wednesday's meeting and began immediately to push them through the Education Council. People at the meeting volunteered their services to get the solutions into effect.

Also at Wednesday's meeting, the undergrad members of the Education Council, Frank Ruggiero and Ed O'Keefe, officially joined U.P. The Education Council is the governing body and decision making facility in the School of Education. Through the mechanism of this Council, Dean Allen has given the students the power to make decisions in the School of Education. This power, however, can only be manifested by the participation of the students it represents. The merger of U.P. and the Education Council gave U.P. the legitimate channel needed to put its program into action.

Among the proposals generated at Wednesday's meeting by the forty students participating were:

1. That Education majors have first priority in all Education courses and that this priority be attained by pre-preregistration for Elementary Education majors.
2. That the number of counselors be increased and that this should be done by developing a program to train undergraduates as counselors.
3. That a brochure be written which will include detailed course descriptions by individual professors.
4. That Faculty and Students have regularly scheduled meetings; that required meetings be held for undergraduates before Counseling Day.

At the close of this assembly U.P. turned these proposals over to the Education Council for immediate action and then moved to call another assembly for the following week.

On Wednesday night February 11, a second U.P. assembly was held in Mahar Auditorium. At this time, the original proposals were resubmitted in proposal form and ratified by the sixty U.P. undergraduates in attendance. Following this, a progress report was given stating that action had already been taken on many of the proposals, and, in some cases, the total project had been completed such as Priority of Education courses to Education majors. Earl Seidman who was in attendance at the meeting has stated that "next semester Education courses will be offered to Education majors first before they are opened to the University at large". In the case of counseling, the Dean and Assistant Dean, in addition to U.P., proposed a program to the Counseling Center in which Counselors for undergrads would be made available.

In addition to the sixty U.P. members in attendance, the meeting was visited by Earl Seidman, Assistant Provost Jerry Allen, Dean Coffing, Glenn Hawkes, and a few other members of the Education Faculty.

Despite the error in the ad in the Collegian announcing the U.P. meeting, the meeting itself unfolded in a calm, enthusiastic atmosphere that engendered cooperation among those present with respect to the proposals.

U.P. is now in the process of trying to create an undergraduate union. The possibility of such a union will be looked into and discussed at the next U.P. assembly.

U.P. is open for suggestions and assistance from undergraduates. If you are interested in helping U.P., contact either Ed O'Keefe (5-2318) or Frank Ruggiero (6-8988).

The next U.P. meeting will be announced in the Collegian. Your attendance would be appreciated.

THE U.P. COMMITTEE

Open Letter to University

I send you a message of great import! I have learned, from informed sources, that the gods are angry. They have threatened to take away the sun on Saturday, March 7, 1970. Mark my words -- they WILL carry out this threat! But the sun, and thereby the world, can be saved by us mortals. The anger of the gods will subside, and the sun will return if -- and only if -- the undergraduate body of the University of Massachusetts follows carefully the steps outlined below:

1. All students must smoke at least one (1) joint of uncut marijuana, between the hours of midnight Friday and 10:00 a.m. Saturday.
2. At 10:00 A.M. Saturday, all members of the University undergraduate body must gather around the campus pond. When you have arrived, you will be invisible to non-attenders, but quite visible to other attenders.
3. At precisely 10:07, you must all enter into a massive orgy, thereby pleasing the said gods.
4. It is imperative that you ignore any irate police who may try to give you a parking ticket during the orgy. Remember: this land is your land.
5. This will please the gods. They will only take away the sun for a moment, to scare the hamburger out of the non-believers, but will return it shortly thereafter, despite objections from Miss Olken, who feels that only the Student Senate has the right to do this.
6. Celebrate the saving of the world.

Peace,
CONNIE BISS

Drug Plant Fails: Will They Ever Learn?

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) - Jazz drummer Buddy Rich was cleared of drug charges here Monday after a police officer testified in court that drugs apparently had been planted in the musician's luggage.

Rich, 32, of Hollywood, Calif., was arrested Friday night in Rochester, N.Y. where his 6 piece orchestra was appearing. He was charged with felonious possession of drugs, including marijuana and a stimulant.

Buffalo City Court Judge Wilbur Trammell ordered the charges dismissed and directed the police department to destroy Rich's photograph and copies of his fingerprints taken while being booked on the charges.

Factions Argue; MLK to Disband

The two year old Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council split in half last night, as the long developing debate over the Council's purpose led one faction of members to leave the parent organization.

Calling themselves the Community Action Fund, these members charged that the Council had strayed from its original purpose - promoting the ideals of Martin Luther King Jr. - and that only a new organization, devoted to curing racism and poverty, could accomplish this goal.

The other group, UMass Social Action Council, claimed that King had devoted his life to humanity in general, and that the Council had been right in dealing with matters outside of poverty and racism since King's interests extended beyond these bounds.

Both groups will continue to be funded out of the MLK budget for the remainder of this year, with specific committees in each group receiving the funds earmarked for the corresponding committees in the old King Council.

The UMass Social Action Council is made up of the old MLK committees on militarism, student self-determination, race, the national council to repeal the draft, and action course seminars.

The Community action fund retains the committees on poverty, action lab, national educational tutoring service and racism seminars.

In order to straighten out the financial split, both groups agreed to appoint Paul Spiegal as overall treasurer. He will be responsible for doling out the MLK budget to committees in the two new groups.

The UMass Social Action Council, led by Gil Salk and Tony Teso will be, according to its members, the more radical of the two groups.

Teso explained, "We feel that Martin Luther King devoted his life to issues beyond just those of racism and poverty, and that we should seek to improve all of society, just as he did. We will be the group who will organize demonstrations against campus recruiters, and take other positive actions."

The Community Action Fund, led by Ken Mosakowski and John Childs, on the other hand, believes, according to its members, that King's life was primarily devoted to curing racism and poverty, and that their group should concentrate mainly in these areas.

Both groups are expected to ask the Student Senate for budgets next year, and at that time they will formally split from each other, and both will discard the MLK title.

Hams-Not Pigs

A mother talks to her son on a Coast Guard ship in the Antarctic; parents contact a serviceman homeward bound from Vietnam on a Navy ship in the Pacific; a University of Massachusetts scientist speaks to friends in Israel.

These contacts, and some 200 a year like them, are a service of WIPUO, the short wave ham radio station at the University of Massachusetts run by students of the UMass Amateur Radio Association. "A group of about 10 or 15 man the station regularly," explained faculty advisor Dr. Donald Scott, associate professor of electrical engineering. "Since ham bands are best at night, a good many of the contacts are made at that time."

People don't mind being roused at 2 a.m. to answer a phone call if it means contact with someone in the service at a distant base, Prof. Scott explained.

In ham radio jargon, such calls are termed "phone patches." A phone patch is a short wave-telephone hookup capable of relaying a voice from almost anywhere in the world to a home telephone.

In a typical UMass phone patch operation, according to Prof. Scott, a student goes on the air and "listens around." He hears an isolated station, say KC4USB at Byrd Station in the Antarctic, calling something like "We have phone patch traffic for Massachusetts."

The UMass operator answers the Antarctic station, gets the name of the serviceman who wants to contact a Massachusetts telephone number, then calls the number collect and makes contact. Then he signals the Antarctic operator, gets the serviceman on the mike there and by flipping a phone patch switch, connects the telephone line to the short wave set and completes the call.

The UMass station's equipment, according to Prof. Scott, "is just about the best amateur radio equipment made." Its 180 watt transmitter has an amplifier that boosts the wattage to 2000, the maximum allowed by the FCC for an amateur radio station.

WIPOU broadcasts from a special room in the Engineering Lab Building, designed with a separate outside entrance so that student ham operators can get in to work the amateur bands late at night after the building itself is locked.

Total membership of the association runs around 30, just about all of whom are licensed ham operators. The majority of the group are engineering students, many of them in electrical engineering. The operation is supported by donations from association members and by an appropriation of student funds through the UMass Student Senate.

Although the UMass transmitter can contact almost any point on the globe, many areas are closed to ham traffic. Indonesia and the countries in the Vietnam war area, for example.

Phone patch or so-called third party traffic that involves a third person besides the two ham operators is restricted in most areas of the world except the U.S., Canada, Israel, and most of the South American countries. Such restrictions do not apply generally to U.S. military bases or ships, which are the source of most of the UMass phone patch calls.

The UMass hams value their letters of thanks. "Talking via short wave with my son miles out at sea recently was very much appreciated," one mother wrote. Another letter said: "Thanks to you I was able to speak to my brother in Antarctica this morning. I'm sure you can imagine how much this means to us and more importantly, how much it means to my brother.

Future of Mills Residents Uncertain

Mills House stands without white residents now. There are only thirty people still waiting, as a group to find permanent residence. Area Co-ordinator Bill Idol hinted that there was at least one "good possibility" being worked on.

The administration is simply waiting for the situation to resolve itself. All possible effort is being put into helping the situation resolve itself.

Arnold House, now occupied by the Math Department, is still considered a possible residence. But, there were too many critical conflicts which are foreseen to make Arnold House an attractive offer to the displaced students. Math Department personnel raised serious questions Sunday night as the feasibility of mixing academic and residential areas.

Much of the baggage and personal belongings, hastily piled into the lobby of Brett House, as the result of moving from Mills, still remains.

Chancellor Oswald Tippo has released the following statement concerning the Mills House situation.

1. Mill House has been designated as a black cultural center. Plans are now being made to remodel the upper two floors so as to convert the whole building from dormitory use to academic space that will accomodate interests associated with the black cultural center.
2. Investigations are being continued to determine exactly what happened Thursday night. The facts which are being obtained are helping to dispel the rumors that have caused some of the danger-our tension.
3. Every effort is being made to assign comparable space to the white students who were in Mills House, as quickly as possible so that they can live together. The residence and student affairs personnel in neighboring dormitories have been helpful in providing temporary accomodations for those displaced students. Restitution will be made for the expense and inconvenience that the displaced students have been subjected to, and the University will move their belongings as quickly as possible.
4. Student Senate leaders and Central Area Council members have responded magnificently and we are deeply grateful for their help. They have been meeting with the involved groups to work for constructive solutions to the problems which have developed. These efforts have already begun to reduce tensions.

Wanted: A New Provost Apply at Whitmore

Dr. Oswald Tippo's appointment to the newly-created post of Amherst campus Chancellor has created a vacancy in the number two administrative job on this campus - the Provost's office.

Spokesmen from that office indicated yesterday that Associate Provosts Jeremiah Allen and Robert Glucksternare presently splitting the Provost duties, and that no successor to Tippo will be chosen for at least a month.

The Provost is the chief academic officer of the campus, and his office is responsible for development of all academic programs, regulation of course procedures, and review of academic policy.

It provides liaison service between the Faculty Senate and the school's academic departments, and coordinates policy between the various departments.

Tippo's main claim to the Chancellorship, besides his experience as number two man behind President Lederle for six years, his academic credentials, and his "image" on campus, was his activity as Provost since 1964.

He is generally credited as being the chief architect of the school's academic development, which has been hailed by the State Commission of Higher Education as being, "One of the most remarkable programs in faculty development and program initiation in the nation."

Shades of Easy Rider

This Wednesday evening a group of bands will hold a concert in Springfield for the benefit of Harlan Cornelius of the Buck Rogers Movement.

Apparently the group was to play in Atlanta, Georgia, but when they arrived they found that there was no concert - only a group of irate "rednecks," one of whom shot Cornelius in the eye. Now Harlan Cornelius lies in a hospital in Georgia in desperate need of medical assistance, assistance which costs a great deal of money.

The other members of the group are stranded with him, having turned over all of their money to the hospital. But more money is needed to save Harlan and the group.

It is hoped by participants that the Wednesday benefit will provide that money. The groups donating their services are: Fat, Cin, Glass, Bone Marrow, the Captain Video Lightshow, the Crystal Revenge Lightshow, the Woodrose Ballroom, and the management of the Paramount Theater at 1700 Main Street in Springfield, where the benefit will be held. The concert begins at 7:30 and will last until 11:00 p.m. Donations are $1.50, and all proceeds will go toward payment of the immeasue medical expenses incurred as a result of the shooting.

The Nation and The World

Panther Probe Proceedings To Begin In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) - A nationwide congressional probe into the Black Panther Party begins open hearings Wednesday with witnesses who will accuse Panthers of attempted extortion, mental imbalance and using children as a front for revolution.

Re. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., chairman of the House Internal Security Committee, said witnesses at the two days of hearings also will charge that news coverage of Panther activities is one of the things that keeps them going.

"We want to find out all we can about the Black Panther Party. We want to expose its finances, its objectives, its connections with what may be hostile foreign powers, its numbers, and the tactics it uses to reach its objectives." Ichord said in an interview.

The committee began Oct. 9 an investigation into the party which has blasted its way into the nation a consciousness with guns and rhetoric since its founding at Oakland, Calif., during October 1966.

The party claims 27 chapters in 22 cities but won't reveal the size of its membership. Estimates range from 800 to more than 4,000.

Federal Grand Juries at San Francisco, Chicago and New Haven, Conn., also were digging into the party. Ad hoc committees, including one headed by former Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark and the other composed of six black congressmen, are probing police reactions in shootouts with the Panthers on Dec. 4 in Chicago and Dec. 8 in Los Angeles.

The Internal Security Committee voted to authorize the investigation on Ichord's recommendation after receiving a 2-page staff study devoted almost entirely to press clippings and public testimony on the Black Panther Party.

The study said: "Panther alliances appear to exist in Communist China, Cuba and Algeria."

The staff reported other alliances including the Students for a Democratic Society previously investigated by the committee and said supporting organizations included the Communist Party, U. S. A.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, when questioned about Communist influence on black militants, testified in a budget hearing last April, "The Black Panthers, the most violent of all, and several others almost as bad, are organizations that the Communist Party has not been able to control.."

"This is pure and simple gangsterism", Hoover added.

"They are recruiting known criminals and hoodlums and encouraging them to engage in a broad range of terroristic tactics and other criminal actions while explaining that such actions, being revolutionary in nature, are justified."

Hoover has since stated that Panthers have killed five policemen. Charles Garry, general counsel for the Black Panther Party, says 28 Panthers have been killed by police in what he calls genocide.

The party's leadership also has been decimated by self-exile and arrest. Eldridge Cleaver, minister of information, is in Algeria. Huey Newton, founder of the party and its chief prophet, is serving 5 years for manslaughter in the killing of a policeman. National Chairman Bobby Seale is held at San Francisco jail pending extradition to Connecticut where he is charged with ordering the murder of a Panther suspected of being a police informant.

The Panthers don't deny revolution is their aim. Cleaver, the minister of information, has said, "Revolution is a glorious term, its a term to be proud of, and we should know that we are morally right....that the oppressor is the one who is wrong; and that the oppressor has no rights which the oppressed are bound to respect."

The Panther-platform, What We Want and Believe, includes these planks:

Self-determination for colonized American blacks through an election supervised by the United Nations.

Full employment or guaranteed income.

Restitution to blacks in cash or through the slave-era 4 acres and two mules formula.

Decent housing. Black studies.

Exemption from military service for all blacks.

Black people should arm themselves for self-defense from police brutality.

Release of all blacks from jails with future trials before all black juries.

New Mid-East War Brewing Hussein Claims U.S. Holds Key

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) - King Hussein said Monday the Middle East is sliding rapidly toward a point where Israel may launch a large-scale strike against the Arab countries.

He said the United States should - and could - stop the slide into war but it has done nothing in the Middle East toward "the interests of peace" since the Arab-Israeli war of 1967.

The king, who predicted the outbreak of war in 1967, told an interviewer: "The situation in the area is deteriorating sharply and the chances of peace are now virtually nonexistent."

Hussein claimed Israel was deliberately "polarizing" the Arab-Israeli conflict into an East-West confrontation.

Hussein said it was not too late for the United States to prevent another all-out Arab-Israeli war and he assered that it was Washington's responsibility to do so. But, speaking of American policy in the Middle East, the 34-year-old king declared he "felt let down, dismayed and discouraged."

The king has spent three nerve-racking weeks in which his regime narrowly avoided a bloody conflict with Palestinian guerrilla forces in Jordan.

Obviously dispirited by what he called America's failure to show more evenhandedness in the Middle East, Hussein charged his "friends in the United States" with "doing their utmost to back Israel."

He accused Washington of failing to throw its weight behind the U.N. resolution of November 1967 calling for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory.

By continuing to support Israel, especially with supplies of arms, the United States is providing the biggest obstacle to implementing the resolution, the king said.

"The United States could make the biggest contribution to lasting peace with justice" he went on. "It is the only country with the moral, political and economic weight to do so.

"It also has the responsibility in terms of world peace and in its own interests.

"But instead it has encouraged a situation which might lead to serious harm to peace in the world. Its policy is nowhere near as even-handed as we should like to see."

Hussein said Israel always had struck when the Arabs were in the process of building up a defensive capability.

Railroads Railroaded

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal judge Monday blocked a strike against one railroad, and a union spokesman said the only recourse of four AFL-CIO shop craft unions may be to stage a nationwide rail strike.

"The possibility of a nation wide rail strike certainly looms larger", said chief union negotiator William W. Winpisinger after the preliminary injuction handed down by U. S. District Judge Howard Corcoran blocked a strike which was to have started at midnight. This walkout presumably would have sparked a nationwide lockout.

"The only other alternative is an appeal that would mean months of litigation," said another union source of the dispute that has already dragged out for 5 months.

The unions scheduled a meeting Tuesday on whether to stage a nationwide strike or appeal Corcoran's ruling.

Corcoran ruled that since the unions had agreed to nationwide bargaining in the case involving some 45,000 rail repair and maintenance workers, it was illegal for them to try to whipsaw the industry by striking one company at a time.

The injunction superseded temporary restraining orders that since Jan. 3 had halted a strike against one line, the Union Pacific and the industry's preparations for a nationwide lockout to shut down the entire industry in retaliation.

Corcoran ruled the question of the legality of the lockout, challenged by the unions, was moot since he barred a strike but that he considered it legal under the circumstances.

A management spokesman expressed pleasure at the judge's action, particularly his view that a whipsaw strike is illegal.

Corcoran said he would hold no further hearing in the case, leaving it to the unions to appeal to a higher court or stage a nationwide strike.

"That would immmediately involve Congress," a union spokesman said of a nationwide strike, such as a two day walk out by the same unions in 1967 which Congress halted with a special law providing for a mandatory wage settlement.

The dispute involving 45,000 members of the four unions who repair and maintain railroad equipment has dragged out for more than four months.

They earlier rejected an industry offer of a two year, 68 cent hike in current wages of $3.60 per hour because one of the unions-sheet metal workers- objected to a job jurisdiction provision.

The provision would have permitted members of all four unions to do a limited amount of work in each other's traditional job jurisdictions, aimed at greater efficiency. Sheet metal workers reportedly feared they would lose jobs under the provision.

"He Who Laughs Last.."

BOSTON (AP) - An angry state senator called Monday for a probe of the University of Massachusetts incident last week when former Vice President Hubert Humphrey was unable to speak because of student boos and jeers.

"It is very likely that faculty members were engaged in the conspiracy," Sen. John D. Barrus, R-Goshen, told the Senate.

The Senate sent his proposal to the Rules Committee. It calls for the attorney general to learn whether agitators came in from out of state and whether state employes were involved in a conspiracy.

"I hope for the hundreds of persons who contacted me over the weekend that there is a thorough investigation," he said.

UMass Offers Rare Program of Dutch Studies

It may come as a surprise to most members of this educational community that there exists a small academic program which is unique on the Eastern Seaboard - the University's Program in Dutch Letters and Language, which is part of the Department of Germanic Languages. There are few institutions on the nation which offer viable programs in Dutch language and literature. It is a curious case of myopia when one realizes that Netherlands' native language is neglected by those who recognize the country's beauty and cultural contributions. The Netherlands must be one of the most famous unknown civilizations in the Western hemisphere. Its contributions to art, science, philosophy, theology, technology, and its very important place in European and American history should not be rewarded with a studied silence. In an age when novelties are the order of the day, the lack of interest in this lively and cosmopolitan culture is strangely inexplicable.

Given the present ideals and ideologies, Dutch culture has something to offer everyone. The granddaddies of the Yippies were the Provos of Amsterdam who, after a tumultuous confrontation with the establishment, disbanded when they realized they were becoming an organization. Revolutionary guerilla warfare? The Netherlands waged such a war for 80 years against the monolith power of the Spanish empire and won despite overwhelming odds. Perhaps here one may see an historical reminder to aspiring imperialists. True to the antithetical irony of history, Holland became an important imperialist power in Southeast Asia and even in the Americas some centuries ago. The cultural, political and economical aftermath of Holland's loss of its colonial empire should be an important field of study to historians and sociologists. The current national controversy about "socializing" various public amenities such as medicine and education can be studied in Holland as a factual reality.

For liberals, Holland's centuries-long policy of tolerance toward religious and political outcasts from foreign nations provides a heartening mode; act before speaking, or, put your money where your mouth is. The recent theological upheavals which have Pope Paul seeing red are nowhere as revolutionary as in this little country.

For sociologists it is a rich source of unused resources. For example, how does a highly industrialized, agrarian, traditional, progressive society cope with the rapid changes of the second half of the twentieth century? "Very well" is the answer, in Holland's case. Detailed studies in anyother language but Dutch are sorely needed.

The history of art would be immensely poorer without Bosch, Breughel, Van Eyck, Vermeer, Rembrandt, Van Gogh, Mondrian - to name a few. Presently, Smith College is hosting an exhibition of the works of Willem Escher, a Dutch artist with a very unorthodox and disquieting artistic vision.

Holland's literature is probably its least known asset. After all, one must know the language in order to read the country's poets. Yet there too are a few surprises. How many people actually know that the famous Medival play EVERYMAN is a translation from the Dutch original? Next time you use the dictionary, note how many words in your language are either Dutch or of Dutch origin. For the devotees of Freud, it might surprise them that he put the works of the Dutch author Multatuli at the top of his list of most important influences. Dutch literature reflects not only Holland's unique geographical and social aspects, but also documents creative shocks of recognition with such upheavals as the two World Wars in addition to a fascinating anatomy of two disparate cultures (the Asian and the Dutch) in the works of writers who lived in what is now the nation of Indonesia.

One could go on and on and never quite exhaust the list. To study all the ramifications of the scarcely known culture of this famous little country is more than a mere novelty.

It is to the credit of this University to have recognized the importance of Dutch studies, but it seems that the community at large is still unaware of the existence of the Program. At this stage of development it offers two semesters of accelerated language instruction, and courses in Modern Dutch Fiction in Translation and Dutch masterpieces. The director, Prof. E.M. Beekman, hopes to be able to add a course in Dutch civilization in the near future. One should not allow unique and enriching opportunities to slip by, thus it is hoped that UMass students will become more aware of these Dutch courses.

A final note on the learning of a language. Foreign languages are presently embroiled in turmoil and confusion, but one cardinal aspect should be emphasized. Learning a foreign language not only opens the door to a new culture and literature, but the very experience of assimilating a language foreign to one's own is one of the best cleansers of an insular mind. One should always guard against a doctrine of containment of the intellect; it usually results in the direst consequences.

Do you plan to student-teach this Fall? You must attend one of the organizational meetings. Elementary: March 2nd or 3rd., Mark's Meadow Aud. 4:00 - 6:00 p.m. Secondary: March 5th or 6th., Mark's Meadow Aud. 4:00 - 6:00 p.m.

Undergrads Teach in School of Ed.

For the first time in the history of the UMass School of Education, three UMass undergraduates, Fall veterans of the Kline-Lindblom section of Education 309, are supervisors in the school's Micro-teaching Clinic. Suzanne Kelley, Jan Geraain, and Pam Estock, all seniors and former student teachers, are teaching basic micro-teaching skills to undergraduates at the Amherst campus, according to Director of the Micro-teaching Clinic, Keith Lindblom.

The clinic is part of the UMass teacher-training program. The purpose of the clinic, Lindblom stated, is to teach future teachers, both elementary and secondary, basic skills. Each supervisor meets with four students twice a week at the School of Education, and each student, in turn, practices certain skills on high school and elementary students. The clinic extends through five-and-one-half weeks.

In past years, only graduate students have been used as supervisors in the clinic according to Lindblom. When scheduling problems this semester eliminated them as instructors, Lindblom recruited among 25 girls enrolled last semester in Education 309, English Methods for Secondary Teachers.

"I was aware of the girls' skill, enthusiasm, and concern for their students," he said. Their performance in comparison to graduate students, Lindblom said, has been "just as good." He added that "Although they lack experience, they make up for it in enthusiasm and concern."

According to Lindblom, "We have proved that a job can be done by people who have met minimum, relevant requirements. We stifle creativity when we make requirements do a job greater than necessary."

Different Cultures

To the editor:

The events of the past few days - the reactions and the turmoil - have motivated a somewhat apathetic hand to try to express its mind through the media. I, though not directly involved in the Mills House affair, have attended the Tippo-Brett discussion which focused its entirety to the Mills House incident. From the 'facts', however large their range of variability, a somewhat clear general picture can and must be extracted. This general picture is one we have all been exposed to before and can be summized as the White-Black dilemna.

As if history did not exist; the world, the United States, the colleges and universities, and yes THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSA – CHUSETTS, are all to be found guilty of 'delayed reactions' to real pulsating problems. But even worse, when the opportunity finally arises to act - a thorough bureaucratic investigation is instigated. It is as if they were not indeed as much, if not more, responsible for the chaos. How is it possible to treat a problematic situation with the problem itself.

As much as I hate to feel the need to make the distinction, I am white, I live in a white world, I go to a white school and frequent the white student union. In general I do my thing in white. Because white is the majority we do not give this much, if any, thought. Well, wake-up, it IS a luxury! It is an undeserved luxury and certainly unsubstantiated. Why should only we be able to enjoy this pleasure. (This pleasure sometimes varies grotesquely).

The Blacks wanted and deserved Mills as one place where they could do their thing in black. Why do we, who have had this opportunity all of our lives, get so aborted at such a suggestion. And, in fact, after we delay this request, and delay it, and delay it: we get offensive at a Black reaction. To further throw some light (perhaps darkness) upon the white institutionalized Robot - the Black reaction was triggered by a white racist incident.

For those who were waiting, the hassle has occurred, the spark has ignited a long awaited fire. For humane sake, let US make the best of it. Let us show some colors we can be proud of and turn the other cheek and say 'yes' we have been wrong. Let us say 'yes' the Blacks deserve a Black cultural center - for years. Let us try to overlook the relatively small force, the relatively small harm, and scare. Let us understand beyond the incidence. Try to understand a people who are just now trying to get an understanding and belief in themselves. Try to understand the white institution of justice and law and reasoning that is not justice at all.

I have addressed this to the Black community with the hope that White support will be recogn.. ~l. It is real. I also have some hope that everyone will wake-up and act with humane justice non-insitutionalized. I would also like to express my respect for the Black students who participated in the discussion at Brett. Further discourse between White and Black students is a must. If we can separate from the established, perhaps OUR conclusions will make some progress. I have enough concern to talk - to listen - to try to try to understand - not as a White but as a human being. Is there a bandwagon anywhere?

For those students who were inconvenienced by this event - understand - for today as yesterday, as tomorrow, the tables are, have been, and will be turned. If anything, peace, and try to prevent the 'will be.'

A Black Civilization?

To the Editor:

Brother George Lee Johson's letter of Feb. 25 was very interesting. In it he related some data that proved "that Early Egypt was a Black civilization." Well, I guess he thinks that was what he proved. It seems to me, though, that he produced excellent evidence to support the opinion that he didn't really know what he was talking about.

Brother Johnson mentions that "Herodutus" (sic) described the 5th century Egyptians as black and curly-haired, but he doesn't mention what position these Blacks held in Egyptian society. Is it possible that these particular Blacks were slaves?

Negroes were frequently depicted as such in the paintings on the walls of tombs from the 18th dynasty, the same dynasty that was co-founded by the queen Nefertari, a Black woman, according to Brother Johnson. There is an example of one of these paintings reproduced in the article on Egypt in ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA (1965). It shows "Negroes bringing tribute of ebony, ivory, pelts, a leopard, and a monkey." This same article refutes one of the "data" supplied by Brother Johnson. He claims that the "great Sphinxes pyramids, and public buildings of Egypt" were built under the domination of the Black king Piankhi circa 670 B.C. But in truth, the age of the great pyramid building and the time when the Great Sphinx was built was between 2613 and 2490 B.C., during the 4th dynasty, not the 25th. But what's 2000 years, when Black History is at stake? Right, Brother?

Now it is simply my point that before hhy year 2000 B.C. the influence of the Blacks on Egyptian society was minimal. During this time there was not the Black Pharoah. Or maybe the Brother and Sisters could name me one, AND CITE EVIDENCE TO PROVE THAT HE WAS BLACK, evidence that I can check later.

Brother Johnson has not showed that a Black civilization predated the Minoan civilization as I challenged. His letter begs the question that I proposed.

Then, the good Brother accuses me of being part of a "White Racist, White-washed, White-dominated historical structure." Heck! How does he know I'm that? I've never even met Brother Johnson. I wouldn't recognize the cat even if I passed him on the way to the dining commons tonight. Especially in the dark! Though maybe not if he grinned.

In conclusion, I must say that though Brother Johnson's letter was interesting because of the "data" he propounded, it was also rather disappointing. I was hoping we'd get some votes for a sub-Saharan Black civilization. If all the Blacks are counting the Egyptian civilization as their own, then they're really clutching at straws.

While the Blacks may have played a very important role in Egyptian history from 730-656 B.C., before that time, Egypt was ruled by a succession of white pharoahs, and immediately afterward, it was conquered by the Assyrians.

Drug Paranoia

Last night we waited for a large-scale bust that never came. So the guys in the dorm vacuumed their carpets, washed their ashtrays, flushed away their grass. There are rumors that police can bust a whole dorm. This is almost certainly NOT possible: up to now individual rooms have been named in the warrants. But rumors grow. Some remember the dorm-wide bust at State University of New York at Stonybrook. Everyone is up tight.

Up tight because almost everyone is guilty. Even if you, reading this, have never smoked, you are probably guilty of a felony: if you know of someone who possesses grass and you don't report it, you can be prosecuted on a felony charge yourself. Maybe your roommate has got a secret stash - that will implicate both of you. Or maybe somebody has smoked in your room and dropped a few seeds. That's enough.

We drink in the corridor waiting for the bust. Once the police came, it would be pretty embarrassing for them not to find stuff. So they'll find it. Perhaps even if it has to be planted on somebody. People who've been busted tell me, "We know it was coming; the place was clean. They kept me in the hall while they planted and 'found' it again." Leslie Fiedler at the State University of New York at Buffalo tells about his run-in with informers, about the planting of evidence, about political repression.

That's what it amounts to: a political bust. I don't mean only that possession charges have been an easy way of jailing radicals, particularly in New York and Philadelphia. I mean the whole scene:

Underdover agents;
mass paranoia;
suspicion that evidence is being planted to get someone;
a population oppressed because it's safe for the authorities to hit students and it's politically useful to discredit the university community;

A political bust -- not on the level of local police, who are probably just honestly "doing their jobs": it's the men in power who have apparently ordered a Spring Offensive against student drug users at UMass. They are really attacking a counter-culture of which grass is a small part. It's as if they were busting dorms for "subversive" literature - another part of the counter-culture. That may come too in a while with an Attorney General like Mitchell and Nixon's revamped Supreme Court.

Some people use drugs much too much; and I know some who have been hurt by using the wrong kind of drugs. But hitting individual users and small-time dealers is an ineffective way of handling those problems. It's not drugs but a counter-culture that's being attacked this spring.

As members of the university community, we've got to ask ourselves:

1. Is it in the best interest of an intellectual community to live in an atmosphere of paranoia and mutual suspicion?
2. How do we feel about university cooperation with police raids? Shouldn't the university administration handle drug usage (at the level of individual users) on its own as a personal and social problem - or often as no problem at all? Shouldn't the administration make clear to us and to the authorities in Boston that it will not tolerate political terrorism under the guise of health?
3. How do we feel about students who get busted? Do we leave them to their own devices? Don't we understand that the whole community is involved and vulnerable? Shouldn't we organize a campus defense which will support our brothers, help pay their bail, and insure against political busts at UMass?

Decency

To the editor:

In the light of the recent fears and tensions of campus wide drug raids a fundamental evil of the university community has been momentarily shadowed. This evil is theft. The number of people affected during the past few months is fantastic. There are always the same trite solutions; lock your doors, report all strangers, or simply hide your valuables. Time and time again people point to the security in each dorm as the only way to stop theft. However, in the past the student security personnel have often given up on trying to protect an entire dorm. This is by no means an easy job.

On Friday night, as I entered Grayson House, I was stopped by a student security person and asked to show my ID and house sticker. Almost immediately I felt inwardly angry. As I walked to the elevator I realized the cause for my anger, I had never before been asked to prove my residence in the dorm after 1 a.m. For the very reason for which I had been angered only moments earlier I was now elated. I really felt as if someone cared what happened in the dorm. The situation I had experienced was hardly that of a restrictive police state atmosphere as most security policies seem to call for as the way to stop theft. On the other hand a single student was able to make security a reality by simply caring enough to get involved. It makes me honestly believe that there is a chance to make the community a far better place to live.

Police State

To The Editor:

On behalf of the students of U-Mass, I would like to express our deep sympathy to Peggy Forfa regarding the fact that she has somehow been stuck on a campus where people are sometimes asked to help each other in times of crisis. Peggy, the fire alarm was not rung to warn you that another dorm was being raided; it was rung as a plea for help in aborting the attempts to raid the dorm. The idea is that you will run out of your dorm to the victimized dorm, enter that dorm and run through the halls shrieking filthy words, creating general havoc and anything else that might make things unbearable for the polizei. If you can't get inside the dorm, standing outside the dorm, screaming, hindering the police movements to and from the building, perhaps even forcing them to stay inside the building will be appreciated. In case there is a fire (as someone seems to be worried about) you'll be leaving the building, anyway, right?

In Nazi Germany, people used to fear hearing a knock on the door in the middle of the night. They didn't do anything about it and Happy Hitler achieved a nice dictatorship. It may be that, for some reason, they couldn't do anything about it, but we are now in a similar situation and we CAN do something. Remember, in 1969, we reached the halfway point between the writing of George Orwell's 1984 and the impending, real 1984 both in terms of time span and in terms of political change. We must checkmate this trend now or accept the idea that our children will have cameras in their dorm rooms watching them constantly.

I am not calling for a revolution. It is not yet time for one, even though there are already many people with the spirit in them. But if we refuse to be defeated by the Leaders at this front, it may not be necessary to battle them in a full scale civil war.

The decision to use grass or drop acid is a personal one -- like smoking or drinking. It is not the duty of the government to decide for you. All we ask is your help in teaching them that lesson.

And finally, regarding your gripe against the ? Health Services it is time you realized that there are other people in the world besides you. Just because you were not on their VIP list doesn't mean you have had an injustice done to you. Many people ate at Berkshire Dining Commons that night. It takes time to treat 800 cases of Ptomaine. Not everyone can be first in line.

Mills House: One Letter

To the editor:

Once again our Black brothers of the University have shown their deep desire to achieve social justice on campus. This time they have demanded that the 75 white residents of Mills House vacate their rooms by Tuesday. The reason given for this demand is that they want the space for a Black Cultural Center. Fine. I think they should have such a center, but why does it have to be in a dorm, and why should 75 students have to move out to make room for it? There is already an acute shortage of rooms on this campus; the present incident can only aggravate it. I am sure that there are many areas available for such a center. The center could be set up in the Campus Center, the Student Union, or if those are filled, let it be set up in the Hampshire House rooms which the King Council will be vacating.

The main problem here is not really the need for space that the Blacks have, but their actions in demanding that the 75 students leave Mills at once. Where are these boys supposed to go? They are members of a fraternity, and wish to live together. By this action they can hardly be kept together as is the aim of a fraternity. The Blacks have every right to have their cultural center, but likewise, fraternity life is a form of culture that these boys wish to follow. Which is more important? Each side no doubt considers its own needs to be of greater importance but they must decide which is right.

As I have pointed out above, there are several alternatives to the establishment of a Black Cultural Center, but none to the disruption of a form of community which is important to those 75 students. I hesitate to mention another important factor, as I no doubt will be accused of materialistic racism, but this is fact. Those 75 students are paying for their rooms out of their own pockets, or their families, while the campus as a whole is contributing 100,000 dollars per year to the CCEBS program. This may be asking too much, but I feel that there should be some sense of gratitude to the students that are making the educations of many Black students a little easier. Summarily ejecting 75 students from their dorm is certainly not going to increase the popularity of Blacks on this campus.

Also, the whole mess seems to be so unnecessary, since the movement toward racial equality calls for Blacks and Whites to live together, not apart.

War on All, Even Bromery

To the editor:

This note is in reference to Keith Bromery's editorial "War On All". Let us first consider the phrase, "the Arab attack on a Swissair Jetliner" . . . I would like to know where Mr. Bromery obtained this information? As far as recent reports are concerned, no proof of Arab involvement has yet come to light. The ten Palestine Liberation organizations have categorically denied the Israeli and American allegations as to guilt that this was an officially planned political act. It may have been that a Palestinian nationalist, driven to extremes, did sabotage the plane, but to draw all sorts of general implications about "Arabs" as such is quite foolish and lacks of course empirical foundations. It seems strange however that we believe the recent attack on an Egyptian civilian factory was a "technical error". Notice where American prejudice lies.

Another point of conflict: this being the implication that "Arab terrorists" are some sort of an advance guard for the UAR. This is totally make-believe. Several nations in and outside of the area support liberation activities, including the UAR, but it remains true that the movement is an indigenous revolutionary struggle for change, with aims of creating a democratic secular state. Also, it would be politically worthless to destroy a foreign airliner. World opinion is a very important element for the civil war in Israel; to disaffect it seriously, would only hinder the movement.

But what disturbs me most, is the continual stereo-typing of the Middle East Situation even in a supposedly informed University paper. For example, the use of the word "terrorist" to describe Palestinian attempts at recognition, has moral and value connotations by implication, which completely deny the aims and goals of resistance activities. This classification promoted especially by Israeli propaganda has been widely embraced by the "liberal elite" (New York Times) in the United States. By the Israeli government, its use is hypocritical. The destruction caused by the Jewish Haganna and the Stern Gang in the 40's and 50's (for example the massacre at Dier Yassin) need not be recounted but only kept in mind.

The American public and press has yet to recognize the complexities of the Middle East situation, the the legitimate aspirations of the Palestine people. All I ask, is that the people who are strongly opposed to US policy in southeast Asia apply the same moral criteria to this part of the world; the same standard of legitimate national self-determination; the same standard on big power imperialism; the same standard on the right to revolution of an oppressed people; and the same standard of secularism, equality, and human liberties.

ALFRED J. FORTIN

To the editor:

I found your editorial "War on All" very interesting, particularly for its biased opinion. The entire content of your column, Mr. Bromery, was obviously based upon information stemming from American newspapers and networks. Being aware of the U.S.'s role in the Mideast situation, I ask you, just how objective do you think this information can be? Asking students to see your viewpoint is an act comparable to that of an editor of Pravda asking the same of the Soviet citizens. Neither of you can be valid with this kind of an approach.

To begin with, in your review of recent attacks in the Mideast, I saw no mention of the Israeli attack on the civilian factory, killing some sixty Arabs, and injuring up to two hundred. However, I am sure you are aware that this incident occurred prior to the Swissair jetliner incident, and it was probably only a matter of absent-minded negligence on your part when you refrained from including it in your editorial. Maybe there are many other such events which you refuse to recall to your memory, Mr. Bromery!

The so-called "War on All" is really a war on only those who are attempting to suppress the free and equal rights of Palestinian citizens. If the entire world decided to follow the U.S. and Great Britain in their imperialistic aggression to rid Israel of its non-Jewish citizens in order to establish a Jewish National state, then I suspect it would have to be a "War on All."

The Palestinian citizens, whether of Jewish, Christian, or Moslem faith, are entitled to live under equal rights in their own native homes, without fear of being thrown out in order to make room for incoming American or European immigrants. If this is not realized, then the Palestinian Arabs will continue to call upon their fellow Arabs from other nations to help them combat the coalition of Jews from all nations who are denying free and equal rights to non-Jewish Palestinians.

Maybe someday some benevolent world power will render support to establish America as the "homeland" of the Indians - anyone not of Indian blood is forced either to become a "secondary" citizen or else to leave. If such an occasion should arise, I expect you, Mr. Bromery, to be the first to pack up your things and abandon your country with a peaceful smile on your face, as you obviously expect the Arabs to do.

WMUA Refuses to Run

To the editor:

We, the undersigned, regard UMUA's refusal to run the EXCLUSIVE Hubert Humphrey interview made at the Lord Jeffrey Inn in Amherst after his attempted address at the Cage on Tuesday as another inexcusable act of totally disregarding students' interests here on campus.

A number of us called "Music Power Radio" as soon as we heard the annulment of their pledge to air the interview, and we were told that the interview had to be edited to insure objectivity (although it would seem that the only way to remain objective would have been to broadcast the tapes uncut); we were told that someone (nobody quite knows who or why or how many) threatened to take over WMUA if the interview was run; we were told that the tapes were not of "air quality" (although that's never bothered WMUA before) - in short we were given excuse upon empty excuse as to why, once again, WMUA refused to serve UMass effectively.

Power increase or not, WMUA certainly has a long way to go before it earns the respect - and the attention - that it desires. The "Exclusive tape . . . (but tomorrow)" fiasco screws all University students out of what they had a right to expect from WMUA.

In the battle for mens' radios, it is no wonder why WDRC is ahead.

Bridal Fair?

To the editor:

The theme of this year's Bridal Fair is LOVE. If you think the manufacturers of the Bridal Fair are interested in your future love and happiness, you are sadly deluded - they're interested in your money.

The "Fair" consists of a nine-hour exhibition of products of interest to a bride-to-be and two bridal fashion shows, all of which is clearly intended to get women to BUY. A woman's desire for love and happiness through marriage is exploited by suggesting that a successful marriage requires accumulating many expensive material goods - china, silver, crystal - as well as a fancy trousseau for the bride. The University's willingness to allow an exploitative group like the Bridal Fair to advertise its wares on campus is deplorable.

Even more damaging than the economic exploitation is the assumption, implicit in the existence of the Bridal Fair, that a woman's fulfillment can be found only in her role as "wife and homemaker." Marriages often prove far less fulfilling than the Bridal Fair or the fairy tale ending, "and they lived happily ever after," lead women to expect. If everything is not perfect, the couple must assume that it is their fault that their marriage is not pure bliss. However, as Simone de Beauvoir says in THE SECOND SEX, "Individuals are not to be blamed for the failure of marriage: it is . . . the institution itself, perverted as it has been from the start. To hold and proclaim that a man and a woman . . . ARE IN DUTY BOUND to satisfy each other in every way throughout their lives, is a monstrosity that necessarily gives rise to hypocrisy, lying, hostility, and unhappiness."

We are not necessarily saying that women should not get married. However, we believe that there are several alternative life styles from which a woman should be able to choose. On Tuesday, we intend to present some of these life styles - communal living, women's collectives, role reversal, the expanded family, and celibacy.

The assumption that marriage is a guarantee of eternal love, and that woman's only goal and only role in life is to be married, is so pervasive in this society that dramatic means are necessary to demonstrate that a woman has more of a choice to make than which man to marry, when, and with what silver pattern.

Fellow Workers:

On the fifth anniversary of the assassination of Malik Shabazz, we feel it is appropriate to indicate full support of your struggle to gain control of your education. As educational workers engaged in the process of learning and teaching, it is proper that you determine all policies and courses and all institutions related to your occupation.

As white radicals we have become aware that what little of our history and culture intrudes into the educational machine is perverted and degraded. As members of the working class we are painfully aware that all of America's education is apologetics for racism, imperialism, and capitalism. We can understand the frustration of our black fellow workers whose history and culture, having been considered invalid, have been deliberately obscured and distorted.

Five years ago Malik Shabazz was murdered. Malcolm X took control of his own life; for this he was assassinated. He has become a symbol to be emulated. We recognize that taking control in the classroom, on the job, and in the streets is but a first step, a first step in assuming control of our destinies, and in forming a new society within the shell of the old.

C.E.Q. Needs Help

To the editor:

The Coalition for Environmental Quality is asking for support from the student body to gain needed financial resources so that C.E.Q. might become an effective organization in the Connecticut Valley region. As it now stands, C.E.Q. has about 125 people involved in various forms of committee research dealing with land, air, water, and atomic pollution of our environment. The basic research we are now pursuing will soon be translated into action programs. We would like to have mobilized the Amherst community for the March 3, hearings in the State Legislature concerning birth control and abortion (Bill Baird is now serving three months in Charles St. Jail for advocating what thousands in this state practice) but due to financial difficulties our action in this area will probably be limited to leaflets and petitions. Population control is one of the most important aspects of the environmental problem and the State must pass logical legislation in this regard! C.E.Q. would like to engage in actions against the Vernon Nuclear Plant whose radiation could have detrimental effects on the whole Connecticut Valley, yet we have no finances to carry out such a program.

It has been found that a certain pesticide used in Vietnam called 245T has given rise to birth defects among the children born there. Yet this same pesticide is being used by telephone companies in large quantities in the state of Massachusetts. Unfortunately, you need money to inform people of this problem!

If you haven't gotten the message by now it is this: the C.E.Q. is going before the student Senate this Wednesday evening with a budget request of $2750. This is a skeleton budget for us to operate on. Help us! Show up at our table in the student union to sign our petition or attend the Student Senate meeting on Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. to back us. Thank God, there are people like Miss Olken in the University community, they succeed in subduing JERKS LIKE YOU. It is unfortunate that there are not more of her type and less of yours.

Northeast Area to Present Living Style of the 1970's

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

UMass is ushering in a new decade by giving students the chance to be part of a new concept in living. The 1970 residence halls located in the Northeast Area behind the tennis courts and near the Women's Physical Education Building, will open in September and will offer small group relationships which are difficult to achieve in existing residence hall arrangements.

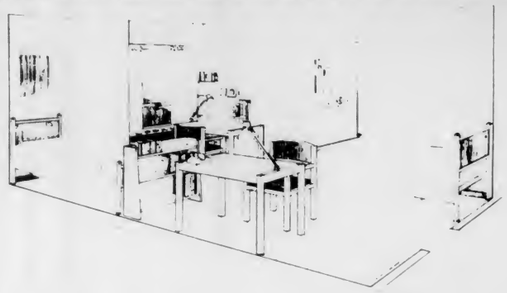
The chance to form strong bonds of friendship, yet maintain a sense of privacy, is what makes this UMass living style so attractive, according to Bruce Cochrane coordinator of the new area.

The living style of the 1970 dormitories evolves around a suite consisting of bedrooms, living room, and bathroom facilities. There are no corridors within a suite.

The three "new decade" dorms will consist of eight floors. Each floor will contain eight suites. Each suite or cluster will house six, seven, or eight members, depending on the arrangement of the rooms. Every cluster will contain single bedrooms as well as double rooms. Each residence building will have 100 singles.

The double rooms are furnished with two desks with a drawer (30" by 48"), two three-shelf bookcases (44" by 32"), two upholstered chairs, two beds, two wardrobes (4' by 6 1/2") with six-drawer bureaus and tack boards, and two lamps.

Double bedrooms measure 12' by 15' and singles measure 11' by 16'. Rooms are approximately the same size as in Southwest and Orchard Hill. No draperies will be provided, but a heavy duty curtain rod will be installed.



This artist's sketch shows a double bedroom in the Northeast Area residences which will open next September.

The rooms will not be carpeted. All room furniture is moveable.

Each cluster arrangement contains an 11' by 16' living room. The living room decor will be of two types, standard and casual. Both decors will feature carpeting.

Half the living rooms will be decorated with standard furniture. This will include a three seat leather divan, two upholstered chairs, a table, wood chairs, a storage cabinet (for records, etc.), and bookshelves. Two lamps will provide lighting, one student type and one table lamp. One whole wall surface of the living room will be covered with a fiber board that can be used as a tackboard.

The casual furnishings for the other living rooms were developed by Mr. Dewey Hodgden, interior decorator of the new project, and are unlike anything presently offered in the University's residence halls. Besides wall-to-wall carpeting, there are two full carpeted "risers", each six inches high. When placed end-to-end, the "risers" run the length of the room forming a platform. Use of these risers enables students to change the level of the living room floor.

Instead of traditional furniture, there will be eleven bolster or preformed plastic-foam cushions. Each bolster can be arranged in many ways. Also in the living room are three multi-purpose table/shelves. These table/shelves can be used as bookcases, coffee tables, or high tables for card playing, etc. As in the standard living room, lighting will be provided and wall surface will be a tackboard.

Each cluster contains bathroom facilities which include two toilets, two sinks, one shower, and shelf and storage space for toilet articles.

All hallways will be carpeted. In the hallway of the bathroom area, there will be a formica shelf with adequate space and electrical wiring for electrical appliances.

Although public areas have been cut 80% because of the living room space in the suites, there is still a medium space main lobby, a reception desk, small carpeted areas with chair/table groupings, a vending lounge with tables, chairs, and a counter, and mailbox area.

A kitchen is also included on the main floor, while laundry facilities including 10 dryers and 12 washers are located on the ground floor.

Other unique features of the 1970-style living is sound-proofing for quieter study atmosphere, firwood in each cluster for graffiti, and each student's key opens the cluster's door and his door only. His key will not open your door.

This new style of living for the campus was planned by an undergraduate and graduate student committee established by the Northeast Area Congress. This committee is headed by Elaine Francis of Knowlton House and the committee is presently working on the idea of making the new apartment complex co-ed. They are also considering having faculty live in the dorms. There are two apartments in each building, one on the ground level and another on the main floor.

So that what's new for the new decade - a new style of living at UMass. Want to change to keep up with the times? Address all questions to Bruce Cochrane in the Dean of Students' Office, 235E or phone 5-2711 or 5-2712 or 5-2713.

CASUAL LIVING ROOM

STANDARD LIVING ROOM

God Leads a Pretty Sheltered Life

At the end of time, billions of people were scattered on a great plain before God's throne. Some of the groups near the front talked heatedly -- not with cringing shame, but with belligerence. "How can God judge us?" "How can He know about suffering?" snapped a joking brunette. She jerked back a sleeve to reveal a tattooed number from a Nazi concentration camp. "We endured terror, beatings, torture, death!"

In another group, a black man lowered his collar. "What about this?" he demanded, showing an ugly rope burn. "Lynched for no crime but being black!" "We have suffocated in slave ships, been wrenched from loved ones, toiled till only death gave release."

Far out across the plain were hundreds of such groups. Each had a complaint against God for the evil and suffering He permitted in His world. How lucky God was to live in heaven where all was sweetness and light, where there was no weeping, no fear, no hunger, no hatred. Indeed, what did God know about what man had been forced to endure in this wo ld? "After all, God leads a pretty sheltered life," they said.

So each group sent out a leader, chosen because he had suffered the most. There was a Jew, a black, an untouchable from Ineia, an illegitimate, a person from Hiroshima, and one from a Siberian slave camp. In the center of the plain they consulted with each other. At last they were ready to present their case. It was rather simple: Before God would be qualified to be their judge, He must endure what they had endured. Their decision was that God "should be sentenced to live on earth --as a man!

But, because He was God, they set certain safeguards to be sure He could not use His divine powers to help Himself.

Let Him be born a Jew.

Let the legitimacy of His birth be doubted, so that none will know who is really His father.

Let Him champion a cause so just; but so radical that it brings down upon Him the hate, condemnation and eliminating efforts of every major traditional and established religious authority.

Let Him try to describe what no man has ever seen, tasted, heard, or smelled -- let Him try to communicate God to men.

Let Him be betrayed by His dearest friends.

Let Him be indicted on false charges, tried before a prejudiced jury, and convicted by a cowardly judge.

Let Him see what it is to be terribly alone and completely abandoned by every living thing.

Let Him be tortured and let Him die! Let Him die the most humiliating death -- with common thieves.

As each leader announced his portion of the sentence, loud murmurs of approval went up from the great throng of people. When the last had finished pronouncing sentence, there was a long silence. No one uttered another word. No one moved. For suddenly all knew. . .God had already served His sentence. Replies requested. Write C.C.C. P.O. Box 728, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

Experimental Theater is Coming For Three Evening Performances

The New Troupe, formerly La Mama Repertory Troupe, directed by Tom O'Horgan, will be in residence on the Amherst Campus of the University of Massachusetts March 5 through 7 under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council.

During the engagement, this noted, off-Broadway experimental theatre will perform three evenings on the stage of Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Two plays by Sam Shepard, one of the country's most exciting young playwrights, will be given Thursday, March 5 and Saturday, March 7. "Melodrama Play", an ironic and tragic farce about a pop singer's emptiness in a commercial world, has received the highest critical praise wherever it has played. Shepard's "The Holy Ghostly" will also be performed, bringing to the attention of theatre enthusiasts two works by the writer of such works as "Chicago", "The Red Cross" and most recently, the script for Antonioni's latest film, "Zabriskie Point."

Friday, March 6, the New Troupe will perform "Gurtons' Apocalyptic Needle" devised and with music by Tom O'Horgan. Mr. O'Horgan is a leading exponent of the New Theatre. He has directed the long-run plays, "Futz" and "Tom Paine" and also directed "Hair", now playing to capacity crowds on Broadway, London, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago.

Reserved tickets for these performances are now available through the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. They are priced at $1.50 for UMass undergraduates; $2.50 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3.00 for the general public.

"Melodrama Play" and "The Holy Ghostly" will be given March 5 and 7, "Gurtons' Apocalyptic Needle", March 6, and "The Holy Ghostly" March 7.

The New Troupe will be presenting "Melodrama Play" by Sam Shepard during their residence at UMass this Thursday through Saturday. Pictured is a scene from the tragic farce about a pop singer.

Music Dept. Sponsors Peltzer Piano Recital

The department of music at the University of Massachusetts will sponsor a piano recital by Dwight Peltzer in Bowker Auditorium Wednesday, March 4, at 8 p.m. Mr. Peltzer joined the faculty this year, having previously taught at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia Musical Academy and Southern Illinois University.

A native of Minnesota, Mr. Peltzer received his early training in music at MacPhail College of Music in his native state, at the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin and at the Hoscschule fur Musik in Munich. His study in Germany resulted from grants by the Federal Republic of West Germany.

Professor Peltzer has had many prominent recital and orchestral solo appearances in his career. Besides numerous recitals at college and university campuses, he has been a piano soloist with the RIAS Symphony Orchestra of Berlin, with the Bamberg Symphony Orchestra, the Victoria (B.C.) Symphony Orchestra and the Minneapolis Civic Orchestra.

In addition to his concert activity, Dwight Peltzer has performed lecture-recitals at the University of California at Berkeley, Temple University, University of Rhode Island, Macalester College and others.

For his program at the University of Massachusetts, Mr. Peltzer has included as major works Mozart's Sonata in D Major, K. 576, and Beethoven's Sonata in A Major, Opus 101, as well as shorter works by Alban Berg, Claude Debussy and Salvatore Martirano. The concert is part of a continuing series of faculty recitals at the University and is open to the public without charge.

The Race is On

It is 1908 and the Great Leslie (Tony Curtis), a bold pioneer at setting new land, sea, and air speed records, enters his specially built white car in what is to be the first New York to Paris road race. The jealous and implacable Professor Fate (Jack Lemmon) and his evil assistant Max (Peter Falk) construct their own sinister black car, sabotage the other contestants and dash off after Leslie.

It's a mad, slapstick, slam-bang adventure across the western U.S. to Alaska, to Siberia (via iceberg) and on to Paris. And when they get there, it all culminates in the most colossal pie-throwing sequence of all time ($100,000 and 2,357 pies according to the press agents). It's an homage to the silent era, packed with excitement and hilarity. Also appearing in the movie are Natalie Wood, Keenan Wynn, Vivian Vance, and Larry Storch.

THE GREAT RACE, sponsored by Angel Flight, will be shown in Mahar Auditorium on Friday, March 6. There are two showings, one at 6 o'clock and one at 9:15 p.m. Also, there are two Roadrunner cartoons to be shown.

Which One is the Paulist?

It's easy to tell a Paulist. Just talk with him.

The first thing you notice is that he's contemporary. He lives today, but plans tomorrow with the experience and knowledge of yesterday. That's a Paulist characteristic: the ability to move with the times and to meet the challenges of each era.

A Paulist is also the mediator of his age: he tries to bring together the extremes in today's world and the Church, the liberals and the moderates, the eternal and the temporal.

Next, he is very much an individual. It sets him apart immediately. He has his own particular talents and abilities — and he is given freedom to use them.

If you are interested in finding out more about the Paulist difference in the priesthood, ask for our brochure and a copy of our recent Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

The traffic-pedestrian situation on North Pleasant Street gets worse by the day. Getting from one side of the street to the other has become a feat that only a Gayle Sayres or Pat Scavone could manage. Plans are in the works to re-route N. Pleasant to make life easier for all concerned. In the meantime, don't be afraid to demand your rights from the drivers. Not too many of them are willing to hit someone who saunters across the street in front of them. (Photo by Ken Stevens)

Varsity and Frosh Mermen Sink in Meet vs. Mighty MIT

By JIM BROWN
Staff Reporter

On Saturday at Boyden Pool, the Redmen varsity and frosh swimming teams fell to mighty MIT, the varsity by a score of 66-38. The visitors outnumbered the Redmen in participants through all but two or three events.

In the 400-yard medley relay captain Al Northrup and his teammates Herb Schuster, Morris Lynch and Geoff Senior took a loss to Laurence, James, Nadlic and Bronfer of MIT, 4:07.1 to 4:09.1. Nadlic came on strong in the butterfly to overtake the Redmen's lead.

Eddie Jazab and Rich Vogel entered the 200-yd. freestyle against Hadley and James of MIT. Jazab took third at 1:00.9. In the 50-yd. free it was Mark Miller at 23.2 and Moulton at 24.2 with a first and second respectively. Miller got two firsts, the only ones, for UMass.

Leach and Schuster got together in the 200-yd. individual for four points against a winning time of 2:20.2. In the low dives, Paul Joy of UMass earned a six in his last dive (degree of difficulty, 2.2), but had to settle for a second place when MIT's Bronai pulled off a likewise six (degree of difficulty, 2.4). Bronai won by one point.

Graham and Bronfer of MIT took the first two places in the 200-yd. butterfly. Graham placed at 2:16.8, UM's Lynch at 2:41.6 for a third. In the 100-yd. free it was Miller again placing first, 51.3. Senior took third at 55.1 for UMass. At this time in the meet the score was 38-23.

Schuster came in nine seconds after MIT's first of 2:25.9 in the 200-yd. backstroke to place third. James just barely overtook Schuster in the closing few seconds to get three more points for MIT. Jazab of UMass came in second at 5:59.9 behind Speedy Markel of MIT during the 500-yd. free. Northrup, in the 200-yd. breaststroke, lost to first place MIT's Laurence by an arm's length.

High-diver Joy had a difficult time finding the right angle into the water in a couple of dives and settled for a third. In the last event (400-yd. free) the Redmen tallied seven more points in a final effort. Senior (56.1), Leach (58.5), Moulton (55.3) and Miller (50.3), who mustered a victory in the final strokes, were UMass entrees.

Coach Joe Rogers' major worry all season has been depth.

No depth is surely the problem for the Frosh team. Saturday, it was the quintet of Terry Carney Bill Davidson, Paul Reynolds, Charlie McAuliffe, and Bob Okolita. McAuliffe had not swam a meet in over five weeks. Injured Ron Cleaves was out with stitches in his head; not by ramming his head on the edge of the pool, but, more naturally, by playing Hallway Hockey at his dorm.

Reynolds took a second in the 200-yd. free and a third in the 100-yd. free. Carney fought out thirds in the 50 and 500-yd. frees. Okolita had a five-pointer 200-yd. individual in a fine time of 2:21.9. Davidson likewise made five points in the 200-yd. butterfly (2:49.6). He also placed third in the 200-yd. breatstroke. McAuliffe over took teammate Okolita for third place in the 200-yd. backstroke. The final score was, to say the least, lop-sided. The final tally was 67-18.

Last week UConn forfeited their varsity and frosh meets by just not showing up, thereby improving UMass' record. The stands at Boyden's poolside were less empty than usual. (There were a few Redman fans, too.)

The varsity squad will be competing in Conference relays March 7 at the University of New Hampshire. It is to play UConn, Vermont, and UNH. Being the home meet Saturday, it was "Senior Night" for graduating members of the team. At the end of the Varsity meet, the MIT Coach got thoroughly soaked when he "accidentally slipped" into the pool, at the count of three.

Fr. Caps Year with Best Game

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

In their last appearance on the basketball court this season, the UMass freshmen played their finest 40 minutes of basketball, only to be denied the victory in overtime to Rockwood Academy, 96-87.

It was a well-played ball game all the way, marked with good overall shooting, tough defense and strong rebounding on the part of both teams. Rockwood was the bigger team physically, but the Little Redmen were able to overcome this disadvantage with aggressiveness under the boards and scrappiness on the part of their guards.

The scoring was tight for the first twelve minutes of action with the Redmen holding a one-point advantage, 20-19, on the strength of ten points each by Mike Polakoff and Tom White, who played his finest game of the year.

After a Rockwood time out Peters hit a free throw, Polakoff converted a fastbreak for two points and Chuck Olsen hit two jump shots, which gave the Redmen a seven-point lead, 27-20, with 4:49 left in the half, as Rockwood was only able to get a free throw during this Redman spree.

The lead stayed around the seven-point margin for the next couple of minutes and then another scoring outburst put the Redmen into a twelve point lead at the half, 40-28. They left the court to a fine round of applause, in what had to be their best half of the season.

Highlighting the first half action were the 16 points by Polakoff, 14 points by White, and an outstanding overall team effort by the rest of the Little Redmen.

For the first seven minutes of the second half the lead stayed at twelve points as Polakoff and White continued their hot shooting and Charlie Peters matched rebound for rebound with the much taller Rockwood frontcourt.

Rockwood went into a press, which UMass had some difficulty in breaking. With the hot shooting of Johnny Walker and Henry Price, the Stags were able to cut the deficit to two points with eleven minutes to play. The Little Redmen weren't ready to give in, as they continued to play good hard-nose basketball.

Rockwood finally tied the score with 9:31 to play. At this point the Little Redmen hit for eight straight points, two by Scott Golden and six by Peters to jump into a 63-55 lead with 7:33 to play.

Rockwood came back to within one at 77-76 with 1:24 to go, but here the Redmen were dealt a hard blow as White fouled out.

Rockwood took the lead, 80-77, with six seconds to play on baskets by Larry McNeil and George Szcerba. The Redmen were not ready to fold, as Joel Saperstein hit a short jumper with a second showing on the clock to pull within one point.

Then, in a bizarre ending, the Rockwood coach called a time out to set up an inbounds play. Rockwood had already used up its allotted number of time outs and was hit with a technical. Polakoff stepped to the foul line and calmly put the ball through the twine to send the game into overtime.

The overtime was all Rockwood as it dominated the boards after Peters exited shortly after the extra session began. After time ran out the freshmen left the court to a standing "o" in appreciation of their outstanding effort. Although it was in a losing cause, coach Peter Brosaca can be very proud of his team's performance.

Polakoff finished the game with 27 points, White followed with 19, and Peters contributed 11 points and 12 rebounds.

UMass Ties for Crown, Julius Erving. 37, 25

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

DURHAM, N.H. - After jumping into a 13 point half-time lead, the Redman basketball team set a new team season record of 18 wins with a 92-75 victory over the UNH Wildcats here last night.

Great team play was the key to the victory as the hoopsters continually set up their teammates for easy hoops underneath. UMass finished its regular season with an 18-6 mark while UNH had its first winning season in 18 years, ending at 12-11.

It was completely a team win. Julius Erving, who had 17 points in the first half, broke a 6-6 tie at the 16:05 mark, and UMass never trailed. Dick Samuelson laid one in after a Jack Gallagher pass and Ray Ellerbrook followed with a beautiful reverse lay-up after another nifty Gallagher pass to build the lead to six, 12-6, with 14 minutes remaining.

After Phil Blum made a 25 footer for the Wildcats, UMass came back with hoops by Erving, Samuelson, and John Betancourt, lifting the Redmen edge to 19-10.

From there on in, the teams traded baskets with UMass using its superior height to get many easy ones underneath, while the Wildcats relied mostly on the outside shooting of junior guard Brian Peters.

UMass took a 39-26 lead into the dressing room.

But UNH would not give up in the second half. Although the Redmen built up a 19 point lead of 54-35, the Wildcats scored five straight to cut the bulge to 14. After a timeout, Gallagher came through with two layups and a charity toss, followed by four points by Erving that built the Redmen lead to 23, 63-40, with nine minutes left.

Then the Wildcats started to press and UMass was unable to get the ball over the midcourt line, UNH ran off 10 straight and seemed to be back in the ballgame.

However, Ellerbrook produced a key three point play which gave the Redmen the lift they needed and UMass was well in control the rest of the way.

Coach Jack Leaman removed Erving with 2:04 left in the game and the sophomore walked off the floor with his highest scoring night of the season, 37 points, an output which equaled his Fordham performance in January.

The decision was well in hand by then and only the final score remained in doubt. That score was 92-75.

The Redmen played at times as they have all year. Their passing was outstanding and their foul shooting which has been up and down all year was excellent.

Erving, 19 for 23, was especially keen from the charity stripe.

The contest may have been the last for the team's four seniors. Only a phone call from Nev York can prolong their careers, and it would be a tremendous injustice if UMass did not receive an NIT bid.

The entire team is deserving of praise for this victory. Although the statistics might indicate that Erving put on a one man show (37 points, 25 rebounds), he didn't, as many of his baskets came on tap-ins.

Mike Pagliara and John Betancourt ran the offense well as Ellerbrook got into foul trouble early. Gallagher played a strong two-way game, and had 15 points. Mathias and Samuelson also deserve credit for their play.

REDMAN RANTINGS - The win gave UMass a tie for the Yankee Conference title with Connecticut (both teams had 8-2 conference slates). . .this marks the third year in a row that the Redmen have been Yan-Con champs. . . Five more NIT bids went out yesterday, with Army, Duquesne, Manhattan, Utah and Georgetown getting the honors. . .only seven berths remain in the N.Y. tournament. . .the visitors shot 53% from the floor and 83% from the free throw line. . .there was no love lost between the two teams as a fight almost broke out after UNH's Pemberton held Erving on an attempted layup, but cooler heads prevailed and the score did all the talking for the Redmen. . . thanks goes to manager Dave Larsen for the work he's done all year for the team. . .

Welterweights. Toro Pounds Valdez

NEW YORK (AP) - Veteran Pete Toro of New York, backed up his reputation for spoiling the rise of young welterweights by pounding out a majority round decision last night over Rodrigo Valdez, the fourth ranked contender from Colombia.

The 33 year old Toro, nine years the senior of Valdez, was unable to floor his opponent but staggered him several times in halting Valdez' string of five straight knockouts.

Judge John Maschie and referee Tony Perez each scored it 6-3 for Toro, while judge Joe Armstrong called it a draw at five rounds and five point s each. The Associated Press scored it 7-2 for Toro.

Redmen Ice Williams, 5-1, in Finale

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Playing their last collegiate game for the Redmen, seniors John Hartnett, Bill McMann, Doug Powling and Bob Madore led UMass to a 5-1 win over the Ephs of Williams College last night at Orr Rink. The win brought the Redmen's record to 10-8, giving Coach Jack Canniff his first winning season at UMass and set a school record for victories in a single season.

The game was never in doubt as the Redmen appeared to be too strong for the Ephs from the outset. Bill McMann scored his final collegiate goal at 6:21 of the first period, beating Williams goalie Jim Munroe on a rebound shot; assists to Dennis Grabowski and Mike Waldron.

Eighteen seconds later, the refs called a double penalty against Williams, giving the Redmen a two-man advantage for the next two minutes. Seven seconds later, 'Bruno' Donovan scored, assists to Jack Edwards and Powling.

Williams scored its first goal at 14:34 on a power play opportunity. Jack Curtin passed to Gary Bensen who brought the puck into the Redmen zone. Bensen left a drop pass to Larry Anderson who beat UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty from 25 feet out.

Play was somewhat ragged during the second period. UMass clearly dominating play, was playing just good enough to stay one step ahead of Williams who posed no real threat.

Brian Sullivan scored the lone UMass goal at 3:18 of the period when Paul Riley passed the puck to Fran Mulcahy in the Eph corner. Mulcahy then hit Sullivan in the slot with a quick pass and 'Mad Dog' beat Munroe with a low shot to his left.

During the third period, the action picked up, as Canniff gave his seniors considerable ice-time. At :39 Bensen left for tripping. The Redmen scored their second power play tally of the evening at 1:55 when Edwards banged a rebound past Munroe, assists to Harnett and Powling.

Madore scored the last UMass goal of the season, when he took a pass from Paul Riley and broke in on Munroe, beating him to the near side of the post. Powling got his second assist on the play.

BREAKAWAY - Each of the seniors had a hand in the scoring. . .McMann and Madore scored the first and last Redman goals, while Powling had two assists, Hartnett, one Flaherty ended up with 18 saves, while Munroe had 28. . .Charles 'Bru t' Donovan left the arena with his shoes on tonight but was later quoted as saying "I would do anything for ink in the Collegian". . .Maybe next year. . .'The Masked Villain' Bob Bartholomew won the heavyweight wrestling crown and is looking forward to a debut in the Boston Garden. . .Powling continued his ice shattering checking. . .his greatest masterpiece was in the third period when he literally cut Eph wing Steve MacAusland in half with a tremendous check. . .'Pretty Boy' Nickerson is thinking about going on the bowling circuit now that hockey is over. . .

SUG Board Elects Officers S.U. Tax to Be Major Concern

The Student Union Governing Board has elected its slate of officers for the next year, with Betty Pugh heading the Board as President.

Other officers elected were Thad Drabowski, vice-president and Bob Nims, Secretary-Treasurer.

Of immediate concern to the new officers will be determining the student Union Tax rate for next semester. There is a strong possibility that a substantial raise in the tax will be made, and the Board is currently investigating alternatives to the tax boost.

The SUG board will also be charged with administering the opening of the new Campus Center later this semester, and will be responsible for overseeing the various R.S.O. and Union groups moving to the new facility.

New Civil Rights Director Named Amid Protest

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration gained a new director for the controversy torn office for Civil Rights in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare Tuesday. At the same time, 125 employees of the agency protested the ouster of their old chief in a letter to President Nixon.

In addition, two key civil rights aides resigned with blasts at Nixon 's school desegragation policies.

In the first of series of rapid fire developments, Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch named J. Stanley Pettinger, a 30 year old department lawyer in San Francisco, to head the department's civil rights activities.

Pettinger, a Harvard law graduate and GOP activist in California, replaces Leon E. Panetta. Panetta was ousted by the White House two weeks ago for his vigorous line on school desegregation.

Several hours after Pettinger's appointment, two of Panetta's most trusted associates followed him out of the government: Paul M. Rilling, Deep South civil rights director for the Welfare Department; and C. Peter Gall, the agency's spokesman.

Following that, 125 of 325 employees in the agency signed a letter to the President expressing their "profound dismay.... and bitter disappointment" at Panetta's ouster.

"The recent flow of White House statements....have served to becloud the school desegregation issue and thus to lend credence to the supposition that the national government has grown insensitive to the cause of enforcing civil rights," the letter said.

"We earnestly hope that you may be prevailed upon to exercise the strong moral leadership that we feel is now essential to avoid a reversal of the nation's long standing commitment to equal opportunity," the letter continued.

Rilling said in a statement: "The posture the administration in the area of school desegregation has at best been one of vacciliation and nonleadership.

Gall, in a letter of resignation to Finch, said he could not "any longer try to justify to the public the actions of this administration regarding either the subject of civil rights generally, or its treatment of your Office for Civil Rights in particular.

Atty. General Quinn Comments on Drug Investigation

By CLAUDIA HAMBERG
News Editor

During a one-day visit to Amherst yesterday, Attorney General Robert H. Quinn, chief law enforcement officer of the state, commented on drug arrests, the Barrus resolution, and campus-community interaction in an afternoon press conference.

Quinn was first questioned on the Barrus resolution, which asks that the attorney general's office investigate the disruption of Hubert Humphrey's speech at UMass one week ago.

Quinn stated, "Generally we leave law enforcement problems like that to the local law enforcement officials, and in this particular instance unless extenuating circumstances dictated otherwise, we would leave that investigatio n to the local police, both town and campus. I would like to study the request more particularly before making a final conclusion."

Attorney General Robert Quinn spent yesterday in Amherst discussing drugs at the Regional High School and taping interviews with WFCR, the five college radio station. In a press conference held in the afternoon, Quinn denied that his office employed paid informers on the UMass campus.

The subject then turned to drugs. When asked by the Daily Collegian if his office paid campus informers he stated, "In this particular case I'll answer in the negative."

He was also asked if his office had anything to do with the campu s drug investigation at UMass. Quinn explained, "My office on the drug problem attempts to be a coordinator and a clearing house for information rather than to be in the investigative or law enforcement end.

"We have an investigative unit for narcotics in the state police. They are not under my supervision. We have our local police officials who investigate the problem. They are not under my supervision. What we do in my office is to coordinate all the intelligence and dispense it out among the units who may not have the information."

Quinn spoke of his two-week police training program which will help law enforcement officials to better detect drug abuse and peddling, aid in the preparation of search warrants, and prepare the police psychologically to deal with the drug-dependent person.

Another question asked by arrests are directed at the small-time drug user.

He answered that the law would rather catch the suppliers, but "we have to start somewhere."

"We are doing our best to discourage the marijuana user. We simply do not know what the potential effects of marijuana are. It is a reckless adventure for them to undertake."

He pointed to legislation that has been passed which would provide rehabilitation and treatment as an automatic requirement for first-time drug offenders, and if taken by subsequent offenders could abate the trial proceedings. Quinn also expressed his support for the elimination of a minimum penalty in cases of marijuana use.

"Government and law enforcement are ready to adjust," he stated, "but we do feel that we have laws to enforce and this is why the busts are made."

When asked how drug abuse centers in this state would be funded, Quinn replied, "I personally think that funding for drug abuse centers is much, much more important than financing a stadium. It is a problem in our society and should be met head on. The legislature has already shown its support for the principle by passing the law and I think the money would follow automatically."

Quinn introduced the subject of campus seizures and explained a meeting held by his office in December for the heads of Boston area colleges. He stated, "Potentially I am the lawyer for any of the state colleges and the university," and told of the meeting which attempted to present better ways of handling the seizure situations.

In general, Quinn declared his respect for the campus self-governments but said that "the campus should be immune from the community no more than the outside community is immune to the campuses."

In a full day of activity, the Attorney General spent the morning at Amherst Regional High School discussing drugs with the students there, attended a luncheon in his honor sponsored by the Amherst Kiwanis Club, and taped interviews at WFCR, the five-college radio station.

State Senator Barrus Proposes Investigation of HHH Incident

State Senator John D. Barrus, a Republican from Goshen, reported on the Senate floor Monday there were indications that members of the UMass faculty were "engaged in the conspiracy" that forced former vice-president Hubert H. Humphrey to leave the platform at Curry Hicks Cage last Tuesday before delivering his foreign policy address.

Barrus submitted a resolution to have the office of Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn investigate the UMass protest, and claimed that he received complaints indicating that some UMass faculty members helped with plans to bring in persons from outside the University to join in the protest.

The resolution calls on Quinn to investigate the activities "of a group of individuals who . . . at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst did deny to a citizen of the United States his constitutional rights of free speech and who also, through their actions, did deny citizens of the Commonwealth and the United States their constitutional right s to peaceful assembly."

Quinn has been asked to investigate "whether any state or federal laws were broken, and, if so, to use the authority of his office to bring the lawbreakers to trial."

The resolution was referred to the Rules Committee for determination on its language.

Barrus told fellow senators, "It's a shame - it's the worst experience that any individual has had in our Commonwealth and it took place at a leading university of the Northeast."

Mrs. Nixon Recruits Volunteer Workers

LEXINGTON, KY. (AP) - Mrs. Richard Nixon, seeking to arouse more student interest in volunteer work, heard it defined by a coed Tuesday as the quiet thunder of our involved generation.

She also heard the voices of peace demonstrators for the first time on her five state trip. They appeared in small groups at the airport where she was met by a flag waving crowd at a downtown hotel later and at Eastern State Hospital.

A few shadows can't dim the glory of this day, commented the First Lady after she was told of the protests. I really didn't see any of them or their signs.

The tone of her five hour visit here was set at Kentucky Village, a home for delinquent dependent children where she was introduced to Muri Giurgevich, a volunteer worker from the University of Kentucky.

The 19 year old sophomore told Mrs. Nixon, Although our volunteer work does on quietly, the effects are thunderous....We believe that it is this quiet thunder of our involved generation that can alter and affect the needs of our troubled world.

Other volunteers explained youngsters at the home were learning new four letter words: Love, care, hope and need.

O'Brien Accepts Democratic Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawrence F. O'Brien accepted the Democratic summons the second time around and agreed yesterday to take over again as chairman of the debt and division plagued party.

The Democrats' ranking professional politician at 52, O'Brien reversed his earlier refusal and accepted the draft, issued unanimously by the party executive committee.

His turnabout came after two days of stalemate in the search for a second choice candidate to take over when Sen. Fred. R. Harris of Oklahoma steps down Thursday..

"If the Democratic National Committee ratifies the recommendation of its executive committee to draft me as chairman, I must accept that decision and I will serve my party," O'Brien said.

Chancellor Oswald Tippo will hold an open discussion in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union tomorrow from 12:00 to 2:00 p.m. Topics will include matters pertaining to the University community and environment.

Supreme Court Asked to Rule On Racial Unrest Ordances

WASHINGTON (AP) - The local ordinances that were hurriedly enacted to give mayors emergency powers during racial outbreaks of the past several years are approaching their ultimate legal tests.

The Supreme Court was asked Monday to rule on the validity of ordinances which give local authorities the right to prohibit assemblies because of suspected civil unrest.

Such measures were passed in numerous U.S. cities to cope with racial disturbances which erupted in the late 1960's, particularly those following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in April 1968.

The ordinances allow mayors or other authorities to take various emergency steps, but nearly all include the power to ban assemblies or to declare out right curfews.

The particular ordinance at issue was passed in Philadelphia, and although it is being attacked on rather narrowly defined grounds, the outcome is expected to have nationwide implications.

The petition, filed with the court appeals the convictions of three persons arrested during demonstrations that were held despite a proclamation issued immediately after King's death. The proclamation banned outdoor assemblies of 2 or more people, with few exceptions.

The first arrests were made April 6, 1968, at a tree planting ceremony in Philadelphia's Roosevelt Park protesting the recommissioning of the battleship New Jersey for service in the Vietnam war. The ceremony had been planned before the proclamation was issued.

The petition says that while participants in the tree planting ceremony were being arrested, other persons were permitted to congregate in the Navy Yard.

School Buses Overturned In S.C. Racial Incident

LAMAR, S.C. (AP) - White demonstrators were dispersed with tear gas yesterday after overturning two empty school buses and clashing with police and Negro pupils on the campus of recently integrated Lamar schools.

Several black pupils suffered cuts and bruises and at least two police officers were injured slightly in the melee with the adult demonstrators, some of them armed with ax handles, chains and bricks.

For some 35 minutes, said high school principal Gordon Cole, "it was hotter out there on that school ground than in Vietnam."

In Columbia, S.C., Gov. Robert McNair called the incident unspeakable and promised to take any steps necessary to bring about the restoration of order.

The Justice Department in Washington said U.S. marshals were on the campus and that the FBI was investigating the disturbance.

Police said there were about 100 whites in the crowd. The violence erupted shortly after the two school buses arrived. It was over quickly and the schools were immediately shut down.

Senators Request Session On U.S. Operations in Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. George S. McGovern, backed by the chairman, J.W. Fulbright of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called Tuesday for a secret Senate session on U.S. operations in Laos.

But Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, the Senate's senior Republican, said he does not share the concern of many senators that Laos could turn into another Vietnam.

If it did, Aiken told reporters, it would create such an upheaval in this country that any good resulting from a firm U.S. stand would be undermined.

Aiken said that, in some respects, the shift in the focus of the Southeast Asian war from Vietnam to Laos is a good sign. He said it means that North Vietnam is getting a little discouraged in the South and is devoting more attention to Laos for bargaining purposes.

NASA to Orbit 2 Satellites Around Mars

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said yesterday that it will try for the first time next year to place two spacecraft in orbit around the planet Mars.

The mission goals require that the Mariner spacecraft continue to send back data for about three months, while orbiting the planet.

This period will allow enough time for the space craft, equipped with television cameras and other experiments, to study about 71 per cent of the planet's surface from an altitude of about 10,000 miles, and also to observe selected areas as they appear to change with the Martian seasons.

Eventually the gravitational attraction of Mars will draw them down to crash into the planet. However, the National Academy of Sciences and the Space Sciences Board have specified that the surface of Mars must not be contaminated until several carefully sterilized unmanned Viking craft have been landed to determine whether any form of life exists there.

Nixon Asks Block Of Railroad Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon asked Congress Tuesday to block a nation-wide rail strike by ordering acceptance of a tentative wage and job jurisdiction settlement for some 45,000 workers.

"A nation-wide stoppage of rail service would cause hardship to human beings and harm to our economy, and must not be permitted to take place," Nixon said in a message to Congress just two hours after four AFL-CIO shopcraft unions called a strike for one minute after midnight Wednesday.

Speed is essential, said Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz in a White House briefing explaining Nixon's unprecedented proposal for a mandatory settlement.

"We hope Congress will act quickly," Shultz said. "We'd like to see them act tomorrow."

Nixon's bill would impose as final a settlement worked out by negotiators for the four unions but rejected by a majority of the members of one union. The settlement would include a 68 cent raise in current wages of $3.60 an hour for the workers who repair and maintain rail road equipment.

But we want to do this without becoming a rigid corporate monster.

So we need people who can step right in and contribute to the areas that concern us.

Areas like metropolitan, national and international banking; the management of personal and corporate investments; the economic problems of the minorities, and the growing crisis in the cities.

Which brings us to the way we feel about you, and the way we feel about ourselves.

Faculty Senate Tenure Committee Allows Student Participation

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

New ground has been broken recently by the Faculty Senate Tenure and Grievance Committee with the setting by that body of a precedent which allows for the first time a limited kind of student participation in the hearing of cases. (T & G hears faculty grievances alleging violation of academic freedom or rules of procudre, usually in the matter of reappointment and tenure decisions.)

In a recent grievance proceeding, the chair ruled that the professor filing the grievance could retain as counsel anyone he wished, including in this case six undergraduate and two graduate students. This precedent gives students for the first time the opportunity to observe the entirety of the committee's processes (excluding deliberation). There was no objection from the committee to the chair's ruling.

At the same time, however, the chair ruled that present rules governing the committee and established by the Faculty Senate forbid the granting of a request from Senator Mark Smith, chairman of the Student Senate Academic Affairs Committee, asking that an observer from the committee be allowed.

Senator Smith has arranged a meeting for next Tuesday between Tenure and Grievance Chairman Professor Joseph Burroughs and the Academic Affairs Committee to discuss the entire grievance process, and ways in which it might be improved.

The Tenure and Grievance Committee is at present undertaking a general revision of the rules of procedure which govern the committee. To aid the committee in this revision, the committee has adopted a policy of hearing at the outset of each case, following the introductory remarks of the chairman, any procedural questions or suggestions which parties to the proceeding may wish to raise.

Recently, the committee has heard complaints that the resources provided for the petitioner to aid in the preparation of his case are nonexistent, a circumstance which renders the committee's processes unequal, inasmuch as the administration (which is usually the respondent) has considerable staff resources to devote to its case. The Tenure and Grievance Committee itself is in a position similar to the petitioner having annually requested of the Provost funds for staff to process the large amount of paperwork involved in cases, and having annually been turned down.

The Tenure and Grievance Committee, as well as the faculty at large, is known to be displeased with the lack of weight given its recommendations by the administration in recent years. Reforms, which the committee is undertaking, are designed generally to strengthen the committee internally, and, it is hoped, increase respect for the committee and its findings.

Lay-offs Not Affecting Service, Says Food Dir.

By STANLEY OLSON
Staff Reporter

The recent lay-off of student workers from UMass dining commons is "as far as I know, permanent," said Joel Stoneham, Director of University Food Services Monday. He assured that students will still get "the same food and the same service" as before.

According to Stoneham, the lay-off was caused by a budget cutback, which was the "direct result" of fewer students buying meal tickets. The number holding meal tickets for the semester was unknown until the week after registration, he said. At Franklin Commons, most affected by the cut this figure dropped by 30 per cent.

"Corrective measures" were taken at Franklin Commons, Stoneham said, to restore the level of service after the lay-off. The steps taken there involved schedule changes for the existing help, but not rehiring.

Blaming the long lines at Franklin Commons on "the intertransferability of dining commons," Stoneham explained that this factor is not covered by the budget.

All funds involved come from the sale of meal tickets. "This is the students' money," he said, "and we're just trying to spend it wisely."

Class Boycott Proclaimed At Bridgewater

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) - About 500 Bridgewater State College students, following a mass meeting Tuesday, proclaimed a class boycott for Wednesday to protest the trustees failure to renew the contract of a philosophy professor.

Paul Kosciak, president of the Student Government Association, said the students want an explanation of why a contract was not renewed for Dr. Donald R. Dunbar, chairman of the philosophy department.

The SGA met Tuesday with Lee F. Harrington, academic dean, but no agreement was reached.

John M. Cataldo, chairman of the state college Board of Trustees, said Monday that there was no option for renewal in Dunbar's contract.

The trustees adopted at a recent meeting a resolution forbidding the release of such information.

Student leaders were unable to predict how many of the school's 5,000 student will take part in the strike.

OPEN FRIDAY NIGHT

On Truth and Responsibility

State Senator John Barrus and the SPRINGFIELD UNION, using a series of generalizations, half-truths and whole-lies have combined the worst in legislative prudence and journalistic ethics to smear the University and to keep alive the misinformed accounts of the Hubert Humphrey incident.

In calling for the State Attorney General's office to hold an investigation of the incident and to punish any faculty members involved in a "conspiracy," Barrus is violating one of the fundamental premises under which universities operate.

Granted, the Humphrey protest was a serious matter, and if indeed any persons committed crimes they should be tried for them. But that judicial process should occur on campus, and should be administered by the University community itself. For when the State begins to interfere with the internal matters - academic, social or judicial - of any school, the State then, by intimidation, begins to control that school.

And UMass, as a state funded school, is especially vulnerable. It is enough that the Humphrey demonstration caused a large number of state legislators to turn a cold eye on the school right in the middle of budget time. But by trying the University in the press, as Barrus and the Union are attempting to do, the University is left being raped.

What makes this whole situation totally unbearable for the University is that Barrus' charges and the Union's story are merely accounts of what almost happened.

For example, the last paragraph in the Union story reads "Barrus said he received one phone call that a UMass student who defended Humphrey's right to speak 'was so badly beaten that he required hospitalization.'"

This is just a lie. No such injury occurred; a charge this serious should have been checked by a responsible newspaper before it was printed. But the Union was evidentally content to print anything Barrus came up with, regardless of the possible implications it may have held for the University.

MIC Kills for Fun and Profit

Since the early 60's, the Pentagon along with the University and Industries has been researching, developing and manufacturing more sophisticated herbicides, defoliants, incendiary, anti-personnel, and napalm weapons to be used against oppressed people who are involved in liberating their land and resources from Colonialism. The most severe case is Vietnam but such nations as Guatamala, Cuba, Dominican Republic and Bolivia are involved.

Despite the existence of a huge nuclear force (intended to deter people from challenging the United States), why was it necessary to develop an extensive arsenal of counterinsurgency weapons? Criticism had started building up in 1957 because the United States had been relying almost solely on nuclear deterants. With the concurrent nuclear stockpiles of Russia and soon China, France, England, etc., the bomb has lost some of its deterant power. Also, who would dare use it in a 'brush war'! In Maxwell Taylor's words, more emphasis had to be put on a new strategy that would "recognize that it is just as necessary to deter or win quickly a limited war as to deter a general war." This contention was supported by influential intellectuals from Harvard, MIT, and Columbia.

When John Kennedy entered office, he allied himself with this push for new developments that would keep the United States the most persuasive military force in the world. He set up a "Special Group for Counterinsurgency", headed by Maxwell Taylor, Robert Kennedy, and Robert McNamara. The special group stated that the design of the counterinsurgency weapons should follow three guidelines: 1. weapons had to be effective against decentralized agricultural populations; 2. they had to be capable of a graduated response to various insurgency situations, ranging from localized and low-intensity conflicts to full-scale "people's war", as in Vietnam, and 3. they had to be available to pro-U.S. regimes in underdeveloped countries with a minimum input of U.S. resources.

Vietnam was the laboratory to prove the United States could stop national revolutions in underdeveloped countries. Robert Osgood wrote (in reference to the early Kennedy days) "after the Cuban missile crisis and before the large numbers of American forces got bogged down in Vietnam", the U.S. looked so powerful that the new military establishment "began to think of the world as virtually monopolar and of America's position in the world as comparable to that of a global imperial power. The only remaining gap in military containment might be closed if the United States could demonstrate in Vietnam that wars of national liberation must fail." The Vietnamese liberation fighters do not have the capability to attack the continental U.S.; our sophisticated weapons could not be used in the jungles of Southeast Asia. Vietnam became the testing ground for the multilication of new weapons. This increase is not to say that other weapon systems ceased. Honeywell, General Dynamics, RCA, Raytheon, Gruman Aircraft, etc. are still just as deeply involved in multimillion dollar contracts for a prolification of missiles and antimissile missiles (ABM, Safeguard, etc.), Navy vessels and aircraft.

Honeywell is ranked 18th nationally for fiscal 1969 in war production with over $406 million in Department of Defense contracts. Honeywell operates in 56 countries, securing labor and resources at minimum cost. The Honeywell Board of Directors helps control over 100 institutions among them are 12 banks (including Northwestern National Bank, 1st. National Bank, and Farmers an d Mechanics Bank), 5 insurance firms (Northwestern National Life, Travelers' Insurance), 5 foundations (Tyrone Guthrie Theater Foundation, The Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts), 6 colleges and universities (University of Minnesota Foundation, Carleton College), Northwestern Bell Telephone, General Mills, Goodyear, Supervalue Stores, Campbell Soup, American Motors, Continental Oil, Brazilian Light and Power, and others.

These are the statistics but what does Honeywell do? One product (the anti-personnel fragmentation bombs) is called the Cluster Bomb Unit (CBU). This unique bomb contains 640 bomblets inside the 'mother CBU'. The baseball size bomblets or "quavas" are lead shells impregnated with 250 steel pellets. The quavas explode shooting pellets in every direction killing anything living in the vicinity. The CBU spreads the quavas out over the length of ten football fields. This bomb is responsible for a major part of the 200,000 civilian casualties annually in Vietnam. The anti-personnel fragmentation bomb is a weapon of genocide which was not only designed to kill and maim but to psychologically destroy the will of the Vietnamese people.

This University is part of this ever expanding war machine. It provides the research and technicians needed for the Military-Industrial Complex. The Honeywell recruiter is here Thursday March 5th. Does this "HUMANISTIC UNIVERSITY" support GENOCIDE??

Concept of the Individual

With the disruptions of last Tuesday still a major topic of controversy, it seems that there is one issue that has come up which has not been given sufficient thought. I am referring to the concept of the human being as an individual which played a major role in this development. Before we can even try to convince a person that the views we hold are important, we must be ready to accept him as an individual, with his own views, feelings, and values. If you deny these concepts in dealing with people, they simply will not listen to you.

22This is precisely what happened at the Cage Tuesday night. For an example, I'll point to the remarks of the faculty member involved. Recall that he constantly referred to "The System", which he blamed for all the evils in the world, and he attacked Humphrey as being a part of the "System". His strategy was obvious: if you dehumanize a person sufficiently by labeling and categorizing him, you give yourself the "right" to ignore his humanity and individuality. Throughout history some people have always tried to obtain this "right", and it has resulted in wars, lynchings, and all forms of hatred. It is easy for us to seek a scapegoat and blame these things on the "System", but it is more difficult to face the fact that the cause is in our ignorance of each other. Let's try to appreciate each other! It's the only way in which the problem can be solved.

It seems that every Far Left movement is balanced by enough action from the other side to assure that the overall effect will be neutral. You can't get a person to understand you by calling him names. You can't convince a person by shouting obscenities at him. And no movement gets anywhere if its members have a specialty in getting people to hate themselves. Even if you are convinced that other people hate and dehumanize you, it will be to your disadvantage to double these injustices. If you look at every person as an individual, you will be part of the solution.

The reason I say this is simple: there is no other way. A 5% minority which is disliked by the majority will not convince them that it holds the solution. Only a person who can relate to other people can improve anything. You have nothing to lose; why not try it?

EDWARD J. BUTTERWORTH

The Right to Vote

What the paranois about the police and the drug situation and almost everything else boils down to is we still haven't got the right to vote at 18. This right will not readily solve all our problems, but it will help to get marijuana legalized, and weaken and turn the tables on other straight injustices. The country as it now exists is no place for healthy-minded people. In short, man...get those old fogies out of the spotlight...why should they set themselves up as shining examples and be the collective official mouthpiece until they kick off?

The school system, as my experience recalls in grammar school, was a jail. Something that offended the taste buds of life and learning. Something the kid was told was good for him by his providers... even though after he swallowed their food his stomach began to grumble. This is a cross section of this system of phony justice.

Today the grammar schools have, in many instances, taken the initiative by taking the oracular older teachers "hands-off" the new energy that is being born. The reward to an aging fellow is: leisure. Yes, nothing personal, but old teachers can't teach new horses old tricks...and get away with it like they used to. The same should go for the politicians and the other men and women who set the atmosphere for our freedom. Once we have gotten the right to vote at 18, w e can really begin to live and clean up the post-depression mess while we're doing it. Until we have a meaningful statistical say in how the bricks are to be stacked we might as well go home. Be ready to draw...and they might even pose.

To The Editor:

Somehow I would have preferred it if people said "I don't like H.H. Humphrey BECAUSE..." Instead of "I don't like him BUT...(he had the right....) The former would seem to be about more important issues. Yet the disruption made the latter seem more crucial. Let's think about tactics...

Demand for Information

To the Editor:

In reference to the recent black-white flare-up at Mills House, I would like some questions answered and some information released by university officials. I may be accused of a number of things because of this letter but I think otherwise. Why does this University look like a stalled car at an intersection, not knowing which way to turn everytime there is racial tension on campus? Must the student body go on hearing different versions of one story, with the end result campus bewilderment and confusion?

I speak to you not as a white to a black or a student to a dean but, rather, as a person to a person. A frustrated person at that, baffled by administrative red-tape which seems to serve as an obstruction to the truth, or at least part of the truth. Does the truth frighten the administration? Why does a black-white confrontation dissuade university officials from printing accounts of events as they happened, rather than a manufactured piece of merchandise that has been perfected for official inspection?

Equality is a virtuous word. It once had one meaning, but today it appears to mean a variety of things. One could almost say that, today, equality connotates a form of superiority, on one or more levels. Does a person achieve equality with another by breaking a law, in order to secure an advantage over his adversary and, then, being allowed to go unpunished? True laws are made to be broken but disobedience requires punishment. Is not an injustice done when due punishment is refrained from because of anxiety and apprehension of backlash?

Historically, it is true that for hundreds of years the Negro was oppressed and ill-treated. He was, in a sense, looked upon as a subhuman. Today there is a move to treat him with equality, as a human being should be treated. But does the answer to this attempt at restoring the Negro to his proper place lie in his being dealt with on a superhuman basis, with more rights than others? Is this equality? Is this justice?

I feel that, as a student of this institution who could be involved, I have the right to demand factual statements concerning the recent black-white confrontation. I live here, pay to go here and don't want to die here. Its about time the administration faced reality and permit the facts to be released - the undistorted, unexaggerated, unprejudiced truth.

When a country that possesses many factions allows one to overstep their proper place, then we are headed in the wrong direction. What kind of future lies in store for this great nation, or for that matter, this great institution, if a minority can regulate and direct a majority by acts of violence and demands for better this and better that? After all, violence breeds destruction and destruction breeds waste.

What Are the Footsteps

To The Editor:

Don Glickstein's editorial of March 2 provides a good starting point for some observations on the Mills incident. He contends that we should "follow in the footsteps of Dean Field" so that this campus can be kept a campus of "peace" (?)

Just what are the footsteps of Dean Field, and what kind of a peace is he talking about? Sometimes I wonder if Dean Field walks around in the shoes that Neville Chamberlain wore at Munich in 1938. Events prior to the Mills incident lead me to that conclusion. Seriously, though, before we start trying to blame Mr. Field for the whole affair, let's look at ourselves. How many times have we merely bitched and moaned about people getting away with murder, and not brought any really effective pressure to bear upon the law enforcement agencies, i.e. Dean Field and Co.

This incident (I refer to the takeover, and NOT the fight) can provide an opportunity to start. If militants are allowed to take over a building by force of arms, and no action be taken against them, then we are in a sorry state of affairs.

Dean Field and others seem to be terrified by the so-called white backlash. But statements are cheap, and judicial action is needed. If the authorities abdicate their lawful responsibilities, then the backlash is directly invited.

The Weimar Government in Germany could not control internal disorder, the Germans got Hitler. Of course, nobody read Mein Kampf, or took it seriously. He did a good con job on Chamberlain and all the Chamberlains of the world during the 30's. At any rate, TODAY GERMANY, TOMORROW THE WORLD.

No Advantage to Commons

To the editor:

Apparently the Director of University Food Services and the Business Manager of the University did not understand my plea Monday night at the Open Meeting in Southwest, because if they had, someone should have answered my question. So here it is again folks, in print:

If University Food Services is so worried about feeding so many thousands of people next year, why don't they let the people who WANT to buy meal tickets buy them, and let the others eat where and when they want? This way, they would be able to accommodate the students, and at the same time, save people who eat at places other than at their dining commons $7 to $10 a week.

Why do I have to buy a meal ticket when I eat breakfast, lunch, and three out of five dinners a week at the Hatch? I don't always have time to run back to Southwest from the Union to eat and then to run back to the Union if my schedule is that tight. Do the dining commons need my money that desperately? Isn't it bad enough that the rent is being increased? Do they have to take away my food money too? What about you other students who are in the same position? Let's hear some protest. Don't just sit there and do nothing! Don't let the dining commons take advantage of you!

Reasons for the Refusal

To The Editor:

In reply to the letter entitled "WMUA Refuses to Run", I feel an explanation and clarification of the reasons for the "refusal" to air the Hubert H. Humphrey tape is necessary. Implicit also in the letter is the belief that WMUA is not serving and has not served the University community effectively.

The so-called "Music Power Radio" label leaves me with a terrible taste in my mouth, and if our critics expect adherence to tenets which have for too long blemished the image of WMUA, they may be assured that for as long as the current officers are handling station policy, their dreams of unending tunes for the teeming masses will go unfulfilled. Our news and sports coverage has never been better. We have set up programming slots for specific campus issues to be dealt with and examined more closely by the students, hoping that a balanced presentation of the issues may better lead to rational thinking by all involved.

To return to the point at hand, the Humphrey tape was not aired the same night as was "pledged" because the safety and well-being of the station was in jeopardy. We had received several telephone calls of a threatening nature, and it was deemed that the proverbial discretion might be the better part of valor. Three policemen maintained order throughout the night at WMUA. The next evening, the tape WAS aired, unedited and unabridged, when it was deemed safe to do so. And "in the battle for mens' radios" we really do not care if WXXX wins out, as long as student concerns receive the treatment and consideration which WMUA feels they deserve.

In Appreciation

To the editor:

I should like to express my appreciation to the following organizations and people for their enthusiastic support in allowing me to bring one hundred junior high school students to the University of Massachusetts last Saturday. The intention of this trip was to expose one hundred boys from the inner-city area of Holyoke to the fact that college is a desirable goal worth working for.

This intention was accomplished because nine outstanding fraternities: Beta Kappa Phi, Delta Chi, Sigma Alaph Mu, Alpha Tau Gamma, Zeta Nu, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Phi Sigma Delta, and Theta Chi at an I.F.C. meeting conducted by I.F.C. president, George Child, agreed not only to sponsor these boys to a two dollar ticket to the UMass-UMaine basketball game, but also to treat them to lunch at their respective fraternity houses and to cooperate with their group coordinators in arranging and supervising a variety of worthwhile activities.

Ten responsible UMass students: Lenny Lamberti, Doug Walker, Tony Abate, Tim Chase, Ed Carney, Jim Mendes, Jack Clinch, Rich Milliken, George Gonzalez, under the spirited direction of Mark McNeil took charge of a group of ten boys and presented them to the brothers of the above mentioned fraternities. The frat brothers then befriended the boys and established an excellent rapport with them when, after lunch, they challenged some to a basketball game while allowing others to go swimming.

Freshman football coach, Dave Kelley, also established a good relationship with the boys when he introduced films of last year's football highlights with an encouraging talk on what it takes to be a good athlete and a good student.

Perhaps the greatest relationships the boys established, however, were with the attractive waitresses at the campus Newman Center where they were served a spagbetti supper. Two officers in the Newman Club, Barney Konowski and Cathy Cehakowski with about fifteen other conscientious workers put on a delicious dinner. The staggering cost of this dinner for well over a hundred was defrayed by generous donations from the managers of every local food store, the Amherst Creamery, and A. J. Hastings.

The Holyoke Chamber of Commerce was not to be outdone by the generosity of the Amherst merchants. To allow money desperately needed for bus transportation, a donation of one hundred dollars was given by the retail division of the Chamber and by the New England Tel. and Tel., a member company of the Holyoke Chamber of Commerce.

The fraternities, the Newman Club, the local Amherst merchants, the Holyoke Chamber of Commerce are the organizations to be thanked and recognized for their enthusiastic support and unstinting generosity. The following are people who deserve credit for their individual support and generosity. I want to thank Mr. Al Rufe, and Mr. George Rogers for their invaluable and timely advice. Also, Mr. Justin Cobb for allowing the facilities of the Curry Hicks Pool and the Boyden Gymnasium to be available. And to Mr. Jim Mulcahy and to Mr. Greg Landry and the varsity basketball players who made themselves available for signing autographs. I would also like to thank Miss Jean Mele, Miss Mary Ann Ricker, and Miss Dolorous Valle and other members of the Spanish Club who made themselves and their homes available to the Spanish students in the group. And I should like to thank Hank Smith and Phillip Watson who acted as group liaisons. I especially want to thank Mark McNeil who acted as chief coordinator, and two remarkable fraternity officers, George Child and Al Janoff whose capable leadership and planning made Saturday, February 28, 1970, an unforgettable and meaningful day for one hundred boys in allowing them to experience the friendship of UMass students.

War Profits for Honeywell

To the Editor:

Honeywell, the other computer company, is coming to this campus March 5. They are coming after you. They want you to work for them. Would you like to work for them?

Have you ever seen (or even heard of) what the "other computer company makes besides computers? I have. I was just discharged from the service of their best customer, the Department of Defense. While with the department I was forced to serve in Viet Nam for a year. I am glad now, that they did that. I see everything in a lot better focus now.

Just a couple of their profit-filled products manufactured specifically for the DoD by Honeywell are the cluster bomb and the bee hive. The cluster bomb is a hollow round filled with jagged plastic chips. Upon impact the round explodes sending thousands of these chips deep into the flesh of anyone (men, women, or kids) who happens to be within the range of the shell. Because of the shape and size of the pieces, they bounce off bones and really do a job. If they can be found, they are almost impossible to remove. The bee hive works on the same principle except that it shoots out tiny hooks that imbed themselves in flesh and infect the person to death. These are just two products of Honeywell that the government has contracts for and that are used in Viet Nam. Both weapons violate the Geneva Accords.

I wouldn't want to work for Honeywell. I worked for the Government. I know what it's like. The difference is that Honeywell always makes a profit off of war. I don't even want them on this campus. How could you?

Magazine Editor Asserts Writing is Communication

"Good writing and successful writing are not necessarily the same," asserted Mrs. Martha Wheeler Heilmann of Belchertown, last editor of the New England Homestead magazine and successful writer and newspaper correspondent.

Mrs. Heilmann delivered a presentation on article writing to 17 students enrolled in English 337, a writing course offered at UMass.

All writing, Mrs. Heilmann stressed, is communication. It is wasted effort to write if one lacks the ability to communicate.

Mrs. Heilmann noted the desire to write precluded four essential requirements. The writer must first be willing to familiarize himself with all forms of literature in order to derive knowledge of what people desire to read. Next he must maintain a collection of materials from which to derive new ideas. Thirdly, the writer must know his audience. What he writes will be determined for whom he writes. A basic knowledge of introductory psychology is essential to understand, "what makes people tick."

Lastly, the writer must know his language, "backwards, forwards, and sideways." He must know when to utilize the five-lettered or four-lettered word, when to employ the long or short sentence, and when to be blunt and when to be cruel - in essence, he must be aware of subtle differences in the English language.

When you write, Mrs. Heilmann said, "Have approximately four times the amount of material on hand than you think you'll need." Never attempt an article without a backlog of materials, she continued, for the more materials one possesses, the better the article will be.

During one point in discussion, she emphasized that, "The manuscript is your foot into the door." A manuscript which is fresh and maintains a professional appearance will receive the most attention. The assumption is you're a writer; the hope is there, you may be a writer.

She also implied there was no instant journalism. "It is not the rule, but rather the exception, to publish an article by chance alone."

Foreign Students Discuss Americans and U.S. in JQA

Wednesday night at 8:00 in John Quincy Adams Upper (19th floor lounge) there will be an unusual presentation. About eight foreign students from various countries, including Greece, Iran, Brazil, Cameroon, and Nigeria (Biafra), will participate in a panel discussion of foreign student views on Americans and the United States. Following the major panel, they will lead smaller discussion groups with the Americans present. Coffee and refreshments will be served.

This program will be the second in a series which will be offered in a number of the residence halls. The purpose is to bring American and foreign students on this campus into closer contact and association.

There are about six hundred foreign students on this campus representing approximately fifty countries. Many are very interested in sharing their knowledge and experiences with other students. The program in the residence halls will be planned to facilitate this contact.

Residence hall groups interested in planning programs involving foreign students may contact the Office of International Programs for assistance. This Office is located in Whitmore - room 229. Or telephone at 545-2710, preferably in the morning and ask for Mrs. Ann Silva.

Smith College Joins Recent Rush In Considera tion of Co-Education

A report on coeducation expected to be a "useful point of departure for discussion by the Smith College community" has been released by the college.

The 60-page report explores the desirability and feasibility of coeducation at Smith, since 1875 a college for women. Smith's President Thomas C. Mendenhall noted in a cover letter to faculty, students, trustees and alumnae that "to review the alternative of coeducation has in recent years become a necessity for every separate college for men or women. Not only has the long term trend in the United States been toward education . . . but also the last two years have witnessed a rush by separate colleges, particularly colleges for men, into the coeducational camp."

The report concludes that "on balance, coeducation is desirable and, if the necessary capital funds can be raised, that it is feasible." Included in the reports are the results of surveys of Smith undergraduates, faculty, and alumnae on aspects of coeducation for the college. Smith Professor of Sociology Ely Chinoy undertook the study at the request of Smith's College Planning Committee.

President Mendenhall describes Chinoy's study in his cover letter as "one man's analysis of the desirability and feasibility of coeducation at Smith." He also defines what coeducation would be for the college: "Not simply the admission of men to classes. Part-time or temporary male visitors are studying here now in increasing numbers. Rather, coeducation at Smith would mean male candidates for the undergraduate degree in such numbers that they represent a visible, sizeable portion of the student body."

Mendenhall also notes that the increasing cooperation in many areas with neighboring Amherst, Hampshire and Mount Holyoke College and the University of Massachusetts would play a role in the eventual decision of Smith on the question of coeducation. "The growing cooperation among them," he said, "and their increasing dependence on each other mean that any major decision must be faced as a common problem."

The report considers the impact on recruitment of faculty and a student body of high quality if Smith remains a college for women. Professor Chinoy's surveys found a majority of the faculty favoring coeducation for the college. The report indicates "some difficulty" in recruiting and holding a superior faculty would be felt.

The maintaining of the quality of Smith's student body was seen as less certain. "The new competition for students from Yale, Princeton and other erstwhile men's colleges, and what seems to be a growing desire among potential applicants, will in all likelihood make it increasingly difficult for Smith to recruit the students it wants," says the report's author.

Professor Chinoy sees coeducation at Smith in terms of a larger college - an increase of from 350 to 700 students above Smith's present 2350. He believes that Smith need not "achieve equal numbers of men and women without having to diminish substantially the number of female undergraduates." Increasing enrollment in classes by men in the neighboring institutions and male II-College Exchange students are seen as contributing to a reasonable male to female ratio.

The cost of conversion to coeducation is seen as an obstacle, however. In part, an increase in enrollment would contribute to the cost - through more tuition revenues. Among financial needs would be more residence space, increased faculty and administration, and more physical education facilities.

For a proposed 30 per cent increase of 700 students, the cost is estimated at $9.6 million. The college now has a development campaign in progress, aimed at gaining $45 million by 1975. Conversion to coeducation would not be funded by the capital gained.

Mortar Board Tours Mass. High Schools Discuss Campus Life

Mortar Board, the senior women's honor society, has been busy traveling during February. After working with Assistant Director of Admissions Beals, Mortar Board member Judy Gravel helped to coordinate a tour of some Massachusetts high schools, such as Wellesley, Brookline, Natick, and Watchusett Regional.

Various groups of four Mortar Boards visited two schools a day, presenting a slide show and discussing the advantages and disadvantages of life on a large university campus, with UMass as an example. The project turned out successfully; most of the juniors and seniors attending these presentations seemed interested in the details of academic and general campus life.

"West Side Story" Opens in Bartlett

By LESLIE OLSEN and PAT LEMPART
Staff Reporters

As the house lights dim, the orchestra strikes up the overture. A Jet appears, whistling. And the story of young love begins to unfold on the stage of Bartlett Theatre.

University of Massachusetts Theatre began the run of "West Side Story" with an open final dress rehearsal last night. The show, which will play through Sunday, March 8, is one of the most ambitious projects UMass Theatre has undertaken in recent years.

Marya Bednerick, who is directing the play, took time out recently to discuss the production. She explained that she felt a musical would be a good way to get all the area of art - the music department, University Theatre, and the dance department working together, "instead of against each other".

"The actors," she said, "need to learn the various movements of dance; the dancers should know how to act, and both should learn how to sing."

"It's great," she adds, "to see the satisfaction the kids get in doing things they previously thought they couldn't. It's hard work, but we're all working together. In fact, that is one of the most interesting things about this play. Everyone involved in it had the same conception of it. We all agreed that it was a story about two kids caught up in a hostile world they didn't create."

The cruelty of that world has been emphasized by using hard materials in the set - wood, iron and steel. "Maria's and Tony's world," she says, "is just the opposite. It is the world of the bridal shop and the dream ballet."

"What we want is to get the audience emotionally involved with the characters on stage. "West Side Story" is about ten years old. It does have some social comments to make, but basically it is a musical meant to entertain. If we can get the audience laughing or crying along with the characters on stage, then we have done that."

The sets and lighting, which add a great deal of impact to the play, were designed by Henry Merrill, who is presently working toward a Masters of Fine Arts degree. His designs for this production are a part of his thesis. Since intersession, when the show went into rehearsal, Henry has been constantly reworking the design, adding light changes, getting the technical aspects of the show coordinated with the choreography and acting.

Choreography was done by Janet Croft of the dance department, and the orchestra is under the direction of Larry Weed. These two people have been working in close conjunction with Marya and Henry to get the total effect of the play just right.

This production has involved a lot of work for all involved, especially the actors and dancers. Many hours of rehearsal preceded tonight's opening. With such a large cast, getting everyone in the right places at the right time, and avoiding traffic problems is no small task. Everyone in the show has learned a great deal about teamwork.

Tony and Maria, the principle characters, are played by Jay McAuliff, a junior, and Carol Roth, a freshman. Jay has appeared in many Operetta Guild and UMass Theatre productions, including "Summertree". Carol may be remembered for her role in Operetta Guild's "Guys and Dolls" which was produced here last semester.

Also in prominent roles are Karen Connoly as Anita, Steve Schnetzer as Bernardo, Miller Hurley as Chino, and Brian Mc Cleod in the part of Riff.

When the Jets and the Sharks rumble, there's lots of action, and when Tony and Maria are together, there's lots of love.

"West Side Story" opens tonight in Bartlett Auditorium, and will run through Sunday. All performances have been sold out, but some cancellation tickets may be available at the box office prior to each performance.

Pompidou "Au Revoir" Marks End of Visit

NEW YORK (AP) - His anger over pro-Israeli demonstrations appeased by the apologies of President Nixon, French President Georges Pompidou flew home Tuesday with a smiling "Au Revoir" for the American people.
His French Air Force plane underwent a thorough search because of a phony telephoned bomb threat. Then it took off from Kennedy airport shortly after noon, ending a controversial and sometimes stormy eight day visit here of Pompidou and his wife.
Behind him Pompidou left a group of 5 leaders of Jewish organizations, who said they were dismayed over the French president's abrupt cancelation of a scheduled Monday meeting with them. They were among protesters against France sale of Mirage jet fighters to Arab Libya.
The vehimence of pro-Israeli sentiment came to a climax in Chicago over the weekend, when demonstrators jostled the French president. Pompidou criticized Chicago police for letting the protesters get close enough to insult him and his wife.
For a time, Pompidou's anger appeared to threaten a diplomatic crisis, with the French president reportedly thinking of cutting short his visit. However, President Nixon moved quickly to salve wounded feelings.

National Guard Put On Standby at UIll.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) - Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie ordered 750 Illinois National Guardsmen on standby duty Tuesday after trustees of the University of Illinois banned a speech by William M. Kunstler, a lawyer for the Chicago Seven.
A spokesman for the Concerned Lawyers and Law Students, sponsors of the speech, said that Kunstler's appearance has been postponed until next week.
Steven Danz, the spokesman, said the group decided to call off the controversial lawyer 's appearance because of the tension caused by the trustees action in ruling Kunstler could not speak on campus.
Danz said he talked by telephone with Kunstler Tuesday and the lawyer said he wouldn't appear at an off campus site.
Danz also said the group would go ahead with plans to ask U.S. District Court for a temporary restraining order against the trustees action.
Gov. Richard Ogilvie said the University of Illinois requested the guard be placed on standby.
"Local officials want to have assistance at hand in case any one is foolish enough to cry fire in a crowded theater," the governor said. "Protests, yes. Violence, no. Dissent can be useful and creative but violence is destructive of every legitimate goal."
"We will not tolerate it," he said.
Several hundred university students held a rally on campus Tuesday to protest the trustees' ban. No disorders were reported.
The trustees voted 6 to 3 on Monday to put off Kunstler's talk.

House-Senate Committee Proposes Ban on Cigarette Advertisements

WASHINGTON (AP) - A joint House Senate conference committee Tuesday approved a bill that would bar cigarette advertising from radio and television as of Jan. 1, 1971.
The bill now goes back to the House and Senate for almost certain approval.
By next year, cigarette advertising will move into the history books of television, delcared Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee.

Doctors Encouraged Despite LBJ's Heart

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Army doctors said Tuesday they are quite encouraged with former President Lyndon B. Johnson's progress despite irregular heartbeats and lingering chest pains.
"Our major concern is to try to prevent a heart attack in the ordinary sense of the word," a physician at the Army's Brooke General Hospital said.
Lt. Col. Robert North said Johnson's chest pains and the irregular rhythm of his heart beats could be premonitory warnings of a heart attack.

Girl Gymnasts Win Twice Lose Once In Three Tries

Competing in New Jersey and Maryland this weekend, the Girls Gymnastics team came home with two victories and one defeat. The defeat was totally unexpected and comes as a serious challenge to the girls, until now secure in the position as the second big gymnastics power in the East.

Friday afternoon, UMass competed against Trenton State College. Despite the unusually low scoring by New Jersey judges, there was hardly any serious threat and the UMass girls ended up with a lopsided victory of 80.88 points to Trenton State's 53.16.

Marina Rodriquez had her best day, winning the floor exercise event with 8.16, vaulting with 8.16, and coming in second on beam despite two falls.

Ruth Morse won the beam scoring 7.3. Laurel Milch came in second in floor exercise, earning 7.33. Barbara Holt was second in vaulting and won the parallel bars, scoring 7.33 and 6.70 respectively.

Saturday afternoon, the UMass girls traveled to Baltimore to take on Towson State College and West Chester State College. All teams turned out to be quite equal in skill and the meet turned out to be one of the most exciting the area had ever seen.

After the floor exercise event, West Chester was ahead with 23.25, UMass second, scoring 23.20, and Towson third, posting 22.25. UMass had trouble in vaulting and Towson did exceptionally well. After the first two events, the positions of schools had changed. Towson took the lead, posting 45.95, UMass second with 45.90, and West Chester trailing with 44.20.

On the balance beam, Holt and Linda Seikunas took bad breaks. At the end of the three events the scores drifted a little more apart. Towson was still leading with 69.10, UMass second with 68.80, and West Chester third with 65.40.

On the uneven bar, falls and bad breaks seemed to plague the UMass girls again. Rodriguez took two bad breaks, Lynne Lamarche fell off once and Holt missed an important part. After the chalk had settled, the final scores were: Towson, 91.50, UMass 90.60, West Chester, 88.10.

Among individual honors, Rodriguez and Seikunas tied for second in floor exercise, scoring 7.80. Seikunas was also second in vaulting while Rodriguez won balance beam. Holt came second on uneven bars with 8.00.

The next meet for the girls' team will be at home on Saturday, March 7th at 1:00 p.m. The opponents are the girls from Pennsylvania State.

Women Skiers Second In Two Weekend Races

Although plagued with falls, the UMass Women's Ski Team took two second places at Intervals this past weekend in races against eight other colleges. Saturday the race course was very icy, but the girls hung on to bring the team into a second place behind Radcliffe.

Sue Arnold, captain of the team, led by finishing fifth with a time of 88.2 against a winning time of 78.2 by Sally Poor of Boston University. Arnold had a little trouble on her first run through the 33 gate course when she caught a tip on the last gate, but made up some of the lost time with a good second run. After posting the fastest run of the day on her first run, Judy Fuller found herself in trouble second run and in tenth place after having to hike back for a missed gate. Kitty Schonfield, a freshman this year, having two consistent runs helped the team Saturday when she placed 13th., but Sunday she ran into difficulty on her second run after a strong first run.

Sunday, with the sun shining and the snow a little softer, the women faced another 2 run slalom through a faster 32 gate course. Fuller, as on Saturday, posted one of the fastest first run times but couldn't seem to cut her speed down enough to make the 3 gate flush on the steep pitch. Captain Arnold, repeated Saturday's performance when she found herself in trouble the first run. But with a strong second run, she was able to pick up enough speed to take a 4th and hold the team's second place standing in the WISC Conference.

Helping the team capture second place behind Radcliffe on Sunday was a new sophomore member Bona Fiske and a freshman skier, Betsy Booher who both held two consistent runs placing 14th and 15th respectively.

The women's first race of the season was a one run giant slalom held February 8th at Roundtop in Vermont. Arnold who has followed her first performance rather consistently, took a second place over all with a time of 64.2 behind a winning time of 63.8 set by Radcliffe. The new sophomore member Fiske finished the 22 gate giant slalom in tenth place with a 76.2 while UMass' senior member, Fuller, after losing a ski finished 20th. Booher and Schonfield, the team's freshmen, got the feel of their first fast giant slalom by taking 21st place and 26th out of a field of 40 racers. UMass' B team racer, Patt Francis, had a tough time on the rutted course finishing 35th.

Next weekend the women's team will be traveling to Mittersill, N.H. for a two run giant slalom on Saturday. Then Sunday they will take a day off to go up to Wildcat, N.H. to where the men's team will be trying for their conference title after winning their league title Saturday.

NIT Still Just A Hope for Redmen

By JOHN SULLIVAN and BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Sports Editor and Staff Reporter

"NIT, NIT, NIT!", the favorite chant among Redman basketball fans these days, remains just that, a chant, as coach Jack Leaman and his team have yet to receive any notice of acceptance from the committee representing the National Invitational Tournament.

To date ten bids have been sent out to the following schools: Marquette, Louisiana State, St. John's, Georgia Tech, Army, Duquesne, Manhattan, Utah, Georgetown and Miami of Ohio.

Six invitations are still withholding. Reliable sources confirm that, of the remaining six bids, two will go to teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference and two more to teams representing the Missouri Valley Conference.

Obviously, two spaces remain open and all indications are that they are a toss-up among three squads, UMass, Texas Tech and Creighton.

Texas Tech, as far as can be told, is the owner of a 12-9 record with no report on two games it played last week, against Rice and Southern Methodist. Earlier in the year Texas Tech lost to Rice, 86-85, and was swamped by SMU 90-60. It had a key tilt last night versus Baylor. Baylor has a 14-9 mark and has beaten TT once this season, 47-46.

Creighton University, located in Omaha, Neb., is 15-9 on the year and plays a big home contest against 13th ranked Houston tonight. Houston holds at least a 22-2 mark, information withholding on two affairs the Cougars were in last week, but edged Creighton by only one, 78-77, at home a few weeks back.

The six staffers of "Basketball Weekly", in their "Big Games of the Week" section, are split three-three in their predictions of the Texas Tech-Baylor contest but, as regards the Creighton-Houston affair, they are five-one in favor of Creighton by slim margins of between one and five points.

These games could prove relevant to the Redman cause. If TT lost last night UMass might be selected today. If it won, the committee might wait out the Creighton game. If the latter is victorious, it might get one spot on Thursday for sure with the other a scrambie between UMass and Texas Tech. Notice all the if's and might's. More could be used but such a continued procedure would be ridiculous.

It must be kept in mind that both TT and Creighton have nine losses and are on the verge of ten. To take any team with ten losses ahead of the 18-6 Redmen would be absurd. But, a lot of politics is involved in this sort of thing and politics has been known to have performed stranger things before.

An article yesterday morning in the most widely-read off-campus newspaper, the Boston Globe, by Frank Rosa, depicted the Redmen's situation as the number one New England team (It's been a long time coming!) Rosa praised U-Mass and its fans and gave some insights on the NIT.

He interviewed Andy Laska, Athletic Director of Assumption and member of the NIT selection committee, concerning those last two spots. Laska's comment was that "UMass, Texas Tech and Creighton are three teams under strong consideration."

Julius Erving's feature article in Sporting News, written by Globe writer Bob Monahan, was excellenly done and might serve, in some small way, as an impetus for closer consideration by the NIT lords.

The title of that article is "Julie the Jumping-Jack Lifts UMass to Elite Cage Class" and might be the first time a national sports publication has ever referred to the Redmen in their more familiar tag of "UMass" instead of the more conventional, but less catchy "Massachusetts" phrase.

A final note concerns Redman fans. If those in New York think that UMass will not attract much of a following, it is the belief here that Redman fans in access of 4,000 will make the trip to Fun City for UMass' Madison Square Garden debut. Can Texas Tech and Creighton make the same claim?

REDMEN RANTINGS -- Besides the outcome of the game, the highlight of Monday night's UNH trip had to be the bus ride home. Accompanying the team back on the bus were about 30 UMies whose bus broke down in Durham. This fact, along with the swinging sounds of Ken Mathias' tape recorder and the usual virtuoso singing performance of golden-throated John Betancourt, created a party-like atmosphere which considerable shortened the three-hour journey. . .Also, the greeting provided by 150 loyal Redman fans upon the team's arrival back on campus sometime after midnight not only gave the team a big lift but also showed the spirit which the UMass fans have showed all season long making them , too, "No. 1" in New England. . .In the game itself, Erving broke the school record for free throws attempted and made in one game with his 19 for 23 performance. . .

And yes, that's an E in Erving, not an I, as a Boston columnist seemed to believe in a recent story about UMass. But at this stage of the game, the Redmen will take any publicity they can get from Beantown. But please, from now on its Ray Ellerbrook, not Roy. . .In other news, Erving was once again named to the ECAC team of the week. . .In hockey, John Hartnett was picked for the ECAC Division II team. . .This afternoon at noon, the Varsity 'M' Club holds its weekly luncheon. Featured speaker this week will be Coach Leaman; his staff and several ball players will be present. The luncheon, which costs one dollar, is open to all UMass students.

UCLA Returns As No. 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It's nice to be on top of the college basketball ratings, but Coach John Wooden of UCLA isn't sure what effect it will have on his team in the forthcoming NCAA Tournament.

"I don't think you can really determine that as a general rule" Wooden said Tuesday after learning that his 23-1 Bruins were back on top in The Associated Press poll after yielding for a week to Kentucky following their only loss of the season.

For some, being No. 1 would give them pride and inspire them. Others might get too complacent. And being No. 2 would give some players added incentive and worry othes.

"I've tried to get across to my boys that they're as good as any team and better than most and that rankings in some cases aren't valid, since some of those who vote haven't seen us play and have no concrete basis for their decision."

"Being No. 1 or No. 2 isn't that important to us now. Just winning the tournament is incentive enough."

UCLA starts defense of its national championship March 12, against the winner of Saturday's Weber State-Long Beach State first round game. The Bruins will be shooting for their fourth consecutive NCAA crown.

And Wooden knows that even if UCLA winds up No. 1 in next week's final poll of the season, it will be a hollow victory if an NCAA title doesn't follow.

UCLA sneaked back into first place by 10 points over Kentucky, 596-586, although the Wildcats had 4 first place votes to 3 for the Bruins. Kentucky raised its record to 24-1 Monday night with a 102-80 rout of Auburn.

Skiers Increase Conference Lead Over Weekend

By capturing a second and a first place finish over the weekend at Wildcat Ski Area in New Hampshire, the Redman ski team increased its Conference lead. The team now carries a substantial point lead into the final Conference race on the upcoming weekend.

The Redmen, eager to get back on the winning track, were too high strung in Saturday's slalom and grabbed a second-place finish behind Northeastern University.

The most powerful ski team ever to represent UMass.

Co-captain Jim Garstang once again slammed home two blistering runs on the treacherous, icy course to increase his chances of being named the league's top skier.

Gerry Curran, on a hot streak, had a pair of excellent runs to place ninth in the league. Jon Gray, having a good day, placed eighth in the league and Chuck Walker, a veteran performer, rounded out the top four for UMass.

Co-captain Ted Martin and Jim Latimer experienced difficulties on the icy slalom course, but were to make up for it in Sunday's Giant Slalom.

On Sunday the Redmen came out completely psyched to get back on top after two setbacks, even though those losses were only second and fourth-place finishes.

Once again Garstang came on strong and won his fifth straight race on a very fast, long giant slalom course. Martin and Latimer, determined to improve their performances of Saturday, did just that. Co-captain Martin had two very fast runs to put him in fifth place in the league, and Latimer burned off two fast ones as did Curran, putting four UMass skiers in the top eleven.

J. J. Gerranii, skiing 'B' team, has suddenly developed the killer instinct and, although unable to put two consecutive good ones together, posted several excellent times over the weekend.

Steve Kurkoski, also skiing 'B' team, had a disastrous weekend. Having roubles on his first run on Saturday, he went for a good one on his second try and landed in a New Hampshire hospital with a severely sprained ankle. Kurkoski, certainly capable of a good performance, didn't see action on Saturday.

The last league race is on Saturday next in North Conway, N.H. The Redmen will most certainly be going for that win. On Sunday there will be a championship race among Conference division winners.

UMass' young talent - ladden team, under the watchful eye of coach Bill MacConnell, will be giving its all to bring the Conference and the championship trophies home to Boyden to cap off a season, whose records won't be broken until next year's team becomes a reality.

Coach MacConnell can't believe that he loses only one man to graduation and gains four fantastic freshmen.

Senate Endorses Black Studies; Puts Index Budget on Referendum

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate last night endorsed the black studies proposal after discussing the provision which makes certain courses required for black students.

The strongest argument for the provision appeared to be that the black community was unanimous in its support of the requirement. The faculty senate is scheduled to take up the proposal shortly.

On the subject of Mills House, the Senate unanimously passed the following : "Whereas, the needs of black people are and should be a concern of the Student Senate; and whereas a cultural center in its present form is needed by black people; and whereas there is a need for this type of cultural center to serve the purpose of promoting better relations between black and white students; and whereas the administration did promise Mills House to the black students last year, be it resolved, that the Student Senate go on record as supporting the black students' demands for Mills House; and be it further resolved that the Student Senate recommend this course to the administration."

In related action, the Senate supported a plan to move the remaining displaced Mills residents into the space now occupied by Mental Health Services in Brooks House. The Math Department has offered space in Arnold House for Mental Health. If this proposal is implemented, the last remaining group from Mills House will have been settled, Phi Lambda Phi having moved to TEP, and the Greenough group that had been moved to Mills when Greenough went co-ed having been resettled in Brett House.

The Senate also voted to put the Index budget request on a campus-wide referendum in the near future. If the referendum determined that a majority of students wished the yearbook to go on a subscription basis, the publication then would not receive an SATF budget next year.

In other action, the Senate voted to recommend to the Administration that students not be forced to pay federal excise tax on dormitory phone bills.

Reasoning that the tax was a "war tax" and that many students felt that they were being forced to support the war against their wishes by paying the tax, the Senate asked that students no longer have their phone service cut off if they refuse to pay the tax.

The demonstration today against recruitment by Honeywell has been the subject of an unusual amount of prior preparation within the student government and the administration.

The student government appears determined that the code which it passed last year, and implemented in the student judicial system by separate action, will be enforced. The newly-appointed Advocate General of the Student Government Association (equivalent to the Attorney General), Mr. John Shyavitz, has announced his intention to be present at the demonstration, and to initiate student judicial prosecution of any violators of the Student Senate picketing code (see box), which applies to both counter-demonstrators and demonstrators, forbidding obstruction of "what is intended during the normal course of university conduct" (e.g., recruitment), as well as "interference with demonstrating by other than duly constituted authorities" (e.g., private individuals trying to put an end to the demonstration). Penalties for infraction of the code include suspension from the University.

The administration for its part convened at 4 p.m. yesterday a meeting of the executive committees of the three Senates to discuss the University's response to the impending demonstration. Provisions were made for observers from among the three committees to be present at all times during the demonstration, both to provide advice regarding the letter of the code, and to observe events with a view to providing subsequent testimony regarding the course of events.

The demonstrators for their part seemed at a planning session last night to be tactically flexible in their approach, unwilling to subject by their actions their members to massive retaliation, but determined to confront the community with what they regard as Honeywell's and the University's criminal complicity in Vietnamese genocide. The only thing that appears to be certain about their tactics is that there is no plan to physically prevent the students from meeting the interviewer.

Ad. General Statement

As the person with "general responsibility for the judicial enforcement of regulation approved by the Senate", I or a person appointed by me shall seek action in the appropriate student judiciary against any undergraduate student who violates the picketing code as passed by the Student Senate.

The penalties that may be imposed upon conviction may include suspension from the University. Disciplinary action against graduate students or faculty members shall be dealt with in accordance with procedures established by their respective Senates.

Senate Picketing Code

The following is the text of the Student Senate picketing code, as amended last spring:

Part A: Rights and Limitations.

1. Individuals have a right to demonstrate outside University buildings and inside lobbies, reception areas, and principal corridors, but they are prohibited from either blocking free entry to or exit from buildings or rooms, interfering with free movement, or deliberately presenting visual or audible obstacles to what is intended during the course of normal University conduct. Interfering with free movement is defined as the conscious denial of a person's ability to reach a given geographical objective. Deliberately is defined as after being asked once by a duly constituted University authority, failing to desist. Obstacles are defined as physical devices, bodies, signs or sounds which prevent normal aural communication or physically interfere. No other consideration or definition shall be used in determining whether an act interferes with normal conduct. None of the aforementioned provisions shall affect the right of a student to wear a button or other similar accoutrement for the purpose of communicating ideas.

2. a. Interference with demonstrating by other than duly constituted authorities is prohibited. Duly constituted authorities may only interfere with those demonstrators who have violated section one above and not for reason of potential violation of section one.

b. There shall be no interference on grounds of content of speech unless this speech both advocates and directly leads to violent action.

c. Counter-demonstrators must observe the same standards as set forth above.

3. It should be recognized by all that the ultimate consequences of any violation of the standards as set forth above cannot be foreseen; the penalty for such violation may be separation from the University or such lesser sanctions as may be judged appropriate, with the determination of guilt and penalty to be by due process.

4. Duly constituted authorities shall be defined as the President of the University or his designated representatives. Faculty members or graduate students acting in a teaching capacity are duly constituted authorities within the physical bounds of their classrooms; however, they shall not have the authority to request police assistance directly.

Part B: Procedures to be followed by duly constituted authorities in the event of the infraction of rules governing demonstrations are as follows:

1. A verbal attempt will be made to persuade the demonstrators to desist from practices in violation of the rules.
2. If the demonstrators fail to respond so as to act in accordance with the rules, they shall be warned of the consequences and be given a reasonable period of time to desist.
3. After expiration of the reasonable period of time, the identification of those in violation will be requested by duly constituted University authorities. If those requested to give identification refuse to do so, such identification may be obtained by any means short of force. Such means shall include repeated demands, photographing, or any other procedure reasonably designed to elicit such information. Any photographs and negatives used for the identification of a student shall become the exclusive property of the appropriate campus judicial bodies, not to be distributed, and shall be destroyed upon final settlement of the case.
4. Only if persuasion and warning fail, the University police may be empowered by the duly constituted authorities to put an end to the infraction of the rules. If the University police are unable to cope successfully with the infractions, then the duly constituted authorities may request assistance from outside authorities, provided that appropriate representatives of the student body and faculty have been consulted. Police or other outside assistance may forcefully interact with demonstrators only in cases of actual violence, or when demonstrators make it virtually impossible to secure a given area within which demonstrations are not allowed under this code; the use of such outside assistance shall always be considered the last possible alternative.

Honeywell Protest Planned

The UMass Social Action Council and UMass SDS will stage a "non - violent, non - obstructive" demonstration against the presense of Honeywell Corporation recruiters on campus today.

The demonstrators will present two "non-negotiable" demands to the recruiters at 10:00 a.m. in Whitmore, which state (1) that all recruiting cease until the company representatives agree to engage in a debate over Honeywell's "war-related activities" with the University community, and (2) the recruiters accompany the demonstrators back to the Student Union Council Chambers for a 1:00 - 3:00 p.m. debate.

The demonstration, protest leaders say, will begin at 8:45 rally in the Student Union lobby, and will continue with leafleting in the Whitmore lobby from 9:00 - 10:00.

A spokesman for the demonstrators said last night that "if the compay refuses to meet either or both of our demands, we will engage in the same type of demonstration as we used against General Dynamics -- vocal protest and visible distractions in front of the interview office."

"We will not at any time physically block a meeting between the recruiters and the students," he added.

The demonstrators have pledged to tell Dean of Students William F. Field all of their plans tomorrow morning, "between 9:00 and 10:00, so that he will know what to expect throughout the day."

Mental Health Vacates Brooks After Stormy Meeting

by DAVID D. WILLIAMS
Staff Reporter

After a tense, sometimes bitter, meeting in Brooks House last night, the Mental Health Services agreed to vacate their offices on the second floor of Brooks, thus making a permanent home for the 21 displaced men of Mills House.

The Math Department has agreed to house Mental Health until June, but warned that an alternative must be found by June.

Dr. Julian Janowitz, head of Mental Health, accused the Brooks girls of not really caring what will happen to the quality of the care that Mental Health provides. He said, "Moving out of this house-type situation will greatly curtail services. In essence, moving out of here at this point will disrupt all the work we've done this semester."

According to Janowitz, the proximity of the Mental Health Center to the Infirmary is of vital importance to the quality of the service it provides.

Mr. Barry Averill, Assistant Director of the Student Health Services, added, "The issue really seems to be one of convenience. We are not talking about inconvenience. We're talking about our ability to meet your needs."

The question of convenience depends on who is asked. The men of Mills have been without a permanent home for almost a week, the girls of Brooks contend that the Mental Health office have disrupted the community they were trying to achieve in their dorm. So when Brooks offered the Mills men a home at Tuesday's night's Area Council meeting, they accepted.

However, the availability of this home would depend on the willingness of the Mental Health Services to move. Up until last night's meeting they had shown no desire to move. The meeting was an attempt to solve immediately the problem of where to put the Mills men.

John Dalpe, proctor of Mills, began the meeting with an impassioned plea for help; "I want people to feel it in their gut. I want them to feel the weight of having the responsibility of 21 people on their back like I have."

Janowitz was willing to admit that the Mills men were in a crucial situation. But he added, "I'm asking you to think, not just for yourself, but for everyone on this campus. I don't think this decision is the best one for the University at large."

He was referring to the decision of the Brooks residents to move Mental Health out and Mills in. Bill Gibson, president of the Central Area Council shouted at this point, "The guys in Mills are 10 minutes from getting rooms. All we have to do is go up and take over that place." Another student yelled "You're here to serve us, serve us."

Dean Field who had been walking around the room whispering to the other members of the Administration present, including Associate Provost Gluckstern, Bill Idol, Central Area Coordinator, and various members of the math department, said, "I'm trying to listen. I can't see how it isn't possible that there aren't 10 rooms for these guys." He added that he wanted to see the Mills problem settled instantly.

A possible solution was offered by Idol when he informed the meeting that there were 21 spaces available in Gorman House. This was roundly shouted down by the Mills men who shouted things like, "We've been invited, we want to stay" and "for the first time in a week we've had someone offer us a place to live."

When the possibility of having Mental Health move into Gorman was put to Janowitz, Idol quickly said that Gorman registered a "flat-out no" on that question.

The meeting seemed to be at an impasse until Janowitz and Averill agreed to go down to Arnold House to look at the space available there. When they came back, Janowitz simply said, "There are rooms and we can move. We will make every effort tobe there as soon as we can. I wish also some of you could be available to explain to the other students when services curtail.

Black Meeting Called

Black faculty member Michael Thelwell has called for an "urgent" meeting of the entire University black community tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom at 2:15 p.m. The text of his call for the meeting follows:

"A great deal of confusion and misinformation exists about the events of last Thursday evening and the designation of Mills House as a black cultural center.

"There are several crucial decisions facing us as a community.

"There is a great deal of information that must be shared if we are to make these decisions as a community.

"If you care about:
The Community
The Black Cultural Center
The continued presence of black people here
A just solution of problems come to the meeting and help make decisions that will affect all our lives here at the University.

"Later for classes; this is urgent."

O'Donnell Terms Next Decade "Most Crucial in U.S.. History"

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Kenneth P. O'Donnell last night told a group of about 30 students that the next decade will be the "most crucial in the history of the United States."

Speaking to a meeting of the Young Democrats in the Student Union Commonwealth Room the former Presidential Assistant to John F. Kennedy said that due largely to the Vietnam war, "We are faced with a change in direction, and the most trying and difficult moments in our history."

O'Donnell's opening remarks were of a background nature in which the Massachusetts Democrat told of his beginnings in politics and his first association with Senate hopeful, John Fitzgerald Kennedy back in 1951. He then traced the career of Kennedy up until the latter's assassination in 1963 and also presented a picture of the free world's and America's problems during those years. During the Kennedy years O'Donnell served as Special Assistant and Appointments Secretary and Executive Director of the National Democratic Committee.

According to Mr. O'Donnell, J.F.K. left a legacy which "brought to the youth of America an interest and enthusiasm to involve themselves in politics and government." He added that America's youth must continue to work in the system by speaking out and bringing pressure to bear on public officials.

Of Vietnam O'Donnell stated that "The great disaster of Vietnam is greater than what has happened in terms of lives lost and money spent. But rather there has been a loss of credibility in our leaders, confidence in our country, faith in the government of the United States." He continued that it is an "obvious fact" that the war in Vietnam is a "civil war."

O'Donnell said that he and other Democrats "tried desperately" to get their Vietnam peace platform officially endorsed by the Democratic Party in Chicago in 1968. President Nixon accepted the views of this platform according to the former Kennedy aide and has begun to bring the "adventure" in Vietnam to an end. O'Donnell did state however, that he "deplores the rate at which he does it."

The challenge of the 1970's, however, is not so much the war's actual cessation but rather what is to be done in America when it is over according to O'Donnell. For even with an excess of supposedly money freed fro m defense spending O'Donnell believes Mr. Nixon will not spend the needed funds on health education and welfare problems but will continue to use it for ABM systems, and other military projects.

"He (Nixon) is not going to meet those problems," said O'Donnell.

Concerning his own state ambitions as governor the guest speaker said that "I am prepared to meet the problems that face Massachusetts. I am going to beat the establishment and will be elected governor."

O'Donnell accused the present administration of Francis Sargent of being "inept." The Republicans have achieved nothing but taxes in six years!"

In a question and answer period which followed, O'Donnell said of the proposed House cut from 240 to 160 members. "It is a total political issue, a mistake."

He would support lowering the voting age from 21 to 18, not legalizing marijuana, making abortion and birth control personal matters rather than law. And as for the proposed stadium for the Boston Patriots, O'Donnell stated that he is "less than enthusiastic about stadium proposals. It is not high enough on my list of state priorities."

Nixon and Congress Halt Nationwide Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon signed Wednesday night an emergency act of Congress ordering a 37 day delay in a nationwide railroad strike scheduled for Midnight.

But the White House said the delay won't resolve the dispute as the President had asked Congress to do, and urged four AFL-CIO shopcraft unions and the rail industry to use the postponement to reach a voluntary wage and job jurisdiction agreement for 45,000 workers.

Edward F. Carlough, president of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association which had rejected a settlement agreed to by the other three unions called the delay absurd, but said the union would obey it.

Some railroads already preparing for what would have been the fourth nationwide rail strike in almost half a century dropped plans to meet the strike threat.

Penn Central Executive Vice-President Robert G. Flannery said "We are scheduling all commuter and intermediate and long distance passenger trains for operation tomorrow in anticipation of normal work activity."

Freight schedules and yard operation are planned to continue.

Carlough said "We opposed President Nixon's crude attempt to ram down the throats of 8,000 sheetmetal workers on the railroads a contract settlement that they had overwhelmingly rejected by Democratic vote. We are just as opposed to this absurd 37 day suspension of our rights under existing law by the Congress.

William W. Winpisinger, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists and chief negotiator for the four unions said the legislation was a catastrophe. But he said his union was informing its locals of the strike delay.

Our members have been without a wage commitment for five months and now they are asked to swallow an additional 37 days without any indication whatsoever of what is expected to be achieved in those 37 days.

The union expressed concern about unauthorized wildcat strikes.

Nixon signed the strike delay bill some two hours after it whipped through Congress in one day 83 to 11 in the Senate, 343 to 15 in the House.

White House Press secretary Ronald Zeigler said the administration would use the delay to try to bring the two sides to a voluntary agreement.

We are going to make every effort possible to do just that said Assistant Secretary of Labor William J. Usery, the administration's chief trouble shooter in the 15 month old dispute over wages and job jurisdiction.

The 37 day delay, which will carry through a congressional Easter recess, went into effect only a few hours before the midnight deadline set for a walkout.

The bill preserves the status quo for 37 days but does not resolve the underlying dispute Ziegler said.

Blacks Sit In At Colby; Administration Seeks End

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) - A sit-in by 18 black students continued in Colby's Lorimer Chapel Wednesday while their spokesman and the administration fired salvos in a war of words.

President Robert E. L. Strider, saying the administration is ready to discuss the students demands when you wish to and a time can be arranged, urged the Student Organization for Black Unity to return Lorimer Chapel to its proper function and go back to your residences and classes.

Appearing on the chapel steps briefly, Charles Terrell, a senior from Washington, D.C. replied: "It is useless to ask us to leave; we are not leaving until our demands are met."

Terrell said he and his 17 fellow protesters went out on the steps as a gesture signifying we do wish to communicate with you. Apparently he referred to both the faculty and other students. Colby has an enrollment of about 1,500.

Parents of most of the sit-in students have written expressing support of their sons and daughters, he said.

There are 10 men and eight women students in the group. Terrell said the most important help has come from what he called a coalition of white students who have brought in food, acted as messengers and organized picketing of Lovejoy Hall.

Hair Company Ask Court To Halt Interfering DA

BOSTON (AP) - The state Supreme Court was petitioned Wednesday to temporarily enjoin Suffolk Dis. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne from interfering with the love rock musical "Hair," now in preview performance at the Wilbur Theatre.

Justice R. Ammi Cutter scheduled a full hearing for Thursday on a permanent injunction request ed against the district attorney after Asst. Dist. Atty. Joseph Nolan said no criminal action would be taken against the musical until after the hearing.

The petition, brought by the Hair Company, the cast and the theatre owners, contended that any criminal proceedings against the musical would violate both state and federal constitutional rights of the petitioners.

The petitioners said they had information that the district attorney was about to commence criminal action against members of the cast and other petitioners causing one or more arrests.

Gerald A. Berlin, an attorney for Hair, told Justice Cutter that six police officers attended Tuesday night's performance, with four backstage during the performance. He termed these police incursions disconcerting to the cast.

LBJ's Heart Improves

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Despite lingering chest and arm discomfort, former President Lyndon B. Johnson continues to improve, Army doctors said Wednesday.

They also reported in a medical bulletin that Johnson has the sniffles and could have the beginnings of a common cold.

But Lt. Col. Robert North said Johnson's vital signs remain stable and, based on his hospitalization of three days, doctors continue to be quite pleased with progress.

North, chief of cardiology at the Army's Brooke General Hospital, said he has every reason to be encouraged.

Discussion In Colonial Lounge

State Rep Dukakis Visits Campus

State Representative Michael S. Dukakis of Brookline, Mass., will be present at an open discussion in the Colonial Lounge, Student Union, March 6th at 9:30 a.m. Mr. Dukakis has great concerns in many national as well as local priorities. He has vehemently opposed deployment of the ABM, MIRV, SST, subsidies to rich farmers, and a thirty-billion dollar a year Vietnam budget.

State wide, Dukakis has led the fight for a drastic change in the state auto insurance system and the adoption of a basic protection plan. He has offered a series of recommendations to the Governor that would expand our open spaces, impose low-sulphur fuel requirements on a state-wide basis and terminate further highway construction in the Metropolitan Boston area. Rather than more highway construction, Dukakis favors a first-rate public transportation system.

Dukakis, one of the most active members of the House, has recently led fights on two fronts. Recently, he led a battle for a moratorium on all highway construction within Rt. 128. His appeal was granted in that all highway construction, except for Rt. 95, was halted. Now Rep. Dukakis along with the Civil Liberties Union of Mass., has filed the first bill aimed at repeal of the law that created the Division of Subversive Activities, an agency operating since the McCathy Era of the mid-1950's. The Division keeps records, dossiers, on extremists.

Mr. Dukakis is eager to discuss any of these or other issues with any member of the University community.

White Faculty Will Hold Racial Tension Meeting

A group of white faculty members will hold a meeting Friday at 1:25 in Thompson 106 to discuss racial tension on campus.

The faculty members have urged all interested students attend and report that special discussions will center on the Mills House incident, the state of black studies on campus and the CCEBS program.

Charles Segal Of Brown Univ. Will Lecture Here

Professor Charles Segal from the Department of Classics at Brown University will lecture on "Humanism and Classical Literature: Some Modern Problems and Perspectives," Monday, March 9, 1970, Herter 231, 8:00 p.m. Mr. Segal is the author of numerous articles on Greek and Latin poetry including important studies of Pindar, Sophocles, Euripides, Catullus, Vergil, and Ovid. He has recently published a book on Ovidian landscapes. His lecture at UMass will address itself to the large question of the extent to which literature, and specifically classical literature, can be a humanizing force. It will also deal with the problem of the destruction of literature as a humanistic subject by pedantry. Refreshments and informal discussion will follow the lecture.

Diarrhea Held in Check Rotten Roast Removed

Remember the rotten roast beef that caused the run of diarrhea in Southwest last week? Well the food services department discovered just before mealtime last night that a small quantity of the roast beef scheduled to be served came from the same bad batch.

Quick work by Joel Stoneham's crew substituted chicken for the meat, a move which caused the delay at several commons last night. Stoneham told the MDC last night that "the only meat served last night was safe. . .we got the bad roasts in time."

University spokesman said last night that the rotten meat comprised only "a few bad roasts in the group" prepared for last night's meal, and that the diseased meat was sent to the public health department for analysis.

Tippo to Meet With Students Today In SU

Last Straw

On the surface, the Mills House problem seems very simple. Whites out, blacks in.

Addressing oneself to the problem one finds that Mills House will be used for numerous activities, in its capacity as "Black Culture Center".

Three problems have emerged, as pressing and questionable.

1. Funding will be a major problem. Where will they get the money? If from the MLK; which sect? The conservative right or the radical left? The money should not come from any student fees. It should not, because the white population, of this campus, has no financial obligation to the black population of this, or any other campus. Rather, the funds should come, exclusively from the blacks. On the same idea as the gasoline and highway taxes.

2. Relocation of the displaced students is another problem one should bear in mind. Not only was it a "pain" to move, physically; but under the extreme conditions it was also mentally deteriorating. When one knows where one belongs, and is suddenly displaced, by "mob rule"", and the Tarnished Knight from the Fort says, "Keep cool!", one does tend to loose faith in him.

3. The biggest problem is this: How will this incident effect the campus, as a whole? People, no matter what their skin color, have respect, for a respect of democracy, equality, law, order, and due process. Was Mills House any of these? There was no attempt made to preserve the "unalienable rights" of the whites; just as there was no respect for human rights when the Dutch brought the first load of slaves over in the 1600's. Blacks should learn from the whites mistakes. Blacks, finally, got tired of being pushed around; and rightly so. However, bear in mind one fact: Whites are human too, and will only endure so much "misery" from an imagined, or real threat. Someday, blacks will hit the last straw, and the whites will arise with a vengeance unequalled in the history of the world.

An unfortunate thing? True; but how to avoid it? A question well worth everyone's consideration.

Will it be back to the mines of South Africa, for the blacks of THIS country? Or, will it be a stable life in suburbia? Let us pray we never see that last straw.

The Blame is White's

It's funny, almost ironic the course which events pursue here on this campus. Take, for instance, the case where on a Thursday night, take any Thursday night, a group of brothers belonging to a local fraternity, bored with the usual train of beer parties, sorority girls, and pledge rushes, decide to engage in some, what one might call, "innocent" fun. And let's say that these same astute "men" decide to knock around a few black students in order to put an end to this same boredom.

Alright, so they stroll on over to Mills House and proceed to put an end to their boredom. The result is a few black-eyed, bloody nosed black and white brothers much like a school boy fist fight, one might say. Well, one would be greatly mistaken in assuming that the total resultant of such a confrontation would be merely physical. Sure a few people are physically hurt, but the continually resounding repercussions are very far from physical.

The white participants in this case merely stroll on back to their house seemingly having accomplished this highly intellectual pursuit which had occupied them at Mills House. In fact, they have left something of their intellectualism behind in the guise of a vow to return with more of their pack at a later time for more "fun". While the black participants, numbering only in the two figure category, both angered at this unwarranted attack, and at the same time afraid of that 10:1 ratio between them and their self-acclaimed opponents understandably decide to take refuge in the only even pseudo-haven that they have in this vast white world - Mills House.

But let's be a little more specific and a little less hypothetical here and suppose that this is no less than the third time within an 18 month spance that this has occurred, and let's go even further and suppose that this is also the third time that both public and private opinion has been distorted so as to virtually exclude the fraternity brothers' involvement altogether while placing full burden and fault for the events knowing precipitated by the white brothers on the black students. How can one, after viewing the undistorted facts, possibly not see just cause and reason for both fear and anger on the part of these same black students.

The number of black students on this campus is exceedingly small making them a highly vulnerable minority. Their numbers are small because the racist controlled gates that had previously bared them from this University, as indeed it had barred them from most other Universities in this country, have just recently been knocked ajar allowing but a highly controlled trickle to slip inside. They are vulnerable because their numbers are small, and because there still exists that same racism which previously barred them entry now intent upon driving them out again.

It seems here that one might be asking the question, "Who is responsible for the protection of community members who are frequently and maliciously "vamped" on (to use the saying) by forces within this same institution?" The fraternity brothers who allegedly attacked the black students and thusly the whole black community were members of this institution as indeed were those who were attacked. Who was there to provide protection, advice, support, anything? The Police? The Dean of Students? The White faculty? Anyone? Is there, in fact, anyone who really cares whether students are harrassed, beaten up, killed? Does any of these people really care whether this campus turns into an armed camp or not? Well what the hell! It's all been said before and all that resulted from it was a reprimand spoken against this writer from the upper most regions of the administration for annunciating the same last year.

It might be rational for one to inquire about the status of the current situation as it stands now. Well, for those too dense to even guess after 400 years of repetition; the situation, as mentioned earlier, is one where public opinion has again been directed against the blacks who are being told now that they must again back up, give up, relent. They've been trespassed upon and later told that they are the trespassers. They have been attacked, and later made out to be the attackers. And why? Because they are black? Because they are here, presumably unwanted? Because they merely co-inhabit this planet with whites? There is a fairly common phrase that is applied frequently to the Russians regarding their foreign and domestic economic policies which purports them to take one step backward and two steps forward, thus continually advancing. It seems that the same phrase turned about could be applied to the blacks in this country. Blacks could be said to be continually taking two steps backward and one step forward, thus moving backward having never moved forward though this one step forward might appear to the gullible to be an advance.

Continual harrassment, exploitation, and backward motion. It appears sometimes to be completely unresolvable, a system to be lived with and tolerated instead of being dealt with and corrected. They say that where there's life, there's hope! Hopefully, while there's still no loss of life here, something can and will be done soon!

Racism on Campus

To the Editor:

Mr. Carey (Note) in reply to your letter of March 3, '70, I would like to say, I used facts in answering your letter for a two-fold purpose: they show truth and to enlighten you, I must have enlightned you somewhat: referring to your little racist comment; "I wouldn't recognize the cat even if I passed him on the way to the dining commons tonight especially in the darkl though maybe not if he grinned." You'll never pass me on the way to the dining commons, because I don't eat in one. But I wouldn't mind making a special trip to one - Which One? Also, I can guarantee you'll never see the day I grin!!

Being a Beautiful Black and coming from such a highly regarded civilization, I couldn't resort to name calling. The only ones who resort to name calling are little children who have just been proven wrong and won't accept it lying down; and, racist white dogs who have just been pissed on by a Black dog.

I'm sorry you don't want to accept what I wrote, but as the song says "That's the way it goes." And that's the way you go with your head between your legs to your dorm to apologize to your white brothers for that brutal and racist attack, not only on me, Mr. Carey, but on the whole UMass Black Community.

I though of you as one of the many White intellectuals here at UMass, but in your last reply, you showed me that I was not dealine with a white intellectual, but rather a white bigot and racist as they are the only ones who'd stoop so low to call people names through a so called "Intellectual Media." I would not, as I said before, stoop so low to attack or call you names through the Collegian because I am a proud Black man. In order for me to call you names, I would have to crawl not as low as a snake, but INDEED - lower than a snake.

I hope you don't take what I said as a personal attack, but if the shoe fits. . . .

My apologies for your warped mind,
Brother GEORGE LEE JOHNSON

Regarding Campus Comment:

The maximum length for all letters to the editor is two pages, typed at sixty spaces, and double-spaced. Each letter must carry the writer's signature, address, and telephone number. The deadline for all letters to the editor is 5:00 p.m. the day before the intended publication. Letters that fail to meet any of these requirements will not be printed. Peace.

An Open Letter

I am somewhat ambarrassed at professing my ignorance, but I would appreciate it if someone in the "Black Community" would explain the rationale behind the phrase "our brothers" as applying merely to other blacks. What I don't understand is why this phrase cannot be applied to everyone rather than a specific group.

Maybe I'm weird or something, but I would like to think that it IS possible for EVERYONE to be brothers. We are, after all, all human beings, and I would hope that this implies that we all feel a (brotherly) love for each other. Or at least that we should.

Conservatives Answer

To the editor:

The purpose of this letter is to explain to the Campus community the philosophy of a group being formed at UMass. This group is to be called The Freedoms Committee. The prime goal of this Committee will be to challenge the radical elements on Campus whose presence now dominates the public and social life of our community. As an example of this social domination, view the plea by the radicals for UMass students to ring fire alarms (a $10,000 fine and/or imprisonment) and to obstruct State Police (an equally serious offense). WHY? In order to protect our local pusher they answer. Now we do not feel that these groups have the right morally or legally to impose the aforementioned actions on the U-Mass campus and will do all in our power to stop this immoral and illegal activity.

A second aim of the Freedoms Committee will be to make an attempt at raising the literacy level of the radicals and to instill in them a badly needed ability to correlate their mouths with their brains. As a case in point, consider the radical who called Hubert Humphrey a m.f.s.o.b. at the open debate about the disruption. Now certainly the radical did not mean to imply either that Hubert had an Oedipal complex or that Hubert's mother was a canine, for even if these accusations were true they have no relevance in a discussion of the Chicago violence. Therefore one must conclude that the speaker was ignorant of what his mouth was spewing forth. We would like to ask all rational persons interested in stopping this babbling to attend our first meeting which will be posted in the Collegian notices. Bring yourselves, your souls, and a great urge to make this campus a truly good place to live.

To those who would call the Freedoms Committee part of the police state pig-power establishment, remember that it is the reaction to irrational actions like the Humphrey disruption in the outside world which creates the environment for a police state, not a conservative group of students who are tired of listening to Bowery rhetoric at the college level.

Freedoms Committee,

Judge Hoffman is Great!

(This letter was in the Greenfield Chronicle last week.)

"To the editor:

We have received the inspiration to quit the "silent majority" and become great big Americans.

Now is the time to rise up and shout to these slimy, sleezy, vermin-infested, drug-addicted gutless creeps that we are going to chase them to the ends of the earth.

We have received the shove we need by the actions of the great courageous Judge J. Hoffman of Chicago.

This great man who should receive the Congressional medal is valiantly trying to keep this great country of ours safe for our grandchildren. If we fail to help now, we may never get another chance.

God bless this great man for ridding the streets of this vermin, traitors, or what other names you care to use. We should only wish he had the power to place them before a firing squad. (With myself in charge. Perhaps if I gave the command to kill these traitors Guadalcanal and the rest of the places I crawled in the mud for this country would not seem in vain.)

Remember, you may never get another chance. Write to your congressman, exercise your rights as a Legionnaire or VFW, kick, gouge, scream. This is a fight to the finish.

Cuba seems like a wonderful place for these creeps. Whoever closes the gate behind them, make sure it is locked.

Recently a seed salesman made remarks that are detrimental to our way of life that should be considered as "drunken babble". Don't close the gate until he is through.

Amerika Had It.

And there rose up amoung them a prophet and they called him a fool and cut out his tongue castrating his ability to teach.
And good old Tom Dooley spoke of the gook's atrocities and they ate up his shit and kissed his imperialist ass.
Bobby Seale we love you
But what can I do
the words rebound off the liberal's shit eating lips.
Hoffman the facist lives and is proclamed god by the silent majority's bleating as their sewer lives run to the ocean while the young man with his name lies in jail praying if he dares that this is all a dream and that 1776 hasn't been here yet that man may yet fight the final war.
And my mother weeps for her boy because he unluckily learned to see and will not have to suffer his fate
But the moon still shines over the cowshed only hippies live there now and king Richard sits and decrees and the silent ones hear and strike down the revolutionary stabbed while making love in a public place
Jesus has returned for a comeback and now lies in a southern jail because he spoke to a "nigger" and has long hair and George Washington was arrested in the last bust for having two grams of life in another world and who will make us smile and why do we go on when the end can't be stopped and why am I writing at all and Che is dead tortured by oppression while we all lie and wait for the enevitable as the factories fires still burn fed by the lives of the workers of a hundred hopeless years
Where has Mickey Mouse gone and the saturday morning cartoon carnival
Captain Amerika is on the moon and Manfred the wonder dog has rabbies and mom, why is the sky up there

Time to Unite

Wake up UMass Students! When are you going to take an interest in anything of any importance or consequence? When are you going to stop and think about what you are here for? To be educated? Do you think that your future life will be based solely on book knowledge? You have to involve yourselves in activities, you have to form opinions, you have to start learning to think for yourself. Many of you are apathetic. You sit placidly by as the whole world marches by you and try to do nothing to contribute, help or change that world. Are you that completely satisfied with the way things are run (be it the university, the state or the nation) that you can just sit back and not participate?

Where were you when you boycotted classes for the Moratorium? Out demonstrating against an unjust and bloody war, called Vietnam, just in case you haven't heard or were you sitting in your room totally uninterested in what was going on, enjoying the day-off and mumbling things like "It doesn't affect me now, so why should I trouble myself about it" or "Who cares."

Where were you? The 3,200 students who were at the Cage to listen to Humphrey and were denied your right to listen. Were you at the meeting Wednesday night at the Student Union Ballroom to find out what happened, voice your opinions and hear the other side of the story? NO!! There was only a handful of people there. I know everyone has opinions, when are you going to voice them?

The only thing that got any response was the Student Room Rent Hike, because that affected your pocketbooks. You cared only because it affected you personally. When are you going to care about those in our country who are oppressed and who suffer daily? When are you going to care about others?

It is time to unite. To become an active community. To share the responsibility and work of the rest of the nation. It is time to decide how we are going to live and not how the Board of Trustees want us to live. It's your lives and your future which will be affected. This is the only way to prepare ourselves to meet reality and to face the problems and decisions that will face us in the future.

VOTE FOR A COMMUNITY!
VOTE YES ON THE REFERENDUM, MARCH 11th!!!

Look Around

To the editor:

My dear Mr. Shepard, not wanting to hurt your feelings, I really must reject your "deepest sympathy" because I feel it isn't warranted. Actually, if racing to a dorm at 2:30 a.m. to "shriek filthy words" like an idiot is your idea of helping in a "crisis" then, I guess I just can't help out. By the way, did you, up in Grayson, race down to help obstruct the busts in Southwest? Did the fire alarm awake you at 2:30 a.m.?

Can anyone on campus imagine all of Southwest, unable to get into Dance, standing around like a group of howling dogs, screaming all the four letter words they ever learned?

I hardly feel that someone who is busted because he or she has broken a law, can be compared to Nazi Germany and the inhumane slaughter of people who only expressed their opinions openly. Really, Mr. Shepard!

In regard to your statement about the fire alarms, no, I wouldn't be "leaving the dorm anyway" and neither would any other sensible person. So, go ahead - "Cry Wolf!"

My gripe against the Health Service is also valid. Since there are so many people here they should be prepared to help in a "real" crisis. Did you know that this very same "intestinal virus" has hit this campus a number of times in the past ten years? By the way, you weren't sick, were you?

It just seems that some people can rationalize anything. Mr. Shepard, you may feel that you are the only revolutionary on campus, the only person who is hip to the drug scene and above all, all knowing, but, I think you had better open your eyes and take a good look around!

Voices in Wilderness

Much controversy has recently arisen out of the Gruman affair concerning the students' role in tenure decisions. There is considerable agreement that students should be involved either directly or in an advisory capacity over faculty tenure decisions. There is considerably less agreement on the degree of student participation that is desirable. Students who desire to have a voice in the decisions that will affect their lives must remember that power was never conceded without demand and it never will be. It must also be pointed out that any action to be successful must be well organized. Letters in the Collegian and volumes of petitions will be like voices crying in the wilderness unless they are translated into sustained interest and work.

This is precisely why student-faculty committees were formed within many departments last year. These committees, when backed by sufficient student interest have been very successful. The student committee in the history department for instance has been asked to help evaluate dept. requirements and to overhaul existing introductory courses and to develop new ones. The potential for action is there. It need only be acted on. If you have any questions on how to implement academic reform please call 67128.

Salzburg to Sizzle With Students in Summer

Would you like to study "urban and social planning in Britain" at the University of Manchester, England this summer? Or Irish literature in Dublin? For about $3,000 students can study Islamic art, Arabic language and literature, and other subjects in arts and sciences in Cairo. A summer program for music conductors and instrumentalists will be given in Salzburg, Austria for which the total cost excluding international travel is only about $300.

The Office of International Programs in Whitmore has information on these and many other programs of overseas study for which University of Massachusetts students may apply. During the current academic year, over fifty University of Massachusetts students are studying overseas and in the summer of 1970 the University's summer overseas programs will enroll more than two hundred students. Opportunities for overseas study are not limited, however, to the University's own programs, but include as many universities abroad as will admit American students. For example, the University of Massachusetts may nominate students for study at African universities through cooperative arrangements with the African-American Institute of New York. University of Massachusetts students can learn about application procedures and the wide variety of possibilities for study abroad from the Director of International Programs in Whitmore.

Boozing Jurors Slapped By Schuling Kamp's Back Hand

NEW ORLEANS, LA. (AP) - It's going to be a long, dry six months for the Orleans Parish grand jury sworn in Wednesday.

Judge Oliver P. Schulingkamp of Criminal District Court told the 12 men on the grand jury that he would not allow them to drink alcoholic beverages while they are engaged in their official duties - not even at lunch.

The drinking of alcoholic beverages of any kind by any grand juror while performing his official duties - including while at lunch - is regarded by this court as improper and also in extreme poor taste, Schulingkamp said in his charge.

Questionnable conduct by a grand jury could result in a cloud cast upon the validity of indictments returned by such jury, he said.

Besides the expenditure of money, I don't believe that a juror considering the fate of another can give his best to his consideration while under the influence of alcohol.

Amherst Masquers Present "Lechery"

"Lechery", a new musical comedy, will be presented by the Amherst College Masquers at Kirby Theatre in six different performances during the next two weeks. The shows, all at 8:30 p.m., are scheduled for March 6, 7, 8, 13, 14, and 15.

"Lechery" is the first musical comedy ever created for a Masquers production.

The musical is based on William Wycherley's salacious classic "The Country Wife," an English Restoration comedy which was first performed in 1674. Amherst Professor Walter Boughton, the director of the play, explained that he had been eyeing Wycherley's Restoration masterpiece for several years in the hope that Kirby would produce an adaptation of it.

"This is not a rock musical," Boughton pointed out, "but modern music, using musical patterns from the Baroque and dealing with them in a whimsical manner".

The book and lyrics for the show were by Professor Boughton, Jon Alper, Amherst '71, and Jim Bierman, Amherst Professor.

The plot is essentially Wycherley's, although the language has been divested of "its convoluted style." It involves a rake, Mr. Horner (John Reinus, Amherst '70) who pretends he is a eunuch, there by gaining admittance to the bed chambers of several desirable women. Among his conquests is Mrs. Marjorie Pinchwife (Pat Melaugh, Smith '72). Mr. Pinchwife is played by Amherst senior Hugh Laurence, an Independent Study Scholar who was recently named a Woodrow Wilson Designate. A few weeks ago Laurence translated and directed the play "Oedipus the King" as part of his Independent Study project.

George Bentley, Amherst '70, has done the choreography for the performance and also plays the typical Restoration fop, Sparkish. Professor Boughton stated that one reason a musical was chosen as the Masquers' next production was to take advantage of Bentley's talents as a choreographer. Bentley is also an Independent Scholar at Amherst and recently did a production of Poe's "Lygeia." He has been working with a group of students on theatre movements, Boughton added, "and we wanted to get him into an even bigger production. We think very highly of Bentley's choreography and wanted to make use of it in this musical."

Other characters in the play are: Harcourt, a London rakehell, played by Tim Landfield, Amherst '72; and Alithea, played by Dorothy Chansky, Smith '72.

Music for the two-and-one-half hour play will be provided by a twelve-man orchestra under the direction of Paul Jensen, an assistant professor of music at the University of Massachusetts, who wrote the 21 songs for "Lechery."

LECHERY! Pinchwife (Hugh Laurence, Amhers' '70) makes a point with Sparkish (George Bentley, Amherst '70) about his relationship with Pinchwife's sister Alithea (Dorothy Chanski, Smith '72) in the Amherst Masquers musical version of Wycherley's "The Country Wife" opening Friday at Kirby Theater on the Amherst campus.

The Amherst Jazz Concept will be one of two groups performing in "A Night of Jazz and Ragtime" to be presented free this Friday evening at Amherst College.

Amherst Groups Plan Free Evening of Jazz

If you're looking for a different way to spend a Friday night, make plans now to attend "A Night Of Jazz and Ragtime," Friday, March 6th, at 8:00 p.m. in Buckley Recital Hall on the Amherst College Campus, the Amherst music department will present THE AMHERST JAZZ CONCEPT and YOUR MOTHER'S MOUSTACHE in concert.

The program will cover a large musical spectrum, from Dixieland all the way to progressive jazz. The two groups will play numbers by such composers as W.C. Handy, Eubie Blake, George Gershwin, Dave Brubeck, and John Coltrane (to name but a few) plus original compositions of their own.

It promises to be an exciting evening of musical entertainment. If you want to hear the best in American music from 1900 to the present, don't miss "A NIGHT OF JAZZ AND RAGTIME." Everyone is invited to attend and there will be no admission charge.

NIT Word Due Friday

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

"We're going to have to sit by our telephones and wait for that bid," commented a cautious coach Jack Leaman yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Varsity 'M' Club in reference to UMass' possible basketball selection by the committee of the National Invitational Tournament.

The Redman coach, as guest speaker at the dinner, had a lot of good things to say about his team and came to the above statement while talking about the goals he and the team had set at the beginning of the season.

One of those goals and, as Leaman pointed out, one of the most difficult was to earn a bid to a post-season tourney. He expressed his thanks to Texas Tech, one of UMass' rivals along with Creighton for two NIT spots, for losing to Baylor Tuesday night, 80-72.

TT's loss was its tenth; Creighton was in action last night against tough Houston. Should it falter in that affair, it will also have ten losses. Redman chances are indeed brighter.

Indications are that word (if any) from New York will come on Friday, thus giving the selection committee a day to digest and mill over UMass, Creighton, and Texas Tech facts.

The Boston Herald Traveler ran a Redman hoop story yesterday that also set Friday as the make-or-break day for further UMass basketball adventures.

Leaman's NIT dream was the fourth goal that he set back in late November; the others in succession were (1) to win the Yankee Conference title, (2) to break the team record for most victories in one season and (3) to be named the number one team in New England.

Monday night, in their tilt with New Hampshire, the Redmen achieved those first two goals. They tied Connecticut for the YC championship with an 8-2 league mark and set the new team victory record at 18, one more than last year's squad.

Leaman labeled the third goal as UMass' hardest dream, and proudly boasted, "In spite of Boston and all its writers, we're number one in New England, and we're proud of it."

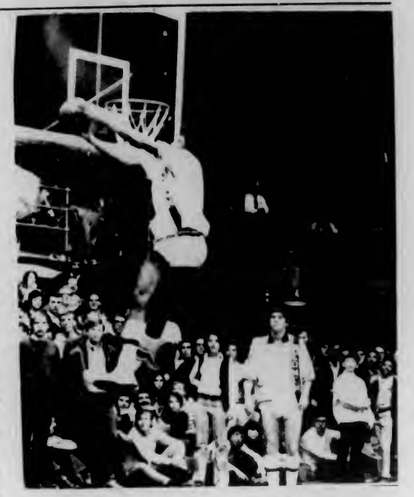
He gave out more praise to his seniors, Ray Ellerbrook, Dennis Chapman, Jack Gallagher and Dick Samuelson, and said, "They laid the groundwork for UMass to be a winner for a long, long time." Each member of that foursome received Varsity 'M' Awards for their excellent contributions to Redman athletics in general and Redman basketball in particular.

Leaman also had words of thanks to his assistant coaches, Peter Broaca and Ray Wilson. In an afternoon of praise from the head mentor, Leaman took special time to single out the fantastic role played by the UMass fans.

"I think the biggest thrill to me and the kids has been the support of the fans all through the year," he affirmed. In his estimation, they helped make the Redmen the "number one spirited team."

He added, "I don't think the campus will ever go back to what it was." He stated that UMass athletics will continue to strive under such support.

At the present moment, the Redman basketball players get a chance to pause while their ears, and ears all over the campus will be keen to any word from New York City.



ALMOST IN THE BASKET! ! – ALMOST IN THE NIT? ?

Poll Picks Pistol Pete

NEW YORK (AP) - Pistol Pete Maravich of Louisiana State, perhaps the most exciting player in the sports, was named the College Basketball player of the Year for the 1969-70 season by The Associated Press yesterday.

The highest college career scorer ever, with more than 3,500 points, won the honor by a landslide vote from 379 sports writers and broadcasters.

Maravich, who will lead the Bayou Tigers into the NIT at Madison Square Garden next week, polled 269 votes. Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure was a distant second with 72, Dan Issel of Kentucky third with 2 and Charlie Scott of North Carolina fourth with nine.

The 6 foot 5 Maravich became a three time All American earlier in the day when the 1970 AP All American team was announced.

Selected for the All American, along with Maravich, were Lanier and Issel plus Rick Mount of Purdue and Calvin Murphy of Niagara. Mount and Murphy are repeaters from the 1969 All American.

Maravich who has a 47 point per game average with a high single mark of 69 points, is a crowd pleaser extraordinary with his variety of shots, fancy passing and dribbling.

As a junior a year ago, Maravich finished second to Lew Alcinder of UCLA as Player of the Year for 1968-69. Alcinder now is a pro with the Milwaukee Bucks in the NBA.

A total of 3 players received votes in the player of the year category. After the first four of Maravich, Lanier, Issel and Scott, Murphy and Jimmy Collins of New Mexico State tied at three.

Austin Carr of Notre Dame, John Roche of South Carolina, Artis Gilmore of Jacksonville and John Johnson of Iowa tied at two. Mount, Sidney Wicks of UCLA and Dennis Awtrey of Santa Clara each received one vote.

Scott, Carr, Roche and Gilmore were named on the All American second team along with Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan.

GYMNAST CO-CAPTAINS Steve Cary and Mike Kasavana talk to Coach Kjeldsen before leaving for the E.I.G.L. Championships at Syracuse over the weekend.

UMass Baseball Conducts Sat. Clinic

The UMass Athletic Department will conduct its fourth annual High School Baseball Clinic Saturday, March 7.

Redman baseball coach Dick Bergquist has announced that the Clinic will get underway at 9:15 a.m. at Curry Hicks Cage with Registration and the 1969 World Series film. Coach Bergquist will present the first session on "Conditioning Drills", followed by Amherst College Coach Bill Thurston, who will talk on "Baserunning".

The morning portion of the Clinic will conclude with an 11:30 presentation on "Pitching fundamentals" by former New York Yankee pitching ace, Art Ditmar, Coach at American International College.

Following lunch the Clinic will meet in Boyden Building where assistant UMass coach Tony Williams will present "Making the Double Play". The UMass varsity team will then demonstrate fundamentals to all the high school players in attendance, while the coaches meet separately for sessions on "Fly Ball Priority System" and "Pickoff Plays".

The Clinic will conclude at 3:00 p.m. and is open to all players of high school age and coaches of all levels. There is no admission charge.

Celtics Triumph

BOSTON (AP) - John Havlicek scored 20 of his 31 points in the first half Wednesday night as the Boston Celtics opened up a big early lead and held on for a 115-110 National Basketball Association victory over the San Francisco Warriors.

The Celtics led by as many as 18 points midway through the second period, mainly on Havlicek's sharpshooting, and had a 72-58 halftime advantage.

San Francisco battled back behind Jeff Mullins and Joe Ellis after the intermission and cut the lead to 98-93 by early in the fourth period. Havlicek hit a field goal at this stage, then stole the ball and scored again to stem the rally and keep the Celtics safely in front.

Bailey Howell backed up Havlicek with 21 points for the Celtics, while Ellis had 25, Mullins 24 and Ron Williams 21 for the Warriors.

Police Dog Abducted

GOSHEN, MASS - This small western Massachusetts community was still talking about the daring theft of the police department's mascot, a little brown dog named Barrus, yesterday.

Barrus, a 2 year old mongrul which was given to the force by a little old lady last year, was believed to be wandering down main street when an unknown newspaper boy carrying a Berkshire Eagle bag drove up to him on his bike and carried him away.

Police Chief Elmer Q. Ascott said last night that a three mile roadblock had been established outside of the town, but admitted that chances of recovering the dog were slim.

"That bandit is probably long gone by now," he said, "and all we have to remember our poor pooch by is his empty water dish.

Demonstration Said to Violate Picketing Code

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

Claiming that they were obliged by the Nuremberg precedents to put an end to the University's complicity in Honeywell's alleged war crimes (as defined by the Geneva Conventions), such as the manufacture of fragmentation bombs, approximately forty demonstrators participated yesterday in a "nonabstructive, disruptive demonstration" against a Honeywell recruiter.

The demonstration in its later stages violated the Student Senate picketing code, since a number of the demonstrators repeatedly circulated single file through an internal corridor off of which the interviews were being conducted. It is however doubtful that student judicial prosecution will ensue. The Advocate General, charged with enforcement of Senate legislation, has concluded that a decision by Chancellor Tippo to allow the demonstrators to continue their march has rendered a conviction problematical. It is possible that the Chancellor's permission to continue may have been construed by the demonstrators as designating that corridor as a permissible area for demonstrations.

However, Dr. Tippo, as he has since made clear, intended to mean that as long as the demonstrators remained orderly and quiet, the administration would not summon the police to put an end to the demonstration, a course which the Chancellor opposed. He intended to make no comment on the permissibility under the code of demonstrating in that corridor.

However, since the same demonstrators plan to pursue the same tactic today against the Army Materials Command, student judicial prosecution of code violations are to be expected.

The demonstrators gathered in the lobby of Whitmore at about 10 a.m., and proceeded into Dean Field's office to appraise him of the group's intentions. The Dean received the two demands, that the recruiter cease his activities until he engages in a dialogue with the University community, and that he come to the Council Chambers from 1 to 3 p.m. to engage in such a dialogue. The Dean affirmed his willingness to do all in his power to set up a debate, but rejected the demand that the recruiter cease in the interim, stating that it was the current policy of the University community, agreed upon by faculty and students, to allow open recruitment, and that it was his duty as an administrator to implement that policy.

The Dean stated, "I shall not defend a particular company, but rather the University's policy of open recruitment.

The demonstrators returned to the lobby, allowing the Dean until 10:45 (later extended to 11:00) to obtain a response concerning the debate from Honeywell. Having received no response by 11:00, the protestors moved downstairs to the recruitment site, occupying the reception area. They began a chant, but stopped upon being read by Senate Vice-President Glenn Elters (representing the Advocate General) the portion of the Student Senate picketing code which prohibits "audible obstacles to what is intended during the course of normal University conduct," after which he asked them to desist.

The Honeywell (and other) recruiters carried on their interviews, receiving co-operation from the demonstrators, who cleared a way through the crowd for interviewees.

The protestors, who were refused information regarding which of the numerous interview rooms contained the Honeywell recruiter, briefly and in a low voice, took up the chant "Where the Hell is Honeywell".

Dean Field arrived at 11:30 to report that the Honeywell officials had declined to allow the interviewer to participate in a debate, holding that it was "his primary responsibility to complete the scheduled interviews with individuals." The company did agree to send a representative to debate at a future date. The Dean went on to assert that the relevant question was "not the right of Honeywell to recruit, but the right of the 45 students who signed up under the current University policy to be interviewed."

After being warned again about the noise level, this time by the Advocate General John Shyavitz, the demonstrators broke for lunch at noon, returning about an hour later. A further attempt was made to determine the room in which Honeywell was recruiting.

After taking a hand count of those willing to enter the inner corridor to determine that fact, the group adjourned to the main lobby to decide upon tactics. The discussion revolved about the question of whether the protest was a symbolic act, or an attempt to prevent the interviews from continuing, to be accomplished by an escalation of tactics (e.g. noise).

Members of the group belittled the prospect of suspension (maximum penalty for picketing code violators). Upon hearing a member report that he had discovered where the recruiter was (although he was subsequently moved), the group returned to the interview area with the cry of "Let's go downstairs and raise the noise level!" Upon reaching the area, a number confronted at the entrance to the internal corridor the Advocate General and Senate President Cynthia Olken, who invoked the picketing code and took ID's of those who were willing, and had photographs taken of the remainder, as they entered the corridor.

Mr. Shyavitz proceeded to read to those assembled within the corridor the appropriate sections of the code, with a request that they cease and desist within five minutes. The demonstrators proceeded to file repeatedly through the corridor chanting "Big firms get rich, GI's die". They were informed by a placement official that they were interfering with the interviewing process.

At this point Chancellor Tippo convened a meeting in a nearby room of high student, faculty, and administrative officials on the scene to formulate a course of action. Shortly after the meeting began, the demonstrators entered the room, calling for the meeting to be public.

The Chancellor rejected a request that Honeywell be isolated from the other recruiters present so that Honeywell would be the only one disrupted. The protestors also heard pleas from Professor William Wilson that to provoke a police action over the demonstration would cause an "extreme reaction" against the black students and their occupation of Mills House.

He urged the protestors to continue their education function, but to "not cause the whole thing to explode." In the end, the demonstrators agreed to the Chancellor's proposal: "If you will walk in single file and keep the noise level down, fine."

The demonstrators resumed their tactic of filing through the corridor. At one point they resumed a chant, but ceased upon Dr. Tippo's saying "I've asked you not to do this, and I mean it." The march stopped briefly to consider a proposal to escalate the tactics, but the group concluded that the Chancellor's concession represented a substantial gain, and in the words of one of the group, "It's not good business to make the revolution occur in a day." They resumed marching.

The demonstrators called a halt shortly after 4 p.m., gathered in a conference room, and set up a meeting for 7:30 to review the protest and plan today's protest against the Army Materials Command, which among its other functions produces the agents of chemical and biological warfare.

Honeywell protestors met with Chancellor Tippo to determine the extent of disruption at the demonstration. Professor Wilson said that provoking police intervention would create extreme reaction against black students occupying Mills House.

Yesterday's protest against recruitment by Honeywell violated the Senate Picketing Code passed last spring. However, conflicts arose over enforcement when Chancellor Tippo allowed protestors to march down certain corridors.

To Protest Recruitment For Biological Warfare

Following the successful confrontation of Honeywell today, the Committee on Militarism of the UMass Social Action Council and UMass SDS will continue their activities with a non-violent demonstration in protest of the campus recruiting activities of the Army Material Command.

The AMC, formerly the Chemical Corps, has traditionally handled the US Chemical Biological Warfare program. It maintains a network of research laboratories and production facilities that employs 3,750 officers and enlisted men and 9,700 civilians. Its total appropriations exceed one billion dollars to research and produce riot control agents, nerve gasses, bacterial diseases, viral diseases and biological toxins.

The demonstration will begin at 10 a.m. today with an assembly of demonstrators in the lobby of the Student Union. Following the assembly, the group will march to Whitmore to present three non-negotiable demands. 1) All recruiting will cease until an AMC representative agrees to engage in an open debate with the University community concerning the Command's man-related activities; 2) the recruiters accompany the demonstrators back to the Student Union for a 1:00 - 3:00 p.m. debate; 3) the Placement office situate the Army Material Command's recruiting activities in such a way that any protest will not disturb the rights of non war-related companies, especially the rights of UMass students to be interviewed by other companies.

The Committee on Militarism wish to emphasize that the will protect the rights of all students scheduled for interviews with other companies. Free access to the interviews will be maintained and if desired a personal escort will be provided. The only action which could provoke any possible audible disturbance of other activities will be the administration's rejection of demand number three.

The Committee, "invites the support and participation of all people opposed to war and genocide. All persons who supported the Conspiracy at the TDA rally are especially invited to 'seize the time' to confront the forces of death with a manifestation of a new life."

O'Brien's Back

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawrence F. O'Brien was chosen unanimously Thursday to be the Democrats' national operations chief and as he resumed the reins he predicted the Democratic party will make a dramatic comeback this November.

O'Brien was elected by acclamation to the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee after his only rival, Indiana Democratic Chairman Gordon St. Angelo, withdrew his bid for the post O'Brien left only four months ago.

The 52-year old O'Brien, widely recognized as the party's top professional political organizer, leaves his New York public relations firm to succeed Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma.

As Harris bowed out to the man he succeeded after the party's 1968 presidential defeat, he said the 1970 elections may not only predict what will happen in 1972 but will set the tone for politics in this country for a decade.

After hearing that the party's debt at the end of 1969 stood at $8,334,168 the national committee elected Robert Strauss of Texas, the only contender, as party treasurer and voted to establish a Democratic National Finance Committee.

Strauss, considered close to the conservative Texas Democratic leadership of former President Lyndon B. Johnson and former Gov. John Connally, accepted a contribution from outgoing Treasurer Patrick O'Connor and pledged "to do my dead level best."

O'Brien escorted to the rostrum by Harris and former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, noted that he resigned as postmaster general because "I couldn't stand the deficit" and then went to Wall Street where the market soon dropped two points.

"So I am back where I belong, with you", he added. The man who managed presidential campaigns for John F. Kennedy, Johnson and Humphrey called for a truly united party, saying "We simply can't afford the luxury of being fragmented."

O'Brien, who turned down a bid from Humphrey for the chairmanship just one week ago, was drafted for the post Tuesday by the party's executive committee.

27 Whites Freed To Await S.C. Trial

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) - Twenty-seven white men were arraigned on riot charges Thursday as officers prepared more warrants - some against white women as a result of Tuesday's school desegregation violence at nearby Lamar.

The 27, arrested Wednesday night and Thursday in a sweep by agents of the State Law Enforcement Division (SLED), were freed under $2,000 bond each by Magistrate Sam Chapman.

No trial dates were set.

SLED Chief J.P. Strom said additional warrants are being drawn in Columbia as agents identify persons in photographs taken by his men during the clash of about 15 white adults with state troopers and Negro pupils on the Lamar school grounds.

A representative of Gov. Robert McNair said some of those arrested will face additional charges, possibly assault and damage to state property.

The latter charge, he said, could result from the toppling of two school buses that had been stoned by the white mob before Negro pupils who rode them to school were removed. The buses were empty when they were overturned.

Several of the pupils and at least one trooper were injured in the clash, but none was seriously hurt.

The violence occurred on the campus shared by the Lamar high and elementary schools, which were predominantly white until a court ordered desegregation plan went into effect Feb. 5.

Mrs. Jeryl Best, wife of one of those arrested, commented in an interview outside the jail on the new zoning plan for school desegregation in Lamar.

"Hair" Still Uncut

BOSTON (AP) - Further court action in a petition to enjoin Suffolk County Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne from taking criminal action against the play "Hair" has been scheduled for March.

State Supreme Court Justice R. Ammi Cutter took the petition under advisement Thursday.

The play, now giving preview performances at the Wilbur Theatre, is described as tribal love rock musical.

The petition was brought by the Hair company, the cast and the theatre. It contends that any criminal proceedings would deprive the petitioners of both state and federal constitutional rights.

This district attorney's office has agreed not to take any action against the play pending completion of court hearings on the petition.

Four witnesses, including the manager of the stage production, New York Times drama critic Clive Barnes, a Boston drama critic and a representative of the Boston police vice squad, appeared at a hearing Thursday.

Gerald A. Berlin, counsel for the petitioners, told the court earlier that the laws are "so vague and uncertain in their meaning that criminal convictions would be a denial of due process and have a chilling effect on the petitioners' rights of free speech."

The petition said the musical has advanced sales of 100,000 tickets, has spent $250,000 on advertising and production and employs about 115 persons.

Any criminal action against the production would result in the show's closing and bring about substantial and irreversible economic loss, the petition said.

"Hair" is under production in 17 other U.S. and foreign cities and is scheduled for formal opening in Boston Friday.

Jury Says UMW Man Lied

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) - Retired Kentucky miner Dillard Couch, a member of a secret United Mine Workers organization unit, was indicted on two counts of perjury Thursday by federal grand jurors investigating the slaying of UMW official Joseph A. Yablonski.

Jurors said Couch lied about two trips he allegedly made last October to Middlesboro, Ky., with other members of UMW District 9's Research and Information Committee.

Couch, who was arrested in his hometown of Bledsoe, Ky., was alleged to have received checks totalling $935 on the trips.

District 9 field representative William Prater told newsmen the indictment was apparently intended to put pressure on other witnesses. "It's propaganda more than anything else," he said.

Five persons have been indicted by the grand jury on charges of conspiring to kill Yablonski.

Couch is the second mine worker indicted by the grand jury. Silous Huddleston, 61, president of a UMW Local in LaFollette, Tenn., was indicted last week as a fifth conspirator.

U.S.-Soviet N-Ban Starts

WASHINGTON (AP) - The historic nonproliferation treaty went into force Thursday with U.S. and Soviet leaders pledging anew to strive for a curb on the superpower arms race.

At a flag decked ceremony at the State Department, President Nixon hailed the treaty banning the spread of nuclear weapons as a potential first milestone on a road which led to reducing the danger of nuclear war.

Referring to the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) resuming at Vienna April 16, Nixon added: "The next milestone we trust will be the limitation of nuclear weapons."

At a parallel treaty ceremony in Moscow, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said the nonproliferation pact is an important step toward "ridding mankind from the threat of a nuclear war."

Militants Infiltrate New Freedom Committee

An organizational meeting for forming the Freedoms Committee was held under the leadership of Paul Saunders last night in the New Hatch. Saunders claimed that the main purpose of the new committee is to prevent future campus disruptions, and to bring about meaningful debate and discussion of pressing campus issues.

A meeting of the Committee on Militarism was ending just as Saunders' meeting started. A group from the Militarism Committee came over and infiltrated the freedom meeting. The Freedoms Committee is opposed to the actions taken by the Committee on Militarism.

Saunders opened the meeting by stating that its purpose that night would be strictly organizational and that no actual planning of tactics would ensue. He acknowledged at that time the presence of "disruptive forces". He stated that the overall purpose of the Freedoms Committee was to debate issues. Members of the U-Mass Community "won't take much more radicalness."

At that time, Randy Parr introduced a petition which has been circulating to say that the students here are not in general agreement with the Humphrey disruptions of last week. After that, a discussion started between the members of the two opposing groups as to whether or not the disruption of Humphrey's speech was valid.

The groups talked about language used by Prof. Gadlin, the audience's right to listen, and Humphrey's right to speak. Militarism members said that Humphrey spoke anyway while Freedom organizers stressed that it was not at the scheduled time.

When Saunders decided that there was too much opposition, he asked that each person not specifically interested in forming Freedom Committee to leave. He then terminated the meeting after collecting names of people who are interested in joining Freedoms Committee. Saunders stated that he "cannot continue meetings with disruptions from the opposition."

After the meeting, Saunders stated that after a few closed sessions that he could "filter out the radical wing."

Petition Condemns Humphrey Incident

In reaction to the Humphrey incident, several students have drawn up a petition to condemn the tactics used by persons aborting Humphrey's speech, calling for action against the language by a UMass professor and students who participated in the disruptions.

According to Radny Parr, a student who helped write the petition, "We feel that the University failed to maintain order." The petition, according to Parr, is being circulated secretly.

Specifically, the petition states eight points: (1) The students feel that the act was caused by a flagrant minority, not representing the majority opinion; (2) The complaint is against the tactics used, not the ideology of the disrupters; (3) The petitioners are appalled by the use of abusive language by a UMass professor; (4) The abusive language is only one isolated incident; (5) The petitioners demand a code of conduct for professors if there is not one already; (6) They demand the dismissal of the professor: (7) The Administration should see to it that no more abusive language be used against distinguished visitors: (8) All students who participated in the disruptions should be reprimanded and if it re-occurs they should be expelled.

Randy Parr emphasized that points six and eight were too reactionary. They were dropped from later copies of the petition.

Peter Pan Hikes Prices. Get Tickets by March 16

The Student Union has announced that as of Monday, March 16, Peter Pan Bus lines will raise instate ticket prices 10-12%. The SU bus ticket concession urges that students buy tickets for the spring vacation trip and other future bus trips before March 16 if possible to avoid paying a higher price.

The $6.40 two trip Amherst-Boston ticket must be honored for 30days after the date it is purchased. All other roundtrip tickets must be honored for one year after purchase. One-way tickets must be honored for 60 days after purchase.

For students who use buses frequently, it will be well worth investing in tickets within the next week.

Weekend Programs Send "Silver" Off

Free University City is sponsoring two programs this weekend as a send-off for the eight students who are planning to travel cross-country in the "Silver Bus". These eight students are to receive credit for this experience as an independent study project in the School of Education.

Visiting at various communes, colleges, and free-university groups along the way, they plan to travel as far as Mexico City and back. As they travel, they will be making video tape and film reports to send back to the campus to provide information on the alternative cultures which they are studying. One person they are scheduled to meet is Buckminster Fuller, designer of the geodesic domes which FUC erected on campus last semester.

The send-off programs are scheduled for the Student Union Ballroom on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. On Saturday at 8:00 p.m., there will be a multimedia show involving living theater presentations, a light show, the jugband Gravy, and a folk-rock group from Dartmouth, the Innocent Fox. Sunday at 2:00 p.m., FUC will sponsor a concert by the groups Fat and Flight, both well-known on campus.

Following this send-off, the students will leave sometime during the coming week, to travel and live in the bus for the next three months.

Eclipse Watchers Warned. Naked Sun May Ruin Eyes

On saturday, March 7 at approximately 12 p.m. the Amherst area will witness a partial (93%) eclipse of the sun.

ONE SHOULD NOT LOOK DIRECTLY AT THE SUN WITH THE NAKED EYE, THROUGH A TELESCOPE OR THROUGH THE PINHOLE OF A CAMERA. SERIOUS DAMAGE TO THE EYE MAY BE INCURRED IF THIS WARNING IS IGNORED.

If you wear glasses, one way to view the eclipse is to tape a UNIFORMLY BLACK developed picture negative on to the lenses. However, considering that it may be impossible to expose and develop a film in two days there is an alternative. Take a piece of plate glass (perhaps from a picture frame) and hold it over a candle, cigarette lighter or any other open flame and smoke it completely. It is safe to look at the eclipse through the smoked glass.

REMEMBER, DO NOT LOOK DIRECTLY AT THE SUN!!!!

Interview with Carol Roth

Freshman Stars in W. Side Story

When the University Theatre's production of "West Side Story" opened Wednesday night, freshman Carol Roth delighted the audience with her portrayal of Maria. Her interpretation was delicate and sincerely emotional, and her singing captivated the capacity audience.

In spite of her abundance of talents, it is still rather unusual for a freshmen to win the female lead in a University Theater Production. Carol first became interested in drama while a high school student in Oceanside, Long Island, New York. She played many secondary roles in high-school productions, including Consuela in the school's production of "West Side Story". Last semester, she won a role in the Operetta Guild's version of "Guys and Dolls". But her present role as Maria is her first lead.

If anything was as exciting as the actual performance, it probably was winning the role after four days of auditions. She competed with seasoned upperclassmen from this University and Smith College. Although eager to get the part, the auditioning was none-theless "grueling and tense", as she recalls it. She didn't sleep the night before the fourth audition. After winning the role, intersession was spent rehearsing with the cast for nine hours each day.

Carol modestly feels that one of the reasons for her early success is that very few people start out as theater majors in their freshman year -- that most students switch into it as upperclassmen. Being one of these few freshmen, she is carrying 18 credits. Acting I, voice, ballet and oral interpretation of literature are her theater-oriented courses. Carol said there was, for her, a great deal to learn about playing a lead -- that such a role implied a new and more complex set of relationships to the rest of the cast. There was also the added element that this production of "West Side Story" represented a "coalition" of the music, theater and dance departments, "so that everyone got the opportunity to learn each other's skills".

Carol says she has learned a great deal under the direction of Marya Bednerik and from dance instructor Janet Croft. Having originally planned to teach drama on the secondary school level, she now leaves the future open to whatever possibilities may present themselves, determined to learn, enjoy and gain experience while performing in "West Side Story" and in future productions.

Fee Increase Announced By SU Governing Board

On Thursday March 5th at its regularly scheduled meeting, the Student Union Campus Center Governing Board approved a fee increase effective Fall 1970. The present fee is $15.00 per semester.

The approved increase of $7.50, much lower than the wildly rumored $90. will bring the total fee for Fall '70 and Spring '71 to $22.50 per semester. This increase is subject to review by the Building Authority and the Board of Trustees.

The raised charge is necessitated by the inflationary character of the bond market. Construction of the Campus Center is being financed by student-backed bonds through the Building Authority.

The Governing Board declined support for a blanket plan which would increase the fee an additional $7.50 in Fall '71 and another $5.00 in '72 to a final total of $35.00 per semester. As always, the Student Union Governing Board will each year review any proposed fee increase and act in what it deems the best interest of the Campus Center and the student community.

Black community happenings past and future will be the topic of a discussion Sunday at 8:00 p.m. in the Drop-In Center of Moore House Apartment. Several black brothers from Mills House plan to be there and representatives of the administration and Campus Police are being invited. It is hoped that the whole University community will be represented.

The public is invited.

Tippo Talks On Communication

Chancellor Oswald Tippo took advantage of the Student Union Administration coffee hour yesterday to discuss his views on improving University communications with students.

He explained that his idea is establishing a "University Gazette" would allow the administration to distribute "its side" of any major issue to the campus community quickly and accurately.

Adding that "this would considerably broaden the students' number of news sources" he maintained that the Gazette would supplement the MDC and WMUA in providing the campus with quick information in crisis situations.

The Gazette, as presently envisioned, would be published bimonthly, and would contain administration news releases and academic notices. It is believed that the Provost's office will be in charge of publishing the newsletter.

APO Working for UMass; Pledge Class Increases

Sixty out of 18,000 doesn't sound like a lot. But at the University of Massachusetts, the sixty brothers of Kappa Omicron chapter of Alpha Phi Omega (APO) are a pretty special group of guys.

APO is a national service fraternity which makes them a little different. They place more emphasis on service "to the chapter, the community, the campus and the world," according to President James Giblin, a junior from 23 Frederika St., Dorchester.

The brothers of APO have three ideals: leadership, fellowship an' service, which are all held in equal importance. It is service that is perhaps the most evident in the everyday life of the Amherst campus.

For example, at the start of every semester, APO, jointly with Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority, sponsors a book exchange, where students can buy and sell used textbooks. In the fall, it is APO brothers who man traffic control points and direct traffic as students converge at Amherst for the start of the new school year. If a professor wants things passed out in classes, he can contact APO, who will see that the job is done. The brothers are also on hand to usher at the Small School Basketball Tournament, and at drama productions of the University Theatre and the Roister-Doisters.

Last spring a group of the brothers stayed on campus during the vacation and made up Easter baskets to take to patients at a local nursing home and to the children's ward at Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Each year, APO submits a bid to run the Amherst Fair on the town common. As the consistently low bidders, they make the arrangements for game and food booths, and set up the wood frames. During the fair, at least one of the brothers is on hand to solve any problems that might have arisen. Afterwards, they dismantle the booths and clean up the area.

Life isn't all work, however. Although their national organization rules forbid them to own a house as most other fraternities do, the APO brothers still manage to get together for parties during the big weekends on campus -- such as Homecoming and Winter Carnival -- and they have a reunion at least once over the summer.

In a time when membership seems to be on the decline for many of the traditional Greek-letter organizations, APO hasn't had much trouble recruiting pledges. Giblin estimates that the size of a pledge class has about doubled in the three years since he pledged. In pledges, APO is looking for what Giblin called "a special kind of guy...the kind of guy who will break a date because one of the brothers is in trouble."

Since its founding in 1925, APO has grown to the largest fraternity in the world, with over 400 chapters in the United States and some famous alumni. James Lovell took his APO pin with him on his moon voyage, and on his return, presented it to the APO national organization. The pin rests on a plaque in their Kansas City, Mo., headquarters.

In addition to their service projects, some of the brothers are quite active on campus, serving on committees, as members of the Student Senate, or in residence governments.

Elections within the chapter are held every semester -- twice a year. This means that more members have a chance to serve in an office, gain experience, and then contribute their knowledge in a higher capacity.

Al Baptista, a sophomore from Taunton, is service vice-president responsible for the planning and carrying out of the group's service projects. Herb Weiner, a junior from Newton, is membership vice-president and has the responsibility for the recruiting of new members and interaction between pledges and brothers. Vernie Hatch of Bedford, a sophomore, is fellowship vice-president planning social functions for the fraternity. Bill Vigneux, a junior from Holyoke, executive vice-president, is responsible for coordinating the efforts of the other three vice-presidents. W. Leo Edmunds, a sophomore from Melrose, is the recording secretary and Al Hunter, a sophomore from Framingham, is the fraternity's treasurer.

New Coalition Is Dissatisfied With Tokenism

Action is the basic policy of the New Politics Coalition, an organization dedicated to the creation of local participation in all levels of government.

Dissatisfied with "token changes in American public policy", this group proposes to work towards the organization of persistent pressure groups. These groups will work towards more effective changes in the pollution, war, human rights and poverty situations.

NPC is looking for more members to help in their fight for vitally important legislation. They will periodically publish a bulletin of pending legislation and of local, state and national issues which they feel are not adequately treated by the news media.

If you are interested in membership of this group you may write to New Politics Coalition, 25 Main St., Northampton, Mass. 01060, or telephone at 584-1435.

Peace and Brotherhood is Theme of Sorority Sing

About 200 coeds will participate in the annual Inter-Sorority Sing to be held March 9 at 7:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Admission is free.

Groups of 15 to 20 girls from each of the 10 sororities on campus will sing two selections. One will reflect the 1970 theme of "Peace and Brotherhood". The other is a free choice selection. Songs on the program include " Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head", "Let the Sunshine In", and "Give a Damn".

According to President Terrilyn Geer of the Pan-Hellenic Council, Alan Harler of the Music Department will be one of the three judges. Songs are to be sung without accompaniment and solos are not allowed. The criteria for judging will be appearance, choice of number, and performance.

The winner of the competition will receive an award and a Pan-Hellenic certificate. Certificates will be given to the second and third-place winners.

It Makes You Wonder

The radio speech was never broadcast – but Agnew got 14,000 letters praising it the next day.

What happened was that UPI the news service, also makes news tapes for independent radio stations. A month ago they recorded a full hour of the usual hard-hitting, always missing, Agnew diatribe. The schedule said it was to be broadcast over dozens of stations on the weekend. But a foulup occurred – not a single station aired the speech.

Just the same, come Monday morning, the UPI office was buried under a flood of 14,000 letters of praise. Not a single letter criticized the speech. Agnew was again praised for exposing the effete snobs who march in protest parades.

Three New York TV stations were forbidden by their management to air the story.

It makes you wonder.

HHH Gave Up

RATIONAL

Humphrey was not prevented from speaking during his recent appearance at this University. He was interrupted by the whistles and bells of 500 high-spirited protestors some shouting, "Up against the wall, motherf--cker!" The Demonstrators were exploring an unconventional mode of expression - the right to celebrate their dissent as a speaking audience before the very podium of the establishment they oppose. Humphrey left the podium because the demonstrators were rude, ill-mannered and interruptive. This upset Humphrey, who held himself out as a professor seeking dispassionate discussion in our academic community. But the fact that Humphrey's comfort and other polite bourgoise sensibilities were violated does not mean that anyone's First Amendment rights were violated in the eyes of the law. In the words of the United States Supreme Court, "The First Amendment is a charter for government, not an institution of learning . . ."THOMAS v. COLLINS, 65 S.C. 315." (Bad manners may not be nice but they are not illegal.) Humphrey voluntarily relinquished the exercise of his speech because he believed that he deserved the silent respect of young men and women who had every reason to disrespect this politician for his murderous and repressive conduct in Vietnam and Chicago. During a stormy question-and-answer session the demonstrators responded to Humphrey's answers with loud protest but at no time was a commotion so sustained that the man was actually prevented from giving his address. Justice Douglas, for the majority of the Court, "A function of free speech under our system of government is to invite dispute. It may indeed best serve its high purpose when it induces a condition of unrest, creates dissatisfaction with conditions as they are, or even stirs people to anger. Speech is often provocative and challenging. It may strike at prejudices and preconceptions and have profound unsettling effects as it presses for acceptance of an idea." TERMINIELLO v. CHICAGO, 69 S.C. 894. Brothers and sisters, the real issue facing this campus is the impending repression of vigorous dissent by Massachusetts State legislators "investigating" the Humphrey Demonstrators. It is their right to speak that is in danger, as they press for the acceptance of the idea of vigorous dissent against established power. People of the left, we are beginning to unite in high spirit and solidarity of action.

Good Idea

To The Editor:

I listened with great interest last Thursday night to the illuminating comments of Mr. Robert Brooks, assistant to the dean of students, on WMUA with reference to the recent campus drug raids staged by the state police.

I was particularly struck by Brooks' suggestion that any student whose roommates smoke or possess marijuana should immediately move out and seek alternate housing. In a period when so many administration pronouncements are marred by a certain vague and even platitudinous quality, Brooks' constructive and concrete suggestion is welcome indeed.

All that now remains is for the administration to present its detailed plans for implementing this excellent proposal. To be specific, where, precisely, does the administration propose to provide alternative accommodations for the several thousand students who may wish to follow Brooks' advice?

Further, I would assume the administration is planning to cancel the rent increase as a partial and inadequate compensation for the mental anguish and legal jeopardy of those students who have until now been forced to live with criminal lawbreakers.

Again I salute the administration for at last coming up with an imaginative idea designed to promote student welfare, and I await with interest the steps which will be taken to implement it.

Obscenity

To the editor:

There was quite a bit of what people call "obscenity" at the performance in the Cage Tuesday night, but the real vulgarity in our society is not found among the New Left or at their demonstrations. Rather it is found in ads, carried in the Collegian, that tell me I will "get more in" and "just ask for it, you may get it" if I take a trip to Bermuda. The real vulgarity is in an American policy to depopulate as well as defoliate Vietnam and Laos. The real obscenity is of the American culture based on racism, sexism and the exploitation of man by man. Hubert Humphrey is a representative of the power structure which perpetuates these evils, this vulgar and obscene society. Thus, it seems to me, when he appears and speaks certain things are seen and heard which can be readily and honestly identified as "bullshit." And when someone is giving you bullshit on very important issues, one might be inclined to remark to the speaker "fuck you." So let us be able to identify real obscenity.

If you listen very closely to our politicians, employers, and other masters over our lives, you will hear them saying to us "fuck you". When Julius Hoffman sentenced the Chicago Conspiracy he was saying it, Hubert Humphrey was saying it; and Tuesday in the Cage I was saying it back to them.

Fornicatingly yours,

Ethic Brothers?

TO The Editor:

I, like Brother Carey, am willing to admit my ignorance and so I'll ask the following question: What is the rationale behind the use of the term "brothers" to refer merely to people of one's own ethnic group? (For that matter, exactly what is an ethnic group?) It seems that since we are all human beings, we are all brothers. This includes Brother Carey, Brother Johnson, and Brother Brown. Being a human being implies that one feels a certain amount of brotherly love for one's fellow human beings.

Or at least it should.

Human Rights

To the editor:

To the best of my knowledge, editorials are written with authority of the subject and with logical reasoning. Not with emotional reaction and contradictions such as, ". . . the white population, of this campus, has no financial obligation to the black population of this or any other campus." with, "People, no matter what their skin color, have respect, for a respect for democracy, equality, . . ." Things like that turn my stomach.

The black students of this community are students and the white students of this community are students. As students of this community, we are obligated to aid each other to make the community strong. How can we all be equal if the white are not obligated to the blacks or vice versa? How can a divided community be a strong community? And how can the administration grant a community, that cannot even govern itself because it is divided, the power to actively participate in the administration of this university?

I do not believe in black rights or white rights, but in Human rights. To get Human rights on this campus, it is necessary to unite. Power to the students, all the students.

WILLIAM H. GODFREY

Forgive First . . .

To the editor:

I would like to thank Keith Bromery for his completely objective and untiased account of the occurrances of the night of February 26. I have enjoyed, for the past three years, reading THE COLLEGIAN, especially the editorial page where I could gain some knowledge of what my fellow students are thinking, whether I am in agreement with their views or I totally disagree. However, it horrifies me to think that the rest of THE COLLEGIAN staff could and would permit one of its Editorial Columnist's articles to be printed in a publicly distributed daily newspaper when the said Editorial Columnist has been stricken with a severe case of Diarrhea of the Mouth.

It must be very easy, Mr. Bromery, to be able to grab hold of your pen and let the ink flow steadily without giving a second thought as to what the actual chain of events were or whose names, in fact, you might be slandering. Personally, I was not involved in any way, whatsoever, with the events of that fateful Thursday, but, through Mr. Bromery's totally false account of what happened, I stand a chance of being socially termed "guilty by association".

What really happened that night stemmed from a disagreement between two white fraternity members and four members of the black community which developed into a fist fight between one white and one black. That ended, and shortly thereafter a slight disturbance erupted at the Grinder Truck near Hills House. The whole fiasco snow-balled when blacks came pouring out of Mills to protect their brothers and the fraternity men flew down the street to protect their brothers.

From talking with both sides, I have been assured that at no time was the main purpose of the uprising ignited by sheer aggression; rather that BOTH sides were running to the aid of their BROTHERS. The ratio was actually closer to 15 to 10, tops, and certainly not 10 whites to 1 black as it was most erroneously reported by Mr. Bromery. I must be wrong, though, Mr. Bromery, because you must have been present! Where else could you have gotten such an ACCURATE count?

Let it be known that I am in agreement with the blacks, completely, in what their efforts for the Black Cultural Center represent. I agree with their endeavors for a black dormitory (although I do feel that this type of segregation will not help their cause) and I definitely agree with their desire for equality. What I disagree with are some of their methods which they apply in attempting to gain equality which, I feel, they already possess in the eyes of the majority at this University. Outright violence, regardless of the reason, is merely resented by the white community in general.

On Feb. 26, any approach made by the whites towards the blacks or vice versa was made in an attempt to protect their respective brothers, who each thought were outnumbered. Here is where the present problem lies. Someday, all Human Beings will strive to protect all of their brothers and sisters, BLACK AND WHITE!!

By the way, Mr. Bromery . . . where the hell DID you get your information???

Be friendly, smile first, speak first, and if necessary forgive first.

Brook over the Mill

To the editor:

Three cheers for the "Brook-Mill haven"! They have forced the mental health offices to move. But it seems as though they have no idea of the value of the services provided there or the inconveneince they have created that far outweigh their actions.

During the debates over the room rent hikes, it was brought out that one of the reasons for raising the rent was that there were so many vacancies. With this in mind, it seems as though the most logical alternative for the displaced Mills residents is to move to Southwest, rather than disrupt the Mental Health Offices. If anything, the Mental Health offices should be expanded, not subjected to this disruption, and the whole lot of them in Brook-Mill Haven, moved to Southwest to alleviate the vacancy problems.

Your mental health is like any other disease of the body, comparable to anything from a cough to cancer. There are plenty of beds in the Infirmary, why don't you Mills people take it over? Then the infirmary would be forced to find new housing, and an equal injustice would have occured.

This action was taken without any insight whatsoever, with no thought as to the effect it will have. Someday one of you victorious "Brook-Mill Haventes" will need the services of the mental health office, and when you do, I hope that you get a "Sorry, we're full, there's no room for you." Perhaps only then will you realize what you have done.

Things for The Bride!

To the editors:

In regard to the Bridal Fair this Tuesday, we are deeply disturbed that the women students are allowing such an event to take place on this campus. It is a blatant example of the economic exploitation to which women are constantly subjected. This fair only propagates the myth that women must surround themselves with material goods in order to be perfect brides and wives and in order to achieve status and true happiness. To quote the leaflet distributed by the AMHERST RECORD to most female students in the area . . . "Booths demonstrating the wide variety of THINGS that the Bride will NEED in connection with saying 'I do' will be set up". The leaflet even admits that brides . . . "will spend over $3,000 just to start their new homes . . . over $1,100 of it is on furniture alone... the price of the wedding isn't mentioned". Even though some women do not spend such exorbitant amounts of money, they are, nevertheless, met with a barrage of advertisement that seeks to make them feel inadequate if they do not accumulate the appropriate things supposedly necessary for being bride/wife/mother. Such approaches for pushing things/products are directed primarily towards women as a large consumer body and are highly insulting to women who seek to be more than mindless moneyed objects. It is this advertising technique exemplified in the Bridal Fair that we most vehemently oppose.

I do, I do, I do

To the editor:

A vision of working towards a society which will be able to satisfy the needs of all of its members is both noble and beautiful. However, the following statement displayed by a feminist group in the student union on Tuesday is neither noble nor beautiful.

"Your wedding day is yours - all the rest belongs to him." Shocking? No, it is ugly because it is an insult to the beauty of the deep personal relationship which is possible in marriage. It is ugly because it expresses a complete lack of faith in the kindness, understanding, patience and love of thousands of men for their wives. It is ugly because it rejects any vision of a beautiful and satisfying commitment of a man to a woman in a marriage contract. Is there no man who has fulfilled a woman's life by the taking and living up to of these vows?:

"I,_____, take thee,_____, to be my wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I pledge thee my faith."

Marriage may not be the only answer but it IS an extremely beautiful and satisfying one. Not so? Call 549-0457 after 4 p.m. and ask my wife.

With love,

"Love" For Sale

To the editor:

I read last week of the Bridal Fair coming to the University of Massachusetts. Having seen this Bridal Fair before, at another school, I feel I must express my disappointment and anger that the University is playing host to this group.

It angers me to see so many women misled as I was. The Bridal Fair is not "LOVE" nor is it helpful advice to the future wife and husband. Quite the contrary. It is an attempt to make money off of women by telling them, in so many words, that they cannot be fulfilled as women unless (1) they get married and (2) they furnish their homes and their bodies with the most expensive furnishings and clothing available. Such a perversion of marriage is insulting and damaging enough.

But the insult to women is even greater. I, for one, resented intensely being encouraged to become a mindless, silverware-obsessed, sexual object.

The University should not, in my opinion, allow groups with exploitative means and materialistic, money-making ends to use the University facilities.

Open Minds Can Help

To the editor:

Like the majority of the students at this Universuty I too am white and middle-class, however, I was very fortunate in going to an equally integrated high school I say fortunate because the things I experienced during that time have enabled me to take a very realistic perspective on current racial matters. About half of my close friends were black and through constant interactions their personalities, ideas and concepts became part of me so that I was able to view things as a black person might and empathize (at least partially) with their feelings.

Sadly, most white people cannot do this. They tend to judge situations such as the Mills House incident within the only frame of reference they have - their white one which is unavoidably tinged with racism. Whites must realize that if they wish to gain any understanding of blacks it must come from a black perspective - white liberalism is not capable of determining black needs or how they should be accomplished.

Of course, this is easier said than done and there is no concrete solution. Whites must keep their minds open and if they find it impossible to comprehend they should accept the fact of their incomprehension and stay out of the way. On the other hand blacks should make a stronger effort to help whites understand their opinions and way of life. What is necessary is more personal contact, perhaps through panel discussions, encounter groups or some sort of informal get together. After all, some degree of understanding and cooperation is mandatory if problems are to be solved and I do not think any sensitive, aware human being can doubt the necessity of solving the black problems on this campus and throughout the country.

Poetry Festival Devoted to Moratorium

A March Moratorium Poetry Festival will gather 40 visiting and local poets at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst beginning March 9 for a week of national protest and celebration.

The group of poets represents over 100 published books and a number of Pulitzer Prize and National Book award winners.

Fourteen double, triple and quadruple poetry readings will feature such distinguished poets as John Logan, David Ignatow, Ron Loewinsohn, Michael Harper, Donald Hall, Richard Eberhart, John Wieners, Robert Francis, Sam Cornish, Donald Justice, Kenneth Koch, James Tate, Dudley Randall, Robert Bly, James Wright and Robert Creeley. Many others will also take part.

According to festival coordinators Joseph Langland and Donald Junkins, the poets will join together in a week long effort to probe both the nation's conscience and its consciousness. They will attempt "to focus attention on the social and psychological pollution of the nation, and to personally declare in readings of their own poetry a view of contemporary life in America."

The festival is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Distinguished Visitors Program, assisted by the Master of Fine Arts Program in English. All meetings are open to the public.

Poets Danny Scarborough and John Logan will begin the festival with a reading Monday, March 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 10, 11, 12 and 13, three readings a day will be held -- at 11:15 a.m. in School of Business Administration (SBA) Auditorium 120; at 4:15 p.m. in Herter Hall Auditorium 231; and at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Trackmen Compete in IC4A's

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Tomorrow at Madison Square Garden in New York City the best track and field athletes in the East come together to participate in the annual IC4A Track and Field Championships.

This meet has always been a cavalcade of the very best in track and this year not only will many meet records be in jeopardy of being broken, but also a few national records could be challenged and possibly erased from the books.

Amongst this star-studded field are our own stars from the Redman track team. Coach Ken O'Brien feels that each athlete who will be representing UMass has a chance of qualifying for the finals and scoring in the meet. Each week has shown improvement in its performance and, if everything goes according to form, its improvement should continue in this meet.

Once again the hurdlers and the sprinters appear to have the men to pick up points as they have done all year. The competition in these two events is second to none, but it has been this type of competition that has brought out the best in these Redman performers.

Gerry Spellman, who set a New England hurdle record last week with the time of 7.5 seconds, and Jim Graves, who ran 7.6 seconds in the same event, will be competing against an outstanding field of hurdlers, headed by Oheni Frempong of Yale who won the Heptagonal meet hurdles last weekend with the fine time of 7.1 seconds.

Walter Mayo, the runner-up in the dash at the New Englands, and teammate Ron Harris carry the UMass banner in the 60-yard dash. Dave Marble, who won this event in the Yankee Conference Championships, has not pull recovered from a muscle pull and will not be competing in the meet.

Al Mangan ran his best time of the season last weekend in the 600-yard run and appears ready to make his top performance in this event in the meet.

Captain Dave Evans is entered in the 1000-yard field, which could produce an American record. Keith Colburn from Harvard has gained national recognition in this event and is the heavy favorite to take home top honors. Other top runners in this event are O'Reilly from Villanova and the strong contingent from New England.

Ron Wayne is in the feature race of the meet, the mile run. The favorite is Marty Liquori from Villanova who is the leading miler in the world today. A sub-four minute mile is a possibility in this race.

Cal Carpenter is the Redman hope in the high jump. He jumped 6'6" in the N.E.'s last week and could go higher tomorrow. There are two seven-foot jumpers in the field, Greg Olsen from Army and Clarence Howard from Morgan State.

If the hurdlers or Dave Evans qualify for their respective finals, there will be no mile relay team for UMass.

Garstang and Skiers Shine

UMass skiers will be travelling to North Conway, N.H. again this weekend for their last race which will cap off the finest performance by a Redman ski team in 30 years.

On Saturday, Boston University will be hosting a Giant slalom at Cranmore. There will be eight additional colleges that will be entered in this race from the Tompsin Division of the N.E.I.S.C. On Sunday the Conference championships will be held at Wildcat Mountain. It will be a Giant Slalom and the top three teams from each division will ben entered in this race. UMass (which has already captured the division championship), Northeastern, and Amherst will be the three contenders for the Osborne division of the N.E.I.S.C.

The ski team will also lose its greatest skier this weekend, Jim Garstang will don his UMass parka for the last time. Garstang, a senior, has been skiing for the team for four years and, by his performance this year, is undoubtedly the finest skier ever to race for the Redmen.

Two years ago, his brother, Colen Garstang, led what was then the best team in UMass history. Collen captured the top spot in the N.E.I.S.C. and racers have been trying to beat his record ever since.

Jim had been skiing in his brother's shadow for two years, but this year the talented skier from Pittsfield put his brother in second place. Garstang has won the last five races and placed third in the other two which is a feat that no one in the N.E.I.S.C. has ever accomplished and it is a record that will probably stand as long as there is an N.E.I.S.C.

Garstang has also provided the spark needed by the team to put them on top this year. Garstang has not only captured the number one spot in the N.E.I.S.C. but he has also won the admiration and respect of everyone in the league.

There will probably never be another ski team like the 1970 UMass ski team, but then again, there will probably never be another Redman racer like Jim Garstang.

It all happens this Sunday Night!

So. Carolina Wins Slow-Down Tilt, 34-33

Gamecocks, Clemson Tigers Tied at Half, 12-12

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - Top-seeded South Carolina survived a cat-and-mouse slowdown by the Clemson Tigers to escape with a 34-33 victory Thursday. The victory averted what would have been the most stunning upset in Atlantic Coast Conference tournament history.

John Roche hit two free throws with eight seconds left to nail down the Gamecock win in a weird game in which the half-time score was 12-12.

Clemson worked throughout for the easy layup, passing up long shots and upsetting the tempo for South Carolina, the nation's third-ranked team which now has a 24-2 record.

In the first half, Clemson took only nine shots, hitting four, while South Carolina dropped five of 18. John Ribock's three-point play with 7:52 left gave South Carolina it's first lead at 8-6, but Clemson fought back for a 12-all halftime tie.

South Carolina twice overcame a six point lead in the first 10 minutes of the last half. But Clemson scrapped back for two ties. The last came with 47 seconds left on Richie Mahaffey's layup. That made it 31-all.

South Carolina regained the lead with sophomore Bob Carver's free throw with 31 seconds left. Roche was fouled by Dave Thomas with eight seconds to play and hit both free throws, off setting a closing basket by Butch Zatezale.

Bowdein No. 1 Vermont No. 2 In Seedings

NEW YORK (AP) - Bowdoin is No. 1 and Vermont No. 2 in seedings released Thursday for the Division II Ice Hockey tournament of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

There will be two more teams picked Saturday. Bowdoin and Vermont will host the opening games next Wednesday, and the highest seeded winner will host the final the following Saturday.

Bowdoin is 12-2 in division play and 16-2 over all. Vermont is 10-4 in the division and 13-8 over all.

This will be Bowdoin's first appearance in the tournament. The school previously had a policy against post season appearances.

Other UMass Weekend Sports

In other Redman sports action this weekend the varsity swim team is slated to compete in the Yankee Conference meet at the University of New Hampshire Saturday afternoon at 2:00. Other Conference teams in the meet are Connecticut, Vermont and UNH.

The varsity gymnastics team is away in New York for the E.I.G.L. Championships at Syracuse. Competition began yesterday and continues through Saturday.

ND's Carr is No. Two But He Tries Harder

NEW YORK (AP) - Austin Carr of Notre Dame may be No. 2 to Pistol Pete Maravich of Louisiana State in the major college individual basketball scoring race, but he tops the LSU hot shot in four other categories.

The latest weekly statistics from the National Collegiate Sports Services showed Thursday Maravich on top in scoring, as he has been all season, with a 46.5 average through games of last Saturday.

Carr is second with a 36.5 average, a tick ahead of third place Rick Mount of Purdue at 36.6.

When it comes to field goal percentage, free throw accuracy, rebounding and assists, however, the 6 foot 3 Carr holds an edge on the 6-5, three-time LSU All American and Player of the Year for 1970.

Carr's field goal percentage is .552 to .450 for Maravich. His free throw percentage is .824 to .777 for Pistol Pete. Carr is better on rebounds with an 8.3 average to 5.4 and in assists with an even 6.0 average to 5.9

Carr, a junior, doesn't lead in these categories. In fact, he is far back.

Vic Bartolome of Oregon State tops the field goal percentage list at .652, Jim England of Tennessee is best from the foul line with a .902 percentage. The 7-2 Artis Gilmore of Jacksonville leads in rebounds with a 22.7 average.

No national record of assists was given by the NCSS.

Redmen Wrestlers Seek Upset of Springfield

UMass Wants Revenge in Weekend New England Tournament

By BOB GANLEY Staff Reporter

Revenge will be the uppermost thought in the minds of the members of the UMass wrestling team as they try to bring home their first championship in the New England Collegiate Wrestling Tournament, this weekend at Springfield College.

The tourney, which will be held today and tomorrow, has been won by Springfield for 19 straight years and the Redmen seemed primed to pull off a monumental upset. The Chiefs are number one in the New England rankings with an undefeated New England record, and their 27-7 defeat of the Redmen put the only blemish on UMass' 13-1 New England slate.

The tournament should be a two-team battle, but if a third club does challenge, it will probably be Central Conn. Central finished second last year, edging out the Redmen, but it is weaker this year while UMass is vastly improved.

Coach Homer Barr feels that the Redmen have a 50-50 chance of upsetting the Chiefs. He sights the heavyweight classes as Springfield's weakness and thinks that his team can pile up the points in the 167 and 190-lb. areas.

Barr hopes that seven or eight of the ten Redman wrestlers will place in the top four of their classes. He also feels that Sheldon Goldberg and Tom Young, both number one seeds, may go all the way to win the individual championships.

Other high seeds for the Redmen are Clay Jester, seeded second at 142, Bruce Buckbee, third at 177, George Zguris, second at 190 and defending champ, and Dave Reynolds, seeded third at 126.

The remainder of the UMass team is also strong and all of the wrestlers have been seeded in the top six of their class. Nick DiDomenico is sixth at 118, Jim Godkin is fourth at 150, Mike Brauner is sixth at 158 and Chris Hodson is fourth at heavyweight.

Still, in order for the Redmen to pull off an upset that would be comparable to that of the Mets, they must get help from the other teams. Springfield is very strong in the light weights and the Redmen must be careful not to fall so far behind that they can't catch up.

NICK DiDOMENICC

In the 118-lb. class, Jim McGonigle of Springfield and Joe Fong of Wesleyan should be the finalists. However Riccio of Central Conn and DiDomenico may pull some surprises.

Meyer of Springfield and BC's undefeated Larry McDade head the 126-lb. class ahead of Reynolds. Goldberg, who has been great at 134 lbs., will find his biggest competition coming from Lenny Polizatto of WPI, who is undefeated, but hasn't wrestled Goldberg. Springfield's Sinclair and BC's Maccarini are also strong in this class.

Two - time champ Henry Marchetti of Central Conn. heads the group at 142. Jester, Mills of Coast Guard and Caydosh of Springfield will all be hard pressed to win the class.

Jim Godkin has a chance for an upset at 150. Central Conn's Rosenthal, Springfield's Lint and Dartmouth's Brown are seeded ahead of him, but Godkin has the ability to surprise a few people.

The 158 lb.-class is the strongest in the tourney and it is evident when the defending champ, Don Stahlman of UNH, is seeded fourth. Stebbins of Wesleyan, who is 12-0 on the year, heads the group, but right behind is Springfield strongman Art Zieglar and Holder of Plymouth State. Coach Barr feels Brauner is at his peak and may pick up some valuable points for the Redmen.

COACH BARR

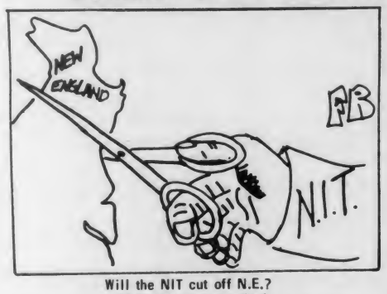
Young is one of the few wrestlers who probably won't have a Springfield man to worry about. The 167-lb. class is rather weak and Tom has a chance to pick up all the marbles.

Buckbee will have to top Barges of Springfield at 177 and Zguris' main problem will be Sklaver of Amherst.

Hooks of UConn and Davies of MIT lead the heavyweights and it may result that UMass' fate in the standings depend on if Chris Hodson can do some damage in this class.

Springfield fans often get over excited over their wrestling team and some Redman supporters counter-balancing them certainly won't hurt UMass' chances.

Leaman & Co Still Sweating Out NIT Verdict



Will the NIT cut off N.E.?
The answer comes today!
MDC Cartoon by Fred Rosenthal

Today is Friday and, by the time some readers get ahold of this issue, the UMass basketball team and its coach Jack Leaman will probably know whether or not the Redmen have been included in the 16-team field of the National Invitational Tournament.

The selection committee will have met sometime this morning, probably late morning, at which time, UMass' chances will be excellent. One will recall that the Redmen were in a three-way tussle with Texas Tech and Creighton for two open tourney slots. However, those two schools have faded considerably after picking up their tenth losses in action this week. Tuesday night Texas Tech bowed to Baylor and, on Wednesday night, Creighton was nipped by Houston.

Two additional NIT spots were filled yesterday with the selection of Missouri Valley Conference powers, Louisville and Cinncinnati. Four spots remain to be filled. Two teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference, one team from the West Coast and UMass are the teams reported to be under heaviest consideration. - - - LET'S GO REDMEN!!! - - -

Julius Erving-A Cage Hero, But He's Also a Person

(Editor's Note: The following is an assignment written by Paul Dinerman for a course, Journalism 201. Stories prepared for this course are subject to publication by the Collegian and this particular one, because of its relevence, deserves space on the old back page. On Monday a seven-part series of interviews by Denise Magnell, featuring several Redman basketball notables, will make its debut.)

A controlled, cool body rises gracefully and a hand slips above the rim and calmly yet powerfully jams the ball through the hoop. A capacity crowd's thunderous roar lifts Curry Hicks Cage into bedlam. Next time down, the lanky lad smoothly and rhythmically propels himself above the rim for a patented two-handed stuff. UMass fans are delighted and chant their approval.

This is the scene on basketball nights at the Cage. As the Redmen warm up, so does Julius Erving and so do the fans. Their long wait in line just to get into the Cage is rewarded through his performance. The crowded, uncomfortable facilities are quickly forgotten as a hanging, twisting Erving drives the lane.

All season long, Julius has been thrilling the people as he has grabbed rebounds, pumped in points, passed with accuracy, played strong defense and even tricky dribbles in leading a fast break. This promising young man has injected adrenalin into the veins of Redman basketball fans.

One's first impressions of Erving are of his remarkable physical attributes. For basketball he is sculptured to perfection, from his 6'5-185-pound frame to his long, lean, searching arms and his big hands. Along with sheer talent, Erving has been blessed with agility. He has an unbelievable knack of suspension. In mid-air, Julius can outwait a defender. Suspended, he waits for an area to clear, a defender to commit himself, a lane to open for a picturesque drive. Often he resorts to a soft arching jumper that can be deadly to the opposing team.

But, and this is so very important, Julius Erving isn't just a jock. He is a human being, a nice guy with intelligent thoughts. He displays a sense of humor, a good head on his shoulders and an awareness and sharpness in character. A stranger might expect a brash, opinionated individual. Instead he meets a modest, likeable, down-to-earth person.

Julius was born and raised in the Long Island area of New York. He attended Roosevelt High of Roosevelt, N.Y., where he participated in football, baseball and basketball. His football and baseball days were short-lived as he saw his potential in basketball develop. He was 6'3 in high school, played guard, center and forward and made All-Long Island.

In choosing a college, Julius had many offers, all appealing, but he selected UMass because he liked the area, considered the school academically-highly rated and wanted a big school where the basketball program was on the way up.

His family has had more than its share of hard luck and financial difficulties. When Julius was 12, his father died. Last year he tragically lost his only brother. Left in the immediate family are a sister and his cherished mother.

Mrs. Erving weathered the severe times through hard work, determination and courage. She became the breadwinner, mealmaker and guardian all at once. Julius speaks from his heart when talking of his mother: "She has done a terrific job in bringing me up and I owe her quite a bit." Mrs. Erving never saw her son play in high school. This year, however, she has attended a few games and "has been my inspiration."

The Era of Erving has hit hard and fast. Julius has remained reserved, even critical of his own game. "I am in good shape, but could be in better. I feel a big reason for our early defeats to Rhode Island Connecticut was conditioning. I am taking things one step at a time. If I get upset, I lose my effectiveness." This is the main reason for his utter calmness and coolness in the heat of battle.

Aside from the court and the books, Julius enjoys rapping with frequent visitors. He relaxes, listens to his "box" ; he expecially enjoys soul groups.

Erving is knowledgeable about professionals and their sports. He particularly admires the talent of Walt Frazier, a member of the New York Knicks. He makes it clear, however, "I don't pattern myself after anyone." His favorite phase of basketball is in "knuckle alley" - the rebounding phase of the game. His frequent bruises attest that Erving has participated.

After the season, Erving will continue to play ball around four times a week. This summer he will return to Roosevelt where he will work as a park instructor or as a delivery man and crew manager for the Afro-American Mothers Club in and around the city. At any rate, basketball will be number one on his summer list.

His ambitions include professional basketball. Barring any unforseen incidents, Julius is a good bet to fulfill his dream. Already he is drawing national recognition.

In his more private life, he concerns himself with worldly events. Racism, Vietnam and drugs, to name a few, affect his thought. He sees them all as bigger than one man but he hopes to add to their solutions.

UMass Waits 'Til Saturday for Bid

Redmen Get Invitation After Suffering Friday Frustration

By JOHN SULLIVAN Sports Editor

At approximately two o'clock Saturday afternoon, the word from New York City finally reached the athletic offices in Boyden Building: the UMass basketball team had received a bid to the 33rd Annual National Invitational Tournament.

UPWARD BOUND - Ray Ellerbrook, captain of the NIT-bound Redmen, was again a major contributor to the UMass cause, especially down the stretch when UMass won its last ten games in a row. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti)

That bid, slated to have come in on Friday, arrived amid an atmosphere of gloom and depression. On that Friday afternoon, everyone and his uncle had anticipated an invitation for the Redmen, but their expectations were frustrated.

Coach Jack Leaman left Boyden at 11:30 Friday morning in disgust, flying down to New Jersey to recruit high school players. Others stuck it out for the rest of the afternoon, but no word came across. By Friday evening things didn't look very good with word out that there was only one opening left to be filled and that two teams, along with UMass, were under strong consideration.

It just looked as though the Redmen would get screwed, as simple as that. But, come to find out, the NIT had passed out but one bid on Friday, to Oklahoma, and had planned to polish off two of the remaining three slots on Saturday.

So came Saturday and, much to the surprise of those around campus, the 14th and 15th teams of the tourney were picked; the 15th was UMass and the 14th was North Carolina. Happiness then took the place of the gloom and the depression. Some of UMass' finest fans got in immediate contact with a U-Haul service center and are planning to rent a truck to accommodate themselves for the trip to Madison Square Garden.

The tournament is scheduled to get under way on this coming Friday. Late word confirmed last night that the Redmen will face powerhouse Marquette next Saturday night at 9. Other pairings were to be announced yesterday and are included in an Associated Press wire release on page 12. Ticket information has yet to be received, publication of which will come out as soon as possible.

In light of so many things, this NIT bid for the Redmen is a dream come true. Back in middle December UMass was so far away from an appearance in the new Madison Square Garden, it appeared as though the Redmen would have a tough struggle playing .500 ball.

Although UMass scored a stunning victory over Providence in the season's opener, the next five tilts could only produce victories over also-rans Vermont and New Hampshire as UM fans saw their favorites drop heart-crushers to Rhode Island, Connecticut and American International College.

After the AIC affair, the Redmen were 3-3. Two victories in the unrenowned Gem City Bowl over Catholic University and Gannon College made things look brighter, but a ten-point defeat to powerful Pennsylvania coupled with a one-point loss to Fordham left the Redmen drained of spirit and hope.

If prospects looked bad after the AIC contest, things just could not be worse than at this point. But UMass bounced back, at first only

Tippo Discusses Cultural Center, CCEBS with Blacks

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

Twelve representatives from the UMass black community and Chancellor Oswald Tippo announced Saturday that "the present residents (of Mills House) will cooperate in lessening tensions by moving out as soon as satisfactory alternative housing can be found."

The group deemed this action necessary in facilitating the remodeling of the dormitory, and stated, "The relocation of the residents of Mills House is not only dependant on mechanical processes of reassignment."

The dorm's white residents moved out of Mills last week.

Tippo and the black representatives met over the weekend upon the request of the black community, which had met Friday afternoon to discuss the Mills House situation. At that meeting the blacks stated that they had arrived at a position "binding on the black community."

After Saturday's meeting with Tippo, the blacks and the Chancellor issued a joint statement announcing the decision to relocate the Mills residents.

This statement also "reaffirmed the integrity of the black cultural center" which is to be established in Mills.

An agreement was reached that "the substantive programs and activities of the Center would be decided by appropriate bodies selected by the black community," the statement asserted.

It was also agreed that "the events and the substantive issues surrounding the Mills House incident were widely misunderstood and that the administration and the black community would cooperate in compiling and publishing a more comprehensive and accurate account of the incident."

And an informed source within the administration disclosed yesterday that this account will probably be included in Tippo's first University Gazette, now expected to make its debut within the next two weeks.

The statement issued Saturday also mentioned the University's CCEBS program and the black studies proposal.

It affirmed the Chancellor's "continued support" to keep the CCEBS program at the top of the school's list of financial and educational priorities.

The statement reported that Tippo "expressed his personal support" for the planned department at the meeting, and that the Chancellor "expressed confidence that a department would be a reality in the near future."

"The chancellor also reaffirmed his support for the proposed Five College Cooperative Effort in Black Studies," according to the statement.

The UMass Black Studies proposal is currently before the University's Faculty Senate, and acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Seymour Shapiro has stated that he believes "the plan will clear the Senate before the end of the month."

The proposal has already been approved by the College of Arts and Sciences, and once the Faculty Senate ok's it, only Board of Trustee approval will be needed for its establishment.

Matters of Mutual Interest

The following is the text of the statement released after Saturday's meeting between Chancellor Tippo and 12 representatives from the Black Community.

"A number of matters of mutual interest were discussed. On the question of Mills House, it was decided that the present residents will cooperate in lessening tensions by moving out as soon as satisfactory alternative housing can be found. The relocation of the residents of Mills House is now only dependent on mechanical processes of reassignment.

During the meeting Chancellor Tippo reaffirmed that continued support of the CCEBS Program remains at the top of the University's priorities.

The progress of the Black Studies Department was discussed and the Chancellor expressed his own personal support of the plans for the department and expressed confidence that a department would be a reality in the near future. Moreover, he reaffirmed his personal support for the proposed Five College Cooperative Effort in Black Studies.

The meeting reaffirmed the integrity of the Black Cultural Center. An agreement was reached that the substantive programs and activities of the center would be decided by appropriate bodies selected by the Black Community.

There was also agreement that the events and substantive issues surrounding the Mills House incident were widely misunderstood and that the administration and the Black Community would cooperate in compiling and publishing a more comprehensive and accurate account of the incident."

Amherst Faculty Establishes First Of Five-College Black Studies Depts.

The Amherst College faculty voted unanimously Tuesday night to create a Black Studies Department which will eventually become part of a program for the five institutions of Hampshire, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and Amherst Colleges and the University of Massachusetts.

The issue of a formal Black Studies Department was emphasized following the seizure of four Amherst buildings on February 18 by black students from the five college community. At that time they presented to Amherst president Calvin H. Plimpton and the Presidents of Smith, Mount Holyoke, and the University of Massachusetts, a 45-page document which contained, among other things, a proposal for the creation of a Five College Black Studies Program.

Amherst is the first of the five institutions to establish a formal Black Studies Department. Until Tuesday evening, Black Studies at Amherst had been only a "program," not an official department.

The Five Colleges are acting jointly to reduce competition among themselves for scarce black faculty members to teach Black Studies and to create in 1970-71 a coherent curricular program that would enable a student in any of the institutions to draw upon the Black Studies offerings in all five institutions as he shapes his major program.

The Black Studies program will be directed by a ten-man committee, composed of the Black Studies department chairman and one student from each college. This group, called the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee, will have the power to recommend course offerings and faculty appointments in Black Studies.

Specifically, the Executive Committee will make recommendations concerning faculty appointments and curricular offerings to each of the appointment committees and to the committees on educational policy of the colleges.

The actual text of the Amherst faculty's three-point decision was: '1. to establish a Department of Black Studies; 2. to recognize the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee, when it comes into existence, as the body with power to recommend future appointments and course offerings in Black Studies; 3. to urge the President and the Committee of Six to appoint a faculty member, with the advice and consent of the black community at Amherst College, to serve on the Interim Executive Five College Black Studies Committee."

The Interim Executive Committee is to consist of ten members: a faculty member and a student from each of the five colleges. It will function until chairmen are located for the departments of the individual institutions.

Other proposals from the black student group include a Five College "Bridge" Program -- designed to provide a transitional summer of study for students who have been admitted to one of the five colleges -- which will be discussed later this spring.

Reischauer Speaks Tues.

Former United States Ambassador to Japan Edwin O. Reischauer will speak on "Asia In The Seventies" at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 10, in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Mr. Reischauer, since September, 1966 a professor at Harvard University, served with distinction as United States Ambassador to Japan from 1961 to 1966. His mission was the culmination of long experience in Asia. He was born in Tokyo in 1910 and lived in Japan until 1927, and he has returned many times since then for study and visits to Japan as well as to China, Korea, and other areas in the Far East.

From 1956 to 1961, Reischauer was director of the Harvard-Yenching Institute and was president of the Association for Asian Studies from 1955 to 1956.

Among his books are: "Japan Past and Present," "The United States and Japan," "Wanted: An Asian Policy," with J.K. Fairbank; "East Asia: The Great Tradition," and "East Asia: The Modern Transformation."

This group of sun worshippers chose the island of the campus pond as their vantage point to view Saturday afternoon's partial eclipse of the sun. They were joined by thousands of UMies who chose to watch from balconies and sidewalks, while numerous stereos played "Here Comes the Sun." The more adventuous journeyed to Cape Cod, where the eclipse approached totality. (MDC photo by Al McArdle)

Black Student Demands Still Unmet at Colby

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) - Barred from Lorimer Chapel where black students continued their six day sit in, Colby students attended religious services yesterday in the Boxler Art and Music Center.

One of the eight blacks who took over the Chapel Monday night said further discussions were anticipated with the administration on the demands posed by the Student Organization for Black Unity.

He reiterate d the group's intention to remain in the building until all the demands are met. They include increased black enrollment and a black studies program.

The administration also said additional talks were contemplated but no time has been set for the two sides to meet. Discussions last week failed to produce an agreement.

The Colby Alumni Council, at a meeting in Boston Saturday, unanimously adopted a resolution praising Colby President Robert E. L. Strider for the way he has dealth with the dissident group.

Street Demonstrating No Longer Effective

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sam Brown a man who has spent much time organizing street protest demonstrations said yesterday the practice is losing much of its effectiveness.

Brown was a major coordinator of the Vietnam Moratoriums held here last year.

He made his assessment on the Metromedia Radio News program Profile.

He added, "It's very difficult these days for people to relate to other people being in the streets."

Asked what protesters can do now, Brown replied, "I think we have to go back into local communities. We have to find ways to relate to people in their own environment and that means you have to do a great deal of door to door neighborhood kind of work."

It was suggested that President Nixon has taken the steam out of anti-war protests by his Vietnamization program and Brown said, "I think that depends a great deal on circumstances in Vietnam," and he predicted that Nixon has three or four months remaining in his credibility about what's happening in Vietnam.

Confrontation over Land Between Indians and Army

SEATTLE (AP) - Military police reportedly took as many as 4 persons, most of them Indians, into custody yesterday when a group of Indians tried to occupy a portion of Ft. Lawton here.

With the group was actress Jane Fonda, but she was not taken into custody.

The Indians attempted to claim a portion of the fort, scheduled to be declared surplus by the Army, shortly before noon. MP's quickly escorted the group off the post.

An hour later, Indians were seen climbing fences and scaling a high bluff overlooking Puget Sound to gain entry onto the fort. They were met by members of the Army's 392nd Military Police Reserve unit, at the fort for weekend active duty. Seven were reportedly taken into custody.

One of the Indians, a youth who identified himself only as Young Robbed Bird Free at Last, said the Indians wanted to read a proclamation asking that an ecology center and a cultural educational center for Indians be established.

Later, there were reports up to 4 persons had been taken into custody. Army officials declined to say how many were held, but said all had been released without charge by late afternoon.

Diplomatic Exchange

GUATEMALA (AP) - Guerrillas freed U.S. Diplomat Sean M. Holly yesterday after holding him for 38-1/2 hours as a hostage in return for the freedom of jailed rebels. He was unharmed.

The release came 9-1/2 hours ahead of the Sunday afternoon deadline set by the guerrillas for his execution if the rebels were not released.

Senate Sponsors Vietnam Balloting

A UMass war referendum vote will be taken this Tuesday as part of a nationwide project being run locally within each state. Its national coordinator is the Student Association of The American University in Washington, D.C., acting in conjunction with two student political organizations, The Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) and the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC). This apolitical poll of over 1000 schools is being run on this campus by the Senate Social Action Committee.

YAF and SMC, which hold opposing views on the issue of involvement Vietnam, are both pushing for nationwide support of their particular positions this spring. They are planning this referendum as an opportunity for students to let the nation know how the majority of its students feel about Vietnam. A single question will appear on the ballot, reading: DO YOU SUPPORT THE IMMEDIATE WITHDRAWAL OF ALL AMERICAN TROOPS FROM VIETNAM? -- VOTE YES or NO.

The sponsors hope that the response to this one question will answer several others, such as the following: --Do you agree with Nixon's policy of withdrawal? -- Is the war acceptable or despicable to you? --Is it a conflict you support or one you refuse to perpetuate?

The referendum will be held in the Student Union Ballroom, Tuesday March 10, 8:30-5:00. Results of the poll are to be published prior to the April Moratorium. Anyone who would like to help run the balloting on Tuesday should contact John Jablonski in the Student Senate Office.

Pan-Hellenic Sing Tonight in Bowker

About 200 coeds will participate in the annual Inter-Sorority Sing to be held March 9 at 7:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Admission is free.

According to President Terrillyn Geer of the Pan-Hellenic Council, Alan Harler of the Music Department will be one of the three judges. Songs are to be sung without accompaniment and solos are not allowed. The criteria for judging will be appearance, choice of number, and performance.

The winner of the competition will receive an award and a Pan-Hellenic certificate.

Tuesday, March 10, 7:30 Thompson 102, CHANCELLOR OSWALD TIPPO will discuss the topic - "University Expansion" Everyone is invited. Sponsored by the Interdepartmental Student Committee.

Give

"Shamrocks for Dystrophy" Day is here. This nationwide, two-day, fundraising crusade to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association of America will take place at the Student Union Lobby, Monday and Tuesday, the 9th and 10th of March. A campus wide collection will take place in all dorms, sororities and fraternities Tuesday evening.

Originating at the University of Michigan, this unique fund raising drive on the University of Massachusetts campus is being sponsored by Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity. Venture: Seven minutes to save a life.

The problem: lifesaving clinical tests of blood, urine and spinal fluid may take technicians hours to perform using traditional methods.

The possible solution: design a virtually complete chemical laboratory in a desk-sized cabinet that will perform a variety of clinical tests automatically, accurately, quickly.

The result: Du Pont's Automatic Clinical Analyzer, the end-product of years of cooperation and problem solving among engineering physicists, biochemists, electromechanical designers, computer specialists and many, many others.

The heart of the instrument is a transparent, postcard-sized reagent packet that functions as a reaction chamber and optical cell for a computer-controlled analysis of specimens.

Separate packs—made of a chemically inert, optically clear plastic—are designed for a variety of tests. And each pack is supplied with a binary code to instruct the analyzer. Packs for certain tests also contain individual disposable chromatographic columns to isolate specific constituents or molecular weight fractions on the sample.

In operation, the analyzer automatically injects the sample and diluent into each pack, mixes the reagents, waits a preset time for the reaction, then forms a precise optical cell within the walls of the transparent pack and measures the reaction photometrically.

A built-in solid-state computer monitors the operation, calculates the concentration value for each test and prints out a report sheet for each sample. The instrument is capable of handling 30 different tests, the chemistry procedures for ten of which have already been developed. The first test result is ready in about seven minutes. And in continuous operation, successive test results are obtained every 35 to 70 seconds, depending on the type of test.

Innovation—applying the known to discover the unknown, inventing new materials and putting them to work, using research and engineering to create the ideas and products of the future—this is the venture Du Pont people are engaged in.

FROM OUR SIDE

Congratulations, Redmen

The excitement and enthusiasm raised by the UMass basketball team has to be one of the most amazing stories of the last year. UMass apathy is too well known. Therefore the turnaway Cage crowds, the hordes of fans travelling to away games, the interest shown by jammed up phones the past week caused by N.I.T. inquiries, are all a phenomonon.

With a National Invitation Tourney bid received this weekend, the greatest basketball team in UMass history caps a record-breaking season. It is the culmination of a building process initiated four years ago by Jack Leaman and the beginning of a dynasty. It is also the first step in making UMass basketball a way of life on campus.

To Jack Leaman, Peter Broaca, Ray Wilson, Ray Ellerbrook, Jack Gallagher, Dick Samuelson, Dennis Chapman, Ken Mathias, Bob Dempsey, Bill Greeley, Sam Provo, Julius Erving, John Betancourt, Mike Pagliara, Rich Vogeley, Bill Kesgen, Chris Coffin, Jim Laughnane, and Dave Larsen, good luck. You'll have a helluva lot of people behind you.

Between the Decisions

....it is the middle of the day, amherst's eyes be tight shut. all but twelve pipers and six hip bull sisters who prance the street...the aluminum knight is foiled again, stapled to his horseless saddle...the bride in the penny arcade is framed in eternal climax pretty as a picture, mounted on a portable threshbold...and the whole world is a mirror of myself dizzy miss lizzy...startled and starry eyed i gazed at the daily sheets and all i could visualize on this beautiful centerfold spread were album cover liner notes...you know, the gravy they wipe on their sleeves...all that wonderful taste gone to waste. be that as it may, album cover liner notes be they by bob dylan or al kooper or jeff beck or andrew loog oldham, give you something to read whilst you're deciding whether to buy the merchandise...namely the record. so while you're reading the editorials wondering what to believe...have a look here between the decisions. (surely i won't be called trippy by my cohorts when i tell them i still see liner notes in the collegian. i did some up for all to see!)

...a guy stops me on the street and gives me a friendly tip: listen kid...you ain't no dirty radical campus crud are yuh? don't let king valentine get ahold of you if y'are. he kills he maims...wow! kind! he's the latest neighborhood fascist pig.....oh ma-aaa there's a fanatic in the attic...and he wants to get out! - sorry junior but i'm awful busy at the moment i'm rinsing my hair.....ma-aaaaa! he says he hates anyone that isn't a blond or a redhead...should i let him out before he kills us? - no junior just keep him company until i'm through with my rinsing.

so i go up to him...he's in the attic alright sitting on an old chest of drawers, cussing and stomping in a temper tantrum. after awhile i kick him in the adam's apple and his tantrum is over. he's the original king valentine. he gets ahold of hippie types and ties them up in his backyard against a wall and gives them a last reefer then gets his eight kids who line up and he gives them each a pistol and they shoot. then he sends them off to the movies and finishes reading the paper. anyway...i humor him for around 20 minutes till mother comes upstairs and meets my new acquaintance. ma i want you to meet king valentine... he lives three blocks down the street...she smiles...he kisses her knuckles and pulls out a fuller brush and sells that to her along with a pair of shoelaces and a comb which we get free. he leaves by the back-door and is never seen or heard from again... in the skilled labor department -- the best way to fight a horse is with hoffs attached outward in a juxtaposed position (if you have hands instead of hoofs see fig. 3a on front cover)...the horse will be ready in a similar way... don't come out of your corner unless you need a glass of water as there will be no drinking in the ring. have a good clean bout and listen for the bell.

...the latest thing is organized religion: leeches that suck away the sin...new mini-medieval bleeding technique for the now generation. ho hum later on i did some errands and a host of unclassifyables. king classified is really the last tried and true daytime hunter left after the great "mundane drain" which shook and rocked my neighbor - hood for near three weeks. my fingers were nervous and walking. i was scared. man was i scared!...in those days paranoid hadn't been invented yet... nad if it had, no one way paying much attention to it. guess the cat who made that up got all the royalties after he was dead and sprawled asunder. his wife though, who survived him thoroughly, did get a few hundred thou trickling in from dictionary sales of which 35% of the people who have bought dictionaries in the last decade have bought them solely to look up the word paranoid. they want to justify their moods when nothing seems to work out right...like when my bubble gum gets stuck in my beard when i pop a bubble, and doesn't go well stuck all over my face when i wear striped shirts. my fashion designer advises that i shave off my beard and take up the harp. no thanks. i'm my own boss and i'll give to the heaven of my choice until i get it down to a final t. key agnes...will you flip over the record? down home girl is on the other side followed by the alphabet cereal cowboys doing "jerk the lightweight lexicon off my spud-shoulder potato chip"...can't get any more symbolical than that -- well what about satan's stepfather... hmmm? - slide down the bannister while he walks to hell. i like that! shows gumption if a man walks to hell. shows he's as humble as abe lincoln with his library books and the cat who walks a mile for a camel. well i just had to laugh...i saw the photograph...life is like the petal on a daisynow by the mushroom path again...the doctor knew the score as he pouted with a grin, as he buffed the lacquer with his chin..."o.k. groupies...have a good weekend!"

Ethics

To The Editor:

Below is a sarcastic response - pardon me for being bitter - to a pseudo-personal sales pitch I recently received from a leading news magazine (the same pitch every 3rd or so person on a list of UMass students received).

"Dear Mr. D———:

I may be wrong, but I have reason to believe your interest in business ideas and issues is more intense than most people's.

"The very fact that your name was selected and appears as the signature on Newsmonth's recent letter to me tells me that you take the time to examine the pros and cons of current events -- whether you're in the office at Newsmonth, travelling from place to place, or at home.

"You read a lot (although a lot more than you'd like to -- e.g., this letter) and you have opinions. Marketing, inflation, law and order, and the Newsmonth put-on. "You name it. You're interested. "You know what side you're on, too. And you know why.

"Or do you? As I said, I may be wrong about you. You may be one of those magazine people who print all the news that's fit to print, and little else. If so -- forgive me. And don't read another word. "But, if you're the sort of person I think you are, welcome!

"Welcome to my opinion!

"Welcome to a person who tells it to you straight. And fast. And factual. There are more than 500 seasoned reporters and correspondents poised at Better Business Bureaus in major cities around the country. Repent!

"For fact, opinion and just plain entertainment, there's nothing quite like your Newsmonth put-on. And what better time than now to repent -- when you can take advantage of this special offer:

30 weeks of ETHICS IN BUSINESS for only $3.50!

"That's less than 12¢ a copy -- $3.43 less than the regular subscription price and a whopping (in every sense of the word) $11.50 less than you'd pay for 30 weeks of Newsmonth at the newsstand!

"What's more, if you don't like ETHICS IN BUSINESS after reading 3 issues, we'll send you a prompt refund on all unmailed copies....

"Simply peel off the label at the top of this letter and affix it in the proper position on the enclosed savings certificate. A postage paid return envelop is provided. No need to pay now unless you wish -- we'll be happy to bill you later.

"And we'll be happy to welcome you, Mr. D———, as a regular ETHICS IN BUSINESS reader...

For All to Read:

There has been a lot of confusion about who is responsible for saying what in the editorial section of the Daily Collegian. Actually it's really very simple, but the readership of this newspaper, for some reason, doesn't care to read the small print included in the mast (the mast is the two column by three inch box that lists the Board of Editors, the daily staff, and the policy concerning editorials). The editorials which are run, always, in the upper left corner of the editorial page, in big, thick 12 point print, and which are unsigned, represent the views of this paper decided upon by a majority vote of the Board of Editors, and only the Board of Editors. All other editorials, either by members of the editorial staff or by people who are not regularly committed to this paper, represent the personal views of the writers and all Letters to the Editor represent the views of the individual writer.

But, for some reason, readers misunderstand this very simple policy. They attack or support the entire paper when they are distressed or impressed over something someone else wrote in a signed editorial or a Letter to the Editor. If a reader really wanted to express his opinion over an editorial printed in this paper, his opinion should be addressed to the individual who wrote the piece.

If we do not print everything that is addressed to the editorial section of the paper, we are accused of being biased. And if we do print everything, we are leaving ourselves open to a lot of misdirected attacks and unwarranted support; in short, a lot of misunderstanding.

For reasons of space, we cannot print everything that comes in, and for reasons of taste we will now print even less. The Board of Editors has established a policy concerning personal vendetta, obscenity, and libel which will be adhered to more strictly now than in the past.

With this in mind, and on behalf of the Board of Editors, I would like to apologize for Patrick Carey's Letter to the Editor of March 3rd. The letter was a personal attack on an individual because of his race.

I would also like to apologize for any other statements which were "offensive" and were printed in the editorial section of the Daily Collegian since February 11, 1970.

Some of these statements were tagged "fascist, racist, radical, leftist, revolutionary, etc. In fact, one statement was called fascist and leftist by two different people.

And I personally would like to apologize for believing that everyone has something to say.

Brides

To The Editor:

In regard to the Bridal Fair this past Tuesday, we are deeply disturbed that the women students allowed such an event to take place on this campus. It was a blatant example of the economic exploitation to which women are constantly subjected. This fair only propagated the myth that women must surround themselves with material goods in order to be perfect brides and wives and in order to achieve status and true happiness. To quote the leaflet distributed by the AMHERST RECORD to most female students in the area.... "Booths demonstrating the wide variety of THINGS that the Bride will NEED in connection with saying 'I do' will be set up....". The leaflet even admits that brides... "will spend over $3,000 just to start their new homes.... over $1,100 of it is on furniture alone.. the price of the wedding isn't mentioned." Even though some women do not spend such exorbitant amounts of money, they are, nevertheless, met with a barrage of advertisements that seek to make them feel inadequate if they do not accumulate the appropriate things supposedly necessary for being bride/wife/mother. Such approaches for pushing things/products are directed primarily towards women as a large consumer body and are highly insulting to women who seek to be more than mindless moneyed objects. It is this advertising technique exemplified in the Bridal Fair that we most vehemently oppose.

Barrus

TO The Editor:

There are a few facts which may make Senator Barrus' allegation that a UMass student "was so badly beaten that he required hospitalization" seem a little less objectionable. The probable student in question was attending a faculty member's party on Saturday night, 28 February, where he was set upon by an individual who proclaimed himself as the organizer of the confrontation at the Cage on the previous Tuesday. (This individual is neither enrolled nor employed at the University).

In the brief, but fierce, scuffle which followed what all witnesses present termed an insufficiently provoked assault, a cut was opened under my left eye which a first rate doctor at the Infirmary closed with four stitches.

Senator Barrus apparently heard of this incident from my mother, who in turn heard it from my understandably hysterical wife as I lay recovering on the floor. In short, Barrus' statement that a UMass student was beaten in connection with "Humphrey's right to speak" is true. It may not be Barrus' fault that the UNION story did not specify where and when the incident took place.

(Name withheld by request).

Meeting

To The Editor:

I read in the MDC on several successive days an advertisement emploring "people" to come to a meeting in the S.U. Ballroom at 2:15 on Friday March 6th if they cared about "the community, the Black Cultural Center, the continued presence of Black Students Here or a just solution to the problems."

It was claimed that "A great deal of confusion and misinformation exists of Thursday evening and the designation of Mills House as a Black Cultural Center."

A day or so before I read a letter to the editor in the MDC where someone was saying that people blamed the Blacks for something the Whites had precipitated at Mills House and that no one really knew the Black side of the story or understood the way Blacks felt.

Well I went, rather tried to go, but could not gain admittance to this meeting.

I would just like a little response as to how the Blacks expect the Whites to understand their problems if interested Whites aren't allowed to even hear the Blacks' side of things.

To Clarify

To The Editor:

Since I have been asked by a number of faculty and students about a letter appearing in the Collegian, Thursday, March 5, 1970 over the name of Paul Saunders as Chairman of the Freedoms Committee, I wish to state through your columns that I am not the person in question nor the writer of the letter.

The maximum length for all letters to the editor is two pages, typed at sixty spaces, and doublespaced. Each letter must carry the writer's signature, address, and telephone number. Equality?

To The Editor:

Mr. Boissonneau's racist statements towards the black community was to me an attempt to warn black people to "stay in their place". As a black student here at this University, I feel that I must tell you that "Baby, you're damn misinformed."

The whites here on campus, if they care at all about the black cause and identity, should help finance the cultural center (that is, if the administration refuses to do so). Why? Well 400 years of denying blacks an identity, stripping them of pride, and repressing every attempt to reach equality is a good place to start. Not your fault, perhaps but it sure as hell is the legacy that your parents and grandparents so graciously gave you.

Mr. Boissonneau, how do you think black people can finance the cultural center, when most of my people require financial aid just to come to UMass? (Not all Americans live a stable life in suburbia). As far as the mental deterioration of the displaced white students goes, I think that somehow they will survive such a traumatic experience. I say this to all white students, "What can be more mentally deteriorating than 18 years of "BOY", "NIGGER," and "COON." What was more "mob rule" than the roughing up of my black brothers? All for a damn fling.

Mr. Boissonneau how can you honestly expect me as a black man to respect democracy which I have yet to see, equality that is hidden from me, and law and order which have been used by the pigs as an excuse to commit wholesale murder on my people. White people may someday rise up in vengeance, but what do you think black people will do, sit on their asses? Ain't no way baby.

Mental Health

To The Editor:

The Mental Health Services are vacating Brooks dormitory so that 21 Mills' residents will have a new and permanent 'home'. Mental Health at this university serves many more than 21 people. This move will disrupt the work done with each of these other people individually on two levels.

First, the psychological impact of this change of surrounding is not trivial. To the 'average well-adjusted' college student, the move from a girls' dormitory building to a mathematics department building may seem inconsequential, but the lack of continuity which the change creates can be of considerable importance to those people that the Mental Health Services are designed to serve.

Second, the time and energy spend in this unplanned move will be at the expense of those same students which the Mental Health Services try to help.

The selfishness of the women of Brooks' dormitory in extending their invitation to the residents of Mills House without considering the ramifications for a considerable part of the university community, and the selfishness of those 21 men in accepting that invitation and refusing to consider any alternatives (Gorman House) is monumental.

The rights of the women of Brooks' dormitory to establish a community of THEIR OWN design is not disputed, but their insistence that things be done in THEIR OWN time is alarming. Any group, to be self-governing, must have a broader conscience.

Africa

To The Editor:

Re Mr. Carey's letters in the Collegian defying anyone to name just ONE ancient African civilization. To begin, the following list is extremely incomplete for two reasons: archaeological excavations in Africa are relatively recent and it is written completely off the top of my head. Also, all the following do not antedate the Minoan culture, for I do not view such criteria as in any way significant. The Minoans are not representative of all Europe, or even Greece, at that time, for it wasn't until about the Middle Ages that a majority of Europe reached a stage of "high civilization." The majority of African empires were at their peak, and a university was in existence in Ghane, when William the Conqueror was whipping MY barbarian ancestors at Hastings (of Mr. Carey's Minoan relatives I have no knowledge).

The Nubian empire was in constant contact, through trade and wars, with the Egyptians since the time of the Old Kingdom. Early Egyptian records mention such Black nations as "Punt" and "Cush." Also recent evidence seems to indicate that much of Egyptian art and science, especially astronomy, were directly gained through contact with the Nubians. Meroe was later the Nubian capitol and recent excavations have revealed buildings of beautiful and advanced stone architecture. The sites of Ma'rib in southwestern Arabia and Zimbabwe in Rhodesia represent what remains of two highly developed Black (Ma'rib had a large African population though technically is considered Arab) cultures dating in the first few centuries after Christ. After this and during Europe's "Dark Ages", Africa flourished with numerous highly developed empires: Bornu, Songhai, Kanem, Zinj, Mali, Ghana, Ife, and Benin. The collapse of these great empires was a direct result of the imperialistic intervention of Portugal, Spain, France, and Britain; who brought with them such "civilized" ideas as mass slavery, racial superiority, and genocide (not to mention venereal diseases).

As a postscript, I would like to know, Mr. Carey, what is your definition of "civilization" and don't you know that a people's life style at a particular moment in the past is no indication of their present or future "civilization level".....

To The Editor:

I cannot help but sit amazed at the sacrifice of a certain lieutenant somewhere in Georgia (I never did like the South). To think that in an army of discipline, an army based on a class system, only one young peon officer is totally blamed for a bar brawl in a Southeast Asian village. Somewhere a conspiracy boils and not in the city of Chicago. I know and you know where that conspiracy exists. Ask George and Martha.

Therefore, call for his pardon--free him--FREE LT. CALLEY.

To the editor:

. . .As female residents of Brooks we would like to explain our view in the Mental Health issue. Let it be understood that long before the Mills incident we had been exploring all the possibilities for the suitable relocation of the Mental Health offices.

We fully realize the implications of the moving of Mental Health, but do you understand OUR needs? At present our facilities are far from adequate; we have one small lounge used simultaneously for cooking and eating meals, use of stereo, television and piano, studying and the entertainment of guests. Due to lack of space, it is not an uncommon sight to see girls studying in the corridors and stairwells. With Mental Health relocated we would have the needed facilities, the ability to house more residents, and most important, a stronger sense of community. We feel the twenty-one Mills men have this and will help us build it for ourselves.

We understand the inconvenience the move is causing Mental Health. We have all offered our services in everyway possible; helping them move, exploring alternatives, and even fighting to get the space and location that we feel they well deserve. This cannot be found in Arnold House, Brooks House or any other dormitory on campus. However, Arnold House was the best tentative solution.

We would like to thank Mental Health for their cooperation, the Math Department for their generosity, and the Student Senate for their support.

To the Editor:

Within such a bureaucratic, computerized complex as a university, it is often impossible and irrelevant to single out a particular entity functioning by its own initiative for the good of the entire community. On the evening of March 4, the English department alienated itself from THE MACHINE and showed true concern over the pressing issue of Mills House. It was truly concerned about all the political, social, and economic implications carried by the incident.

The interest was demonstrated not by submitting an IBM card or through instigating a thorough political investigation, but by a number of English instructors who forfeited their time to talk with the students, individually, in their dormitories. Having been one of the individuals confronted, I feel it worthwhile to single out such concern as being the pioneer type behavior which should not be pioneer at all. The treatment of such problems in a relaxed, academic environment, seems to me, the ideal university atmosphere which should have prevailed long before the incident occurred. It was certainly one of the more rewarding experiences I have come in contact with at the University. I, therefore, extend my support and REINFORCEMENT to the English department, hoping my REWARD will INCREASE the probability of the occurence of the ELICITED RESPONSE. (Where was the psychology department?) And I hope the Role of the English department will continue as an interested SUB-CULTURE of the UNIVERSITY. . .

A Debt

To the Editor:

See what happened when the Black People rose up, clenched their fists, and cried out "All Power to the People", liberated a building, and brought the Third World Revolution home to UMass; all the materialistic racists got out of their bags to defend their stand.

In response to a letter entitled "Mills House One Letter" written by Mr. Paul A. Basile which appeared in the March 3, Collegian, I would like to thank Mr. Basile for making those half-hearted paradoxical statements in support of the Black Cultural Center. I would also like to inform Mr. Basile that there were black students on this Campus before C.C.E.B.S. came into effect and, now that C.C.E.B.S. has extended financial assistance to some others, in an attempt to integrate the campus, the fact still remains that it's not every black student here who receives financial assistance from C.C.E.B.S.

In his letter Mr. Basile implied that the black student should show some kind of gratitude to the white students who are making it easier for them to receive a College Education or, like we would say, to get brain washed. There are still a few other facts that I think Mr. Basile should try and familiarize himself with. In the C. C. E. B. S. program there are some white students that are receiving financial assistance from them so he had better call on those white students to show some gratitude to those that are making it easier for them to receive a College Education.

I suppose Mr. Basile had forgotten that UMass happened to be a state college, therefore it receives a large amount of its funds from the state. In turn, the state receives its funds through taxation, and sometimes black people get around to pay a little taxes. In that case I would say that the state owes the black student the same amount of obligation in providing them with an opportunity to receive a college education the same way they owe the whites.

I also noticed that Mr. Bastle commented on the popularity of the black students on the campus, but, if he look back on why they were demanding that Mills House should be given to them he will see the entity of their demands. It was for the establishment of a Black Cultural Center, in other words the blacks wanted to do their thing, they did not demand that they be allowed to join any of the fraternities or any other organization on the campus. I don't know about you, but to me their actions did not demonstrate that they were trying to be popular. If Mr. Bastle thinks that the blacks that occupied the Mills House are trying to be popular or integrate then I have got to use Stokely Carmichael's cryptic phrase "Hell No"; those students that occupied Mills House had no intention of being a part of this white racist system they wanted to talk about black people and nothing but black people. . .

. . .The third world revolution is on and Black People are the vanguard so you had better start adjusting to the ideas of it or split. Don't forget that the patriots of the American Revolution did not go to King George with their hats in their hands trying to negotiate; instead they declared independence. Why ask of us the things that whites would be unwilling to practice?

Dave Brubeck Trio to Play Friday With Guest Artist Gerry Mulliigan

The Dave Brubeck Trio with guest artist Gerry Mulligan will appear in two concerts at the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts March 13 under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council Concert Association.

Two identical programs will be offered Friday, March 13, at Bowker Auditorium at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Reserved tickets for these concerts are now available through the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202, and are priced at $1.50 for UMass undergraduates; $2.50 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3 for the general public. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office from 5:30 p.m. Friday, March 13, telephone 545-2149.

Pianist Marian McPartland aptly described Dave Brubeck as "half genius, half square, and impossible to pigeonhole." For more than two decades Brubeck has been one of the leading figures in contemporary music, blending what he feels and what he has learned into something unique. Brubeck holds solid credentials as a professional musician, having studied privately with distinguished French composer Darius Milhaud, who strongly encouraged Brubeck to follow his natural inclinations to compose and perform jazz.

The enormous popularity that Brubeck amassed as a performer with his famous quartet came to an abrupt end in 1967 when the group disbanded.

Dave Brubeck has now formed a trio and has asked Gerry Mulligan, the great baritone saxophonist, to join him in a limited number of concerts this year. His performances at the University of Massachusetts on Friday, March 13, are among the few he has scheduled.

Bach Aria to Appear

The world famous Bach Aria Group is scheduled to appear at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, March 10 - 11 for concerts. Appearing in Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council Concert Association, the Bach Aria Group will perform various selections from the vast choral works of Johann Sebastian Bach. The group numbers among its members such illustrious names as Maureen Forrester, contralto; Lois Marshall, soprano; Richard Lewis, tenor and Norman Farrow, bass-baritone as well as instrumentalists.

Reserved tickets to these concerts are now available at the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office two hours before each concert.

West Side Story Memorable

The audience reaction to The University Theatre's opening night performance of "West Side Story" was generally a favorable one. Upon emerging from the crowded auditorium, a well known member of the theater department was moved by the production to comment, "it was one of the best performances I've seen U.T. do in the last seven years.

Forgetting the movie, reacting to Wed. night's performance alone - there is much good to say about the U.T. rendition.

When the orchestra warmed up, and the actors relaxed, as their confidence in it and themselves grew, the musical flowed. In the beginning there were a few stiff moments. But ultimately, as the evening progressed and the actors relaxed, their well trained, resonant voices filled the auditorium, to make "One Hand, One Heart," and "Somewhere", two of the most moving and unforgetable selections of the night.

Playing opposite Jay McAuliff as Tony and Carol Roth as Maria were Stephen Schnetzer as Bernardo and Karen Connolly as Anita. All gave professional performances. There were many scenes that will be hard to forget.

Wash, wet, soak, hunt, squint, wash, soak, wet, cry a little.

Contact lenses were designed to be a convenience. And they are up to a point. They're convenient enough to wear, once you get used to them, but, until recently, you had to use two or more different lens solutions to properly prepare and maintain contacts. You needed two or three different bottles, lens cases, and you went through more than enough daily rituals to make even the most steadfast individuals consider dropping out.

But now caring for your contacts can be as convenient as wearing them. Now there's Lensine, from the makers of Murine. Lensine is the one lens solution designed for complete contact lens care . . . preparing, cleansing, and soaking.

Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your lens prepares it for your eye. Lensine makes your contacts, which are made of modern plastics, compatible with your eye. How? Lensine is an "isotonic" solution. That means it's made to blend with the eye's natural fluids. So a simple drop or two coats the lens, forming a sort of comfort zone around it.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine fights bacteria and foreign deposits that build up during the course of the day. And for overnight soaking, Lensine provides a handy contact canister on the bottom of every bottle. Soaking your contacts in Lensine between wearing periods assures you of proper lens hygiene.

Improper storage between wearings permits the growth of bacteria on your lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and, in some cases, it can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were designed to be. The name of the game is Lensine. Lensine, made by the Murine Company, Inc.

Are you cut out for contact sports?

Gymnasts Take Third In Eastern League Finals

Finishing behind Temple and Penn State, the UMass varsity gymnasts took third place in the Eastern League Championships at Syracuse this past weekend. Temple beat out Penn State, 163.2-163.1, for the right to represent the Eastern League at the Nationals later this year.

UMass scored 153.2 team points to finish ahead of Navy at 150. Springfield College, undefeated in dual meet competition, ended up in the fifth position.

Unlike regular season dual meets, each team could enter only two all-around performers and two specialists in each event. Each of these competitors performed a compulsory and an optional routine, the scores of which were averaged and added to the score received in the finals.

Steve Cary was UMass' only medalist in the meet, taking fifth in the long horse vault with a 9.25 overall average.

Joe Reed was sixth on rings and eighth on high bar, Tony Vacca eighth on floor exercise and parallel bars and Rick Riley ninth on side horse to round out the Redman standouts.

UMass had a number of strong performances in the preliminaries. These included a 9.0 by Scott Stover and an 8.7 by Vacca on high bar, an 8.8 and an 8.7 by Norm Vexler and Mike Peloquin on rings and an 8.65 in floor exercise by Mike Kasavana. Vexler also came through with an 8.7 long horse vault in the preliminaries for UMass.

The Redmen are now preparing for the New England Championships at Lowell Tech on Saturday their final competition of the season.

Ellerbrook-As Captain And as an Individual

(Editor's Note: Today begins a special five-part series of interviews of UMass basketball players and later on, coach Jack Leaman, by Denise Magnell, Monday Issue Editor of the Collegian.)

Ray Ellerbrook, as captain ("I'm a medium between the coaches and players, trying to keep both groups informed") and as an individual player ("I could never improve as an athlete if I didn't put sports ahead of everything else") thinks the '69-70 Redmen are unique.

"We move faster than past teams I've been on, we have a better balance of talent, and our whole outlook is peppier---the sophomores liven us up."

Also a member of the varsity baseball team, Ellerbrook would like to make a career of professional baseball. He maintains that "people don't think baseball is as much a team sport as basketball, but teamwork in both sports has taught me not to make snap judgements, and to understand others better."

Coach Leaman's coaching methods were the primary reason Ray chose UMass. He would like to see sports increase in importance on this campus to better train athletes who anticipate professional sports careers.

"The Yankee Conference is wasting UMass' time. The best teams would not consider coming into this league so we are holding ourselves back by not getting out altogether."

The 6'1" guard, called Brook by his teammates, got the most personal satisfaction from the Redmen's win over Holy Cross when "we put it all together. "But I think we showed our most team strength at BU; we completely overwhelmed them," he added.

As a spectator, Ray respects other athletes but not to the point of copying them ("you have to play to suit your own talents"). He particularly admires Willis Mays and Jerry West.

The 21-year-old senior, majoring in Municipal Recreation is the fourth highest scorer in Redman hoop history.

In IC4A Championships, UMass' Evan's is 1st Redman Ever to Place

Dave Evans turned in the top performance for the UMass track team in the 49th Annual IC4A Championships, held in Madison Square Garden, Saturday. The Redman captain became the first UMass runner to place in the indoor IC's when he nabbed fourth place in the 1000 yard run.

Evans had turned in the best qualifying time in the six-heat morning trials with a 2:12.9. The Redman runner started off in the six man final by sprinting into second place and holding his position for over two laps of the six plus lap race.

He then moved by the leader but the rest of the pack was moving too and by the last lap Evans found himself in last place. He started kicking and immediately moved into fifth and went after UConn's Steve Flanagan who has beaten the UMass runner twice this season. Evans caught him at the last corner and outkicked him to the finish to place fourth in 2:13.0.

Evans points were the first U-Mass scored since 1966, the first it ever scored on the track, and only the fourth time the Redmen have been able to crack into the scoring column in the indoor IC4A, which now consists of 85 Eastern US Colleges and Universities.

Other Redman runners turned in good performances in their morning and afternoon trial heats.

Ron Wayne, running the mile, got jostled around in the first couple of laps but came back to take a solid third in 4:13.0, but missed the two-man cutoff mark.

High jumper Cal Carpenter sailed over the 6'4" mark on his second try but missed at all three attempts at 6'6" and was forced out of the competition.

Hurdler Gerry Spellman approaches the last hurdle at the IC4A championship.

Hurdlers Jerry Spellman and Jim Graves both sped to fast places in their first qualifying heat, but both were eliminated in their second rounds. Graves set a personal record in qualifying with a 7.5 for the 60 yards but pulled a muscle in the process and could only go through the motions in his second heat as the injury took its toll.

Spellman galloped to a strong second in his heat in 7.4 but just missed second place in his next race and was cut from the competition.

Sprinters Walter Mayo and Ron Harris ran well in their heats with Mayo grabbing third and making a second race. However, his season ended in the next sprint as he was not able to make the semifinals. Al Mangan, 600-yarder, ran 1:17 to take fourth in his heat.

The frosh medley relay of Phil Riley (half mile), Al Johnson and Marc Robinson (quarter miles) and Tom Swain (mile) took fifth place in their heat.

Senior Dave Evans runs in second place here in the 1000 yard run. (Photos are Joel Fox)

NIT--Redman Reward After Three Hard Comebacks

PROPHETIC FANS - A week ago, these Cage fans had the right idea when they brought this banner to last Saturday's Maine game. Yes, UMass is going to the N.I.T. with Julius 'E'. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti) slightly. The Redmen tussled for a hard-earned conquest of Iona and then returned to the Cage for the first time in a month, to challenge Boston University.

The home team literally blew BU off the court and did likewise to Northeastern a few days later. The Redman rebirth was stunted momentarily when UMass traveled to Chestnut Hill only to get caught up in the Boston College psychclone.

Here was a third major down which, coupled with the post-AIC and post-Fordham depressions, could have labeled 1969-70 "just another year." However, with soft-touch victories over Rider and Vermont, UMass again hit the comeback trail.

The Redmen were faced with three make-or-break games in a row, against Holy Cross at home and UConn and URI away. They won 'em all; the most impressive win was over Holy Cross which, at the time of the tilt, was ranked number one in New England.

Optimism was, at this point, well defined and well justified. The Redmen were rampaging; they were closing in on that number one spot in New England. They finished off their schedule in fine fashion by tipping Springfield and Maine, routing St. Anselm's in the Hawks' pit, and easily sailing past Maine again and finally UNH.

UMass finished off its regular season with ten straight wins for an 18-6 record, marking the most victories for a Redman squad. UM also got a share, with Connecticut, of its third consecutive Yankee Conference title and nabbed that number one ranking in N.E.

Chants by Redman fans of "NIT, NIT, NIT!" were first heard 12 days ago near the conclusion of the St. A's game and have ceased to subside since. They were heard during Maine action and again were shouted by 150 great people who welcomed the team bus back from New Hampshire at 12:30 at night.

That was on Monday night. Since that time a great void set in, and various NIT acceptance and rejection rumors floated around campus from Boyden to the Cage, to this office, to UMUA and to every dorm, fraternity, sorority and apartment in sight.

On Tuesday, most reliable sources informed that, of the six spots remaining in the NIT fold (ten bids had already gone out to Marquette, St. John's, Louisiana State, Georgia Tech, Army, Georgetown, Miami of Ohio, Manhattan, Duquesne and Utah), four would be filled on the outcome of two strong conference races but that the two last spots would be up for grabs among Texas Tech, Creighton and UMass.

T. Tech lost its tenth game on that Tuesday night and, 24 hours later, Creighton dropped its tenth. Such events just about wiped out these two teams. So, new theories arose.

On Thursday, two bids went out to Missouri Valley worthies Cincinnati and Louisville, as expected. This left four openings for Friday's consideration. Best sources said two slots would be reserved for Atlantic Coast Conference teams, one for a West coast squad and one for the Redmen.

As things turned out Oklahoma came out of nowhere and received an invitation. Confusion then took ahold of the affairs with most people guessing UMass right out of tourney consideration. Friday's confusion became Saturday's surprise and, yes, the Redmen are going to the NIT.

An editorial by a Collegian Sports Editor Emeritus (after a long consultation with Metawampe) came out six weeks ago, the day before the BU affair. Said editorial saw a comeback in store for the Redmen, who were 6-5 at the time. It also postulated that UMass fans might still realize their dreams of a big winning season and a post-season tourney bid. A lesson to be learned: Never doubt the words of the wise and foreseeing.

P.S. - Although the front page of today's edition features Julius Erving in the starring role, the following persons have not been slighted and much gratitude from here and from all Redman fans goes out to them: Ray Ellerbrook, Dennis Chapman, Jack Gallagher, Dick Samuelson, Ken Mathias, Bob Dempsey, Bill Greeley, Sam Provo, John Betancourt, Mike Pagliara, Rick Vogeley, Chris Coffin, Bill Kesgen, Tom Austin (soph redshirt), trainer Jim Laughnane, assistant coaches Peter Broaca, Ray Wilson and Mike Bernstein, and head coach Jack Leaman.

Grapplers Hopes Subside as Springfield Takes NE's Again

Redmen Lack Depth, Chiefs Cop 20th Straight Tourney

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. - UMass' hopes of ending Springfield's domination of the New England Wrestling Tournament fell short over the weekend as the Chiefs won here for the twentieth consecutive year.

For the Redmen it was just a case of not having the depth of Springfield. The Chiefs were behind UMass in the early rounds on Friday afternoon as the Redmen put all ten of their wrestlers through the preliminaries to Springfield's nine. Eight of the Redmen qualified for the semifinals and the tourney was a two team affair at this point.

However, the UMass challenge fell back on Friday night, when four of its' eight semifinalists were defeated and seven Springfield wrestlers entered the finals. At this point, the Redmen knew that second place was the best they could do.

Tom Young and Sheldon Goldberg, who were both seeded first in their weight classes, won New England championships for the Redmen. Young won the 167-lb class by defeating Walt Price of MIT in the finals, 11-6, and Goldberg proved he was the best in the 134-lb class by topping Ham Sinclair of Springfield, 7-5.

Springfield proved it was number one by winning five weight classes. Jim McGonigle, 118, Bob Meyer, 126, Steve Gaydosh 142, Mickey Lint, 150, and Bill Barges, 177, won for the Chiefs. Other winners were Tuck Stebbins of Wesleyan at 158, Gary Sklaver of Amherst at 190 and Randy Hooks of UCon in the heavyweight class.

McGonigle, Stebbins and Barges won for the second straight year and Stebbins, who finished the year undefeated, was named the outstanding wrestler. UMass' George Zguris failed in his bid to defend his 190-lb crown as he lost to Sklaver in the finals, 18-5. The other Redman finalist, 126-pounder Dave Reynolds, wrestled magnificently but Meyer took him down with five seconds left and Reynolds lost a heartbreaking 4-3 decision.

Springfield ended up with 110 points and was followed by the Redmen with 74 and Central Conn with 60. Coach Homer Barr was disappointed with the second place finish because he felt that with a few breaks, the Redmen could have won. He was right in his prediction that seven Redmen would place as Jim Godkin finished third at 150, Bruce Buckbee finished third at 177 and Clay Jester came in fourth at 142.

In the analysis of the tourney Springfield wasn't as powerful as in years before and the reason it won was because the Chiefs won the close bouts and the Redmen didn't. Buckbee lost in the semis 6-5 to Steve Cary of Tufts and Godkin lost to Pete Rosenthal of Central Conn., 2-1.

Jester lost to Tom Mills of Coast Guard 7-4 and then Reynolds lost the one-point final. Springfield, on the other hand, won all the close ones. The Chiefs won two finals by one point and they also won three overtime matches, including a referee's decision in favor of Lint in the final.

Reynolds did a fine job for the Redmen. He upset BC's Larry McDade in the semis and had the crowd cheering up until the final seconds of the championship bout. Zguris also wrestled well, but he just couldn't do anything with Sklaver and he did well not to get pinned.

As far as Goldberg and Young were concerned there was never much doubt that they would win. Goldberg won every match easily in reaching the final, and was in complete control of the championship bout despite the close score. Young had his toughest match in the quarter finals when he beat Ted Wethje of Hartford, 4-3, and he breezed in from there.

Mike Brauner wrestled well for the Redmen in the 158-lb. class and reached the semis before losing to Springfield's Art Zieglar. Nick Didomenico lost to an eventual finalist in Dan Riccio of Central and heavyweight Chris Hodson was doing well in the quarter finals before he made a bad move and got pinned.

Springfield had six seniors on the team compared to UMass' none, but the Chiefs frosh won the freashman meet easily. UMass' only freshman winner was Ed Carlson in the 190-lb class.

CHAMP - New England's champion at 167 pounds is Tom Young.

11:15 a.m., Mahar Aud. - Robert Creeley, James Wright, Robert Bly, Richard Weber

It has been announced that Senator Eugene McCarthy will participate in Friday night's readings. He has requested that his $100 honorarium be given to the Black Cultural Center.

According to festival coordinators Joseph Langland and Donald Junkins, the poets will join together in a week long effort to probe both the nation's conscience and its consciousness. They will attempt "to focus attention on the social and psychological pollution of the nation, and to personally declare in readings of their own poetry a view of contemporary life in America."

The festival is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Distinguished Visitors Program, assisted by the Master of Fine Arts Program in English. All meetings are open to the public.

Poets Danny Scarborough and John Logan will begin the festival with a reading Monday, March 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 10, 11, 12 and 13, three readings a day will be held -- at 11:15 a.m. in School of Business Administration (SBA) Auditorium 120; at 4:15 p.m. in Herter Hall Auditorium 231; and at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The festival will close Saturday, March 14, with a reading by Robert Creeley, James Wright and Robert Bly at 11:15 a.m. in Mahar Auditorium. There will be a daily coffee hour in Memorial Hall from 3 to 4 p.m.

One Poetess Cancels Out, And Explains Her Reasons

Denise Levertov, a highly-demanded reader and lecturer on college campuses across the nation, was scheduled to speak last night in the UMass Moratorium Poetry Festival. An active supporter of draft resistance, she later cancelled her reading and sent a letter of explanation to the coordinators of the festival. Her letter, printed below, provides a close examination of the aims of the festival and her ideas of the oppression present in our society today.

March 6, 1970

Dear Joe Langland - and the students and others involved in arranging the poetry week:

This is why I decided to cancel my engagement:

When I received the description of it, I felt strongly that it was not right to call it a moratorium action. To me, at this point in history and the history of the Movement, it seems frivolous, politically, and at the same time a misuse of poetry. It would have been a good thing to do 3 years ago. But now it is 1970, and serious radical and revolutionary people are tired of merely getting together to voice 'protest' in mild, legal, 'socially acceptable ways'. Such gettings together served their purpose in past years by awakening people's consciences, while by this time they only 'salve' consciences. It is easy - and pointless - to attend a poetry festival and call it a political action. It is not a political action.

To my mind, a moratorium week worth having would have speakers from the Chicago Conspiracy, the Black Panthers, and other militant groups, and would also - and even more importantly - focus on acts of civil disobedience - such as sit-ins at local draft board - and on more militant actions done by smaller groups. If poets were present and participating too, good. If you were asking me to participate in such actions I would have been glad to come. Many of the participant poets (including myself) have, I know, signed the Resist statement, participated in Poetry Readings against the War in Vietnam, and written poems - our of their own need and concern - that speak more or less directly about the war and their abhorrence of it and of a society that gives rise to such wars. But these facts about the poets, which are good in themselves, do not justify calling a poetry festival a moratorium. I do not mean for a moment to suggest any but the best intentions on the part of the organizers. But I feel they are lacking in an understanding of the desperation of our situation and of the need to raise the level of consciousness by bold revolutionary actions, and not to risk the mere soothing of conscience and consciousness that being a member of an audience, listening while the poets voice - eloquently - the feelings the audience already has, is liable to produce.

To put it cruelly and (I'm afraid) offensively, the program strikes me as a cheap way to get a poetry festival, and a (less literally) cheap way to enable the audience to feel they have 'done something against the war'. In fact, the most this festival can hope to do to end the war and work towards revolutionary change of our imperialist and oppressive society is that ONE OR TWO people who come to it without any political concern or committment at all may be made to think about these things for the first time. That is not enough, when the money used for it COULD have been used for speakers who would turn on HUNDREDS of people to a new level of militancy, and the time spent on it COULD have been spent in militant actions.

By this time I am sure you are asking the question, Why, if I feel this way, do I not come anyway and say so? I thought about that: but I decided that, having in any case only time to come for the Monday evening reading (I would have had to leave again right afterwards) and having to share the platform on that occasion with 2 other poets, not to come, but instead to write you this letter, would be more effective. Maybe I'm wrong - but that is my hope. Of course, what I would like to hope too is that you will have someone read this letter to the audience, or that you will circulate it as a xeroxed 'position paper'.

I must make it clear that I am not taking a 'holier than thou' attitude to my fellow poets who do participate. All are coming to the U of Mass for little or nothing BECAUSE this is supposed to be an anti-war action, and that is admirable. Nevertheless, I feel that if they thought a little further they might come to agree with me that it would at the least have been more honest to call the event simply a poetry festival, period. The misuse of poetry of which I spoke earlier does not consist of 'using' poetry didactically or (in the precise sense) rhetorically to stir political feeling - something which (with certain esthetic qualifications which I will not go into here) seems to me perfectly justifiable; it consist of using poets and poetry as a SUBSTITUTION for political action. That is why I believe this occasion misuses both poetry and poets.

I have a practical suggestion for redeeming the occasion from this misuse to a certain extent: PASS THE HAT! Pass it at each reading - there will be some people at each one that were not at the others. Use the gathering of the audience to collect some money, and send the money to the Pathers, and/or to the Chicago Conspiracy (Boston office is at 15 Brookline St., Cambridge 02139) and/or to Resist, which helps fund both of these as well as radical projects of every kind all over the U.S., and is indesperate need of money. (Resist: 763 Mass. Ave., Cambridge 02139)

The time is past when intelligent people can suppose that the war in Vietnam can be protested as a single issue, dissociated from racism, poverty, imperialism, and all forms of oppression. This is why I suggest collecting money not for one-issue Peace organizations but those which work to change the whole complex of which that war is only one manifestation, one horrible symptom.

One final point: Why did I accept the invitation in the first place? Well, quite simply, I was invited by telephone, found it hard to say no (I always do) and until I saw the program I had simply not thought the thing through. Since there will in any case be other readers for Monday night, I do not feel I am 'letting anyone down' seriously.

Butterfield Goes Before General Court Tonight

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

Butterfield House will go before General Court tonight because of an alleged violation of registered Student Organization (R.S.O.) policy act of 1967 and chapter 75 Sec. 11 of the Massachusetts State Law.

Chairman of the Student Senate Ways and Means Committee, Rick Verrochi stated at a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee last night in the S.U. that he will "go to court" tonight and ask that the "call to hearing" be postponed for three weeks. At the meeting several members of the Central Area Council and members of Butterfield House requested that such a move be made.

The alleged violation of the R.S.O. policy and Massachusetts State Law accordingto Verrochi could lead, upon conviction, to "suspension or expulsion" of either the Dorm President and Treasurer or the entire dorm.

Butterfield House earlier in the year, stated Verrochi, had not passed in "all" of its financial records. The prosecution, headed by Verrochi, will apparently try to prove that the alleged violations do exist. Verrochi would not divulge any information as to the nature of his prosecution. He inferred that such information would hurt his case against the students of Butterfield.

Before the decision, made "personally" by Verrochi, to ask the court to postpone the hearing for three weeks was heard, several members of the Ways and Means Committee expressed "confusion" over the purposes and intents of the committee. The motion was made to go into "Executive Session", after which Verrochi cleared the room of all people except one other non-committee Senator.

When the committee meeting opened the doors to the public Verrochi stated his decision to ask for a postponement for three weeks of Ways and Means versus Butterfield.

Verrochi emphasized that the committee was only enforcing the R.S.O. policy in bringing Butterfield before the General Court. After the meeting had officially adjourned, Senator Verrochi told the group that he personally was not in favor of the R.S.O. policy as it presently stands. "It is the job of the committee to enforce the law", reiterated Verrochi.

Members of the Central Area Council and Residents of Butterfield House were asking for the delay in Court Action because of a lack of time to prepare a case. The Central Area Council President expressed the opinion that since other central area dorms had been involved in alleged violations of the R.S.O. policy that the matter was one that would concern the central Area Council. He further pointed out that the Area had not had time to prepare anything for the case because of recent events concerning Mills House.

Butterfield residents also claimed that the delay in court action would be helpful considering the nature of the action and the amount of preparation necessary.

At the hearing tonight in the Student Union, Dukes Room, Butterfield is expected to remain firm as a dorm. According to one resident of Butterfield House, there is a possibility that Butterfield House residents will either become witnesses for the defense or defendants.

C.E.Q.-Amherst Sponsor Lecture

The Coalition For Environmental Quality will co-sponsor with Amherst College a lecture and discussion of new approaches to environmental law. This event will take place at Amherst College this evening, Tuesday, March 10 in the Science Building Lecture Room 2 at 8 p.m.

The two speakers, Victor Gagnon and James Coyle, are practicing Springfield attorneys, and are most active in environment issues in the Connecticut Valley. Both men have been promoting action against the Connecticut River Re-Diversion Bill which is designed to divert water from the Connecticut River, channel it to Quabbin Reservoir, and then transport it to the Boston area.

All persons intending to pursue a law career or having interests in environmental action should hear these capable legal consultants. There can be no doubt that law and lawsuits will become a central focus in attacking the environment problems of the seventies.

SWAP Committee Meets Discusses Future Plans

The Student Workshop on Activities Problems Committee met last Wednesday in the Colonial lounge to discuss future plans concerning a week of discussion beginning April 14 with DVP speaker, Dr. Keaneth Clark and ending on April 22 with a presentation by Dr. Ralph Abernathy.

It is hoped that the Board of Trustee members can be coavinced to hold their monthly meeting on campus that week and take part in some of the discussions.

Topics to be discussed will not be limited in any way to issues like ecology, the military, course requirements, tenure, faculty evaluation, and issues of free speech and recruiting are to be considered. It is hoped that valuable results will come out of these discussions and be implemented by the administration.

The SWAP Committee is very interested in increasing student involvement and hearing new ideas from anyone who is interested in working toward this goal. The next meeting is Wednesday at 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers. Everyone is welcome to come and express their ideas and views.

Inflaaaaaaaaaaation!

We are now faced with one of the most severe inflations in the history of the United States. It is a problem which none of us can escape and one which is affecting us all. Each month we see our dollar becoming less and less valuable, prices rising faster than wages and little hope in sight. The administration has set itself upon a severely tight monetary policy, seeming to add fuel to already raging fire. How effective has this policy been? What are the real costs to society both now, and in the future? What can be done by us to help combat inflation?

The Economics Liason Committee, an undergraduate organization of the Economics Department, is sponsoring a panel discussion, with outstanding members of the Economics Faculty, to deal with these very questions; questions which we all are asking. Wednesday night, March 11, at 7:30 p.m. in Herter 231 an attempt will be made to provide insight into some of the answers. Professors Barkin, Treyz, Wright and Holesovsky will make this difficult attempt to deal with perhaps the most pressing problems in America. Inflation is hurting you! Come and find out about your future.

The University Mental Health Services will remain in Brooks house through this Friday.

Give A Damn - Vote Today

From 8:30-5:00 today in the Student Union Ballroom, UMass will participate in a national college referendum on the question: DO YOU SUPPORT THE IMMEDIATE WITHDRAWAL OF ALL AMERICAN TROOPS FROM VIETNAM? -- VOTE YES or NO. This apolitical poll of over 1000 schools is being sponsored by The Association of the American University in Washington, D.C. acting in conjunction with two political student groups, The Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) and the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) and is to be run on this campus by the Senate Social Action Committee.

Sponsors of the referendum do stress the need for all students to vote in order to accurately gauge campus sentiment on this issue. Balloting is open to all undergraduate and graduate students with UMass I.D. cards. Results are to be published prior to the April Moratorium.

YAF and SMC, which hold opposing views on our involvement in Vietnam, are both pressing for nationwide support of their position. They hope to infer from the results of the poll the answers to such questions as -- Do you agree with Nixon's policy of withdrawal? or Is it a conflict you support or one you refuse to perpetrate?

Nixon Borrows from HHH, Policy Council Created

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon is expected to recommend creation this week of a Cabinet level Domestic Policy Council that was one of the principal proposals of 1968 Democratic presidential candidate, Hubert H. Humphrey.

Congressmen have been told that the new council would rank with the National Security Council, and would be designed to coordinate and set priorities in domestic programs as the Security Council does for defense and foreign affairs.

Nixon is expected also to recommend reorganization of the Bureau of the Budget into an Office of Executive Management that would work under the Domestic Policy Council to coordinate domestic programs.

The recommendations are the first of a series to come from the President's Advisory Council on Executive Reorganization set up by Nixon last April.

The council - known as the Ash Commission for its chairman, Roy L. Ash of Beverly Hills, Calif., who is president of Litton Industries - would make no comment on the recommendations except to say they are likely to be submitted to Congress this week.

Humphrey first proposed creation of a national Domestic Policy Council in a campaign speech in Los Angeles, July 1968, as a key to what he said would be his, "open presidency policy."

Nixon's council reportedly would be composed of nine Cabinet members dealing with domestic programs.

"As I understand it, it would be a sort of superstructure in the Cabinet that would take over some of the work of the Cabinet members," said a congressman who was briefed on the proposal.

Nixon's proposal would automatically be authorized by Congress 6 days after it is submitted if no resolution of disapproval is passed in either the House or Senate.

Reorganization of the Budget bureau - which already plays a major role in setting program priorities by recommending how much money each should get - would mesh the bureau more directly under the President through his personal advisers it is understood.

It also would reportedly carry out Nixon's pledge of simplifying federal grants to state and local governments by coordinating applications for such grants through a single federal agency.

Assasination Attempt Aborted Greek President Safe, 8 Busted

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Ten Greek Cypriots were ordered by a court Monday to be held for eight days while police probe the attempted assassination of President Makarios.

A heavy police escort took the men to court from various Nicosia police stations. They were picked up Sunday after gunmen fired from a rooftop into a helicopter carrying the president. The pilot was wounded critically but was able to bring the helicopter down to a landing and Makarios, also the Orthodox archbishop of Cyprus, was unhurt.

All the men held are well known right wingers. Several are former prominent members of the EOKA underground that fought for union with Greece - Enosis - in the mid 1950's. They range in age from 23 to 47.

Through their lawyers they told the court they had no objection to remaining in custody in order to assist police in investigating the assassination attempt. They are confident their innocence will be proven, the lawyers said.

The request for their detention was made by the chief police superintendent, George Hajiloizou.

One of the men is Costas Polycarpou Joannides, 32, a newspaperman who once was a commando captain in the Greek army and outspoken critic of Makarios whom he accused in newspaper articles of having betrayed the struggle for Enosis.

Joannides is the son of veteran Greek Cypriot politician Polycarpos Joannides, a pro Enosis campaigner. The elder Joannides was one of three Cypriots exiled by the British to the Seychelles Islands along with Makarios during the EOKA struggle.

Some of the men, like Joannides, are sympathetic to the Enosis ideas of the outlawed Greek Cypriot National Front terrorist group, though there is no proof they either approve its methods or have any association with it.

Others are known to be supporters of former Interior Minister Polycarpos Georgadjis, one of the main targets of the National Front. The front has accused Georgadjis, who is also a one time top EOKA leader, of having betrayed the Enosis struggle and of action as an agent of foreign interests.

An official announcement Sunday said Georgadjis' Nicosia home was searched by police an hour after the attempt on Makarios and that two revolvers and a small quantity of submachine gun ammunition were found there.

Another of the men is Michael Rossides, 36, an accountant who also is a former EOKA section leader. He was sentenced to death by a British colonial court for murdering a British soldier during the EOKA struggle but was later reprieved.

Georgadjis strongly denied any association with the assassination attempt.

Thousands cheered Makarios on Monday morning when he appeared on the balcony of his palace to acknowledge a demonstration of support.

In a brief address, Makarios said: "Nothing will intimidate me as long as you people are my shield."

Indians Vow to Pow-wow, Don't Want to Leave

SEATTLE (AP) - A band of American Indians vowed Monday to continue efforts to take over part of an Army post which they claim under an 1865 treaty. Their attempts to occupy the land Sunday resulted in arrests of 86 persons, including actress Jane Fonda.

Indian spokesmen said their claim to Ft. Lawton is based on the same right to surplus government lands invoked by California Indians who have occupied Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay for nearly four months.

The Defense Department plans to declare part of Ft. Lawton surplus property next month. The Indians said they want to use the scenic point of land which juts into Pugent Sound for a center for native American studies, an Indian university and a center of Indian ecology.

Committee Asks Student Help in Ombudsman Selection

Do you sometimes feel that the university is more than you can handle? Does all the red tape necessary in such a large institution confuse you when you have a problem?

Well, maybe a solution has been found. A new position has been created - that of Ombudsman. The function of the Ombudsman will be to assist any member of the University community in the just settlement of a grievance. In short, he will be the person to cut the red tape.

With the creation of the position of the Ombudsman, members of the community will now have some place to take their problems. No longer will they be able to complain that there is no outlet for their grievances. And this outlet must be sued. The position will only be as useful as the university community makes it. The Ombudsman will serve to alleviate a variety of student-faculty complaints. And in performing his functions he will be completely independent of the administration.

Some of you may be wondering how this superman will be chosen. The answer is that he will be chosen by a joint student - faculty-administration committee. This committee is requesting student opinion. The individual student will be able to make his views known. There will be a ballot box set up on the Lobby Counter of the Student Union through the 16th of March. If you know of a faculty member who you feel would effectively fill this position, submit his name along with your reasons for your choice on the coupon below and place in the ballot box.

H. Rap on Trial

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) - Black militant H. Rap Brown went on trial Monday on charges of arson and inciting to riot growing out of a speech in Cambridge, Md., in July 1967.

About three persons demonstrated outside the Harford County Courthouse, where the trial had been shifted from Cambridge, but there were no incidents.

Brown did not attend the opening session, on the advice of his attorney, William M. Kunstler, one of the lawyers in the Chicago 7 trial.

Kunstler moved to delay the proceedings on grounds Brown cannot get a fair trial in Bel Air.

A similar motion, on a federal level, previously was rejected by the U. S. Supreme Court. But Kunstler said the current argument was on the state level.

Judge Harry E. Dyer of Harford County Circuit Court gave Kunstler until Tuesday to prepare arguments on his motion, made after Dyer refused to vacate the decision to shift the trial.

The state charges were placed when Negroes, after listening to Brown speak, set fires which burned out two blocks of buildings in Cambridge on July 24, 1967.

The change of venue was granted at the request of the prosecutor State's Atty. William B. Yates, who said he feared violence would break out if it were held in Cambridge.

Kunstler asked that a higher state court rule on the change of venue decision.

He contended the case was the first in Maryland in which the venue was changed over objection of the defendant. Dyer agreed the case was unique, but said he had no authority to over turn a decision of a court.

Blacks Take Over Colby Chapel

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) - A judge issued Monday night an order to 8 black students to vacate Lorimer Chapel at Colby College.

The blacks have held the neo-Georgian chapel since last Monday in an attempt to make the administration accede to demands for a greater enrollment of blacks, institution of a black studies program and abilition of a grades requirement for students on financial aid.

Superior Court Justice James L. Reid issued the temporary restrainer at Augusta and said he'd hear the college's petition for a permanent injuction next Tuesday.

Acting Sheriff Horace Drummond of Kennebec County was to bring the order here for service.

Justice Reid said that if the blacks refused to obey the order, the college would have to file a motion for a contempt citation.

Reid said he would grant such a motion, which would turn the matter from a civil to a criminal case, requiring hearing by another judge.

As the order was issued, several state troopers were on watch in Lovejoy Hall, about three yards from the chapel.

Other state troopers were reported to be gathering at Augusta, two miles south, for action if needed.

By the time the order was granted, most of the crowd that had gathered around the chapel in the afternoon had dispersed.

Colby has a student enrollment of about 1,5000 of which only 22 are blacks.

The students holding out in the chapel demand that at least 59 blacks be enrolled by September and that in future years each freshmen class have a greater percentage of blacks.

Shortly before Justice Reid issued his order, Colby's President Robert E. L. Strider addressed this statement to the college community:

We have been through a crisis in the past week occasioned by illegal occupation of the chapel. It was a particularly difficult time for us because of the innate sympathy all of us have for the cause of equality of opportunity in education. But this kind of action is not the way to bring about constructive change nor will it be in the future at this college.

It must be known that hence forth illegal trespass or denial of access to a college building will bring legal action as quickly as it can be arranged, whether the objectives, immediate or ultimate, are noble or otherwise.

Make Up Your Minds

It's a real bummer when an editor has to look over every inch of copy that comes into a newspaper, particularly a campus newspaper, to make sure nothing "offensive" is printed.

But this situation was not created by the editors of this newspaper. It was created by criticism, harassment and threats. It seems that a few people believe in free speech and freedom of the press, only when they are speaking or writing.

If you want to express your opinion in print, then you have to allow someone else the same right. But people are not operating in this way, in this university community. And this is not directed to the "fascist, racist and radicals", but to everyone.

No matter what is printed in this newspaper, someone will disagree with it, sometimes vehemently. If this is true, and it is, then the only thing to do is print powdered phrases, and wishy-washy articles, editorials and letters.

If the disagreement reaches the proportions of a threat then the only thing to do is to candy-coat the newspaper, or stop printing. In other words, you either want to hear it all, or you don't want to hear any of it.

We would like to print everything within the law, and only the law, but we cannot unless you, the readers open your minds. Just remember, if you try to stop someone else's opinions from being printed-through harassment and threats – don't expect your opinion to be printed since it will probably activate more harassment and threats from someone else.

Try to make up your minds on exactly what you want. This is only one small newspaper; others are experiencing the same problem.

THE FASCISTS DON'T WANT TO SEE ANY RADICAL STATEMENTS, AND THE RADICALS DON'T WANT TO SEE ANY FASCIST STATEMENTS, AND NOBODY WANTS TO SEE ANY MIDDLE-OF-THE-ROAD STATEMENTS, SO WE MIGHT AS WELL STOP PUBLICATION...

The Times Were Bad

"It was an age of miracles," said one of its participants, "It was an age of art, it was an age of excess, and it was an age of satire." The United States had come out of the World War as the world's strongest nation, the new hope of western civilization. In the late twenties, she was experiencing a giddy boom in which urban incomes were rising and social inhibitions falling. "A whole race going hedonistic, deciding on pleasure," said Fitzgerald.

Three decades and another war later, the U.S. had settled down to the passiveness of the Eisenhower years. "In college, we were named," said Frank Conroy. "The Silent Generation. The Apathetic Generation. There was no doubt about it....America was in a trance, drifting leisurely through a long golf game while the clouds gathered. Among students it was hard to find a rebel, virtually impossible to find a Marxist, a mystic, or indeed, anyone who felt strongly about anything."

The times were bad, nearly a quarter of the labor force out of work, or soon to be. The economic and monetary mechanism had failed us, and many of us lived on potatoes stored in the cellar. It was the worst of times, yet the young English economist took to his typewriter. "We are suffering," said Keynes, "not from the rheumatics of old age, but from the painfulness of readjustment between one economic period and another." Writing of the ECONOMIC POSSIBILITIES FOR OUR GRANDCHILDREN, he said, "I draw the conclusion that, assuming no important wars and no increase in the population, the ECONOMIC PROBLEM may be solved, or at least within sight of solution within a hundred years. This means that the economic problem is not - if we look into the future - the permanent problem of the human race."

This was bound, he thought, to disturb the traditional purpose of mankind. "If one believes at all in the real values of life, the prospect at least opens up the possibility of benefit. Yet I think with dread," he said, "of the readjustment of the habits and instincts of the ordinary man, bred into him for countless generations, which he may be asked to discard within a few decades.

"To use the language of today - must we not expect a general 'nervous breakdown?' "

The times were respectably good in an economic sense; unemployment was below four per cent, and though the rate for teen-age blacks was somewhat higher, even the black man was feeling some of the affluence of the boom.

A professor stood looking out his window over the valley which had once been a glacial lake. "Look at those dorms," he said. "Five thousand students living there and do you know that almost all of them are on drugs? And some on heroin? And we almost had a full-scale race riot last week?

"There is something in this society which has messed them over. We've solved the technology problem, and yet that very same technology is making their lives less happy."

"Now once more the belt is tight," Fitzgerald had said when it was all over, "and we summon up the proper expression of horror as we look back at our wasted youth. . .It seemed only a question of a few days before the older people would step aside and let the world be run by those who saw things as they really were - and it all seems rosy and romantic to those of us who were young then, because we will never feel quite so intensely about our surroundings any more."

Dar ken the Sun

If you were alive on this past Saturday, and irregardless of whether or not you were up on anything, you probably noticed something strange happening around 1:45 in the afternoon. It was getting dark, quite dark. The wind was blowing. The birds were flying in unusually active groups. People were furtively gazing up, and quickly looking back down again fearful to gaze upon the God figure for too long.

They huddled together in groups talking nervously or standing in dumb silence. A shopkeeper was talking to a friend of his in the doorway about how busy he had been this day, "most likely" because of what was happening (people want to come together "to have things explained" scientifically when something new is happening). One of the long-haired gentles was softly telling his young son that it was going to be alright, that the sun wasn't really dying, "only taking a little nap", and that he and mommy would stay right there with him. The cop on the corner was nervous; I guess the extra responsibility of all the people to watch over; or maybe it was the morning briefing telling all the patrolmen to keep an extra sharp eye peeled for a store break when everyone's attention was focused on the sky.

Don't look at the sun, you'll hurt your eyes. Sunglasses, exposed film, pinhole cardboard reflectors. I didn't have anything to shield my eyes with and I did not have any money to buy anything with. But, I still wanted to see it. I crossed the street at the corner, subconsciously heading for the music shop opposite the common. But after I had stepped onto the sidewalk, in front of the bank, I looked up and, Lo and Behold, there was the sun, a pale crescent of itself, painlessly. The bank was acting as a pair of sunglasses for me. It's brown polarized glass, which formed the corners of the building was giving me the opportunity to see the eclipse. I was looking through the bank to see it clearly.

But, this is not what I want to talk with you about. I want to talk about the bank-burning last week in California, where a lot of people, who had looked through the bank, reacted.

It was violent, it was destructive, and it was a slap in the face of American society. But it was also a testament to the future. It was a manifestation of the "Great Refusal" that we are living. It was a significant rejection of today's system of desirable, self-perpetuating enslavement; a gilded cage at the cost of your humanness. What more appropriate target for an affirmation, a celebration, of your humanness than the corporate symbol, the Bank of Amerika, everybody's friend and everybody's master?

Yes, it was harsh, non-thinking in spots. Yes, I disagree with violence. But violence is part of being young, and the only ones, it seems, who care enough to look through the bank, beyond the bank, to see something clearly, are the young. Where are the humane champions of our parents' generation, the senile-before-its-time generation? Where are they when we need them the most? Like their embodiment, Dwight Eisenhower, they're dead; or in hiding. So we're violent. We have to be, in some ways. We're doing it all by ourselves. We're essentially alone.

Last Thursday, Jerry Rubin called the burning of the Bank of Amerika "an act of love". He's very right. It is exactly that. An act of love is a beautiful thing, but to complete it you have to wrestle and sweat a little with it. And that's precisely what we're doing. Each of us, in our own, individual ways, is wrestling and sweating with living in this country; be it in the streets of Washington, the communes of the pastoral country, or, most importantly, in accepting the life-styles and values that we, the less-empassioned but equally concerned, feel to be right for ourselves.

We are consumating a fiery marriage, that of ourselves and this country; a country that doesn't want us, but which is ours; a country that hates us because we have the courage to criticize, a courage that they lack; a country that hates us because beside our active concern, their passive laxitude becomes all the more difficult for them to rationalize away; a country that hates us because we are its soul, something that they are only too well aware of beneath their reactionary rhetoric.

Consumate this marriage we inevitably will. And we shall bring forth. a beautiful child, in deed.

Provided, of course, that our hateful lover doesn't murder us when we are the most vulnerable, when we are loving her.

Drive

To the editor:

A drive for funiture is being conducted by Holyoke Downeyside, a home for neglected youth which will open early this spring.

Mrs. Kathryn Callahan of South Hadley is chairman of the committee, which is seeking all kinds of household material, including dishes and books as well as furniture.

Downeyside in Holyoke, located at 1425 Northampton St., will provide a domestic situation for a small number of young men, from age 15 up, who will constitute a family. They will be guided by a young married couple with a special interest in their problems, who will live in the house also.

The organization is arranging for the services of vocational advisers, psychologists, doctors, educational counselors, and the like, to begin as soon as the home opens.

Committee members may be contacted to arrange for pickup of donated furniture and supplies. Besides Mrs. Callahan, whose phone is 532-3589, they include Mrs. Flora Eglof, 534-5255; Mrs. Barbara Wesson, 536-7123; and Mrs. Laura Kelly, 536-3724, of South Hadley; Mrs. Mary Ann O'Connell, 536-5830, and Mrs. Lenore Bowne, 532-1728, of Holyoke; and Mrs. Wallace-Ann Starks, 533-4055, of Williamsett.

Mrs. Carolyn Berkey of the Holyoke YWCA will also accept donations.

Guilty

To the editor:

Does anyone remember what Mr. Humphrey said when he was here? Recall: Mr. Humphrey came on and said that this was a college campus and that he would give us answers deserving of a college campus. He then proceeded to say that he considered the law under which the Chicago 8 were tried to be obviously unconstitutional - politically expedient on a college campus. Recall further: Mr. Humphrey was once the honorable president of the Senate. The democratically controlled Senate under Mr. Humphrey passed the law under which the Chicago 8 were tried. Was the law constitutional then? Wasn't it Mr. Humphrey who talked about Johnny-come-latelies? Where was he then? WERE YOU ONLY FOLLOWING ORDERS, MR. HUMPHREY?

Ah, yes, Mr. Humphrey. You say you've been out of office the last two years. Before then you were president of the Senate for 4 years, and a state senator from Minnesota before then. We asked you about the constitutionality of the war. You told us to ask the Congress. We did, Mr. Humphrey, you. Oh, but the way, the verdict on your appeal of the trial is in. You are guilty and are to be held without bail.

To the editor:
Roger Boissonneau, Jr. -

In your editorial, "Last Straw," which appeared in the March 5th issue of THE COLLEGIAN, you stated that "Whites are human too, and will only endure so much misery from an imagined, or real threat. Someday, Blacks will hit the last straw, and the whites will arise with a vengeance unequalled in the history of the world." You also asked if "it would be back to the mines of South Africa, for the Blacks of THIS country." In reply to your question Roger, I quote the following poem, "If We Must Die," by the Black poet, Claude McKay:

Like men we'll face the murderous,
cowardly pack,
Pressed to the wall, dying, but fighting back!
all power to the people

Thank You

To the editor:

This written in answer to Paul Sanders.

Noting your lack of intelligence (if I may be so bold to resort to the conservative tactic of name-calling) maybe a few things about "radicals" should be cleared up for you.

In pushing fire alarms we are merely protecting ourselves and our fellow brothers against the State Police. It is you and hypocrites like you who are infringing on our rights. You have NO right to tell us not to smoke pot, etc., but it is our right to do this if we want to. You have absolutely no right to delve into our private lives and, perhaps, decide OUR morals also, Mr. Saunders?

As for being illegal, I do allow that pulling fire alarms may be hazardous if the action is continued over a long period and an actual fire does evolve. But again, we are merely protecting ourselves against an inane, unjust law, contrary to our private wishes (after all does it hurt you if I smoke a joint or "roofer" as you may say?) and I firmly believe that we should have the right to do this.

As for obstructing State Police, protectors of our virtue, it should be perfectly legal to do this if it is in the conscience of the obstructor. Our Constitution allows us certain freedoms, one of those still remaining to us, is freedom from breaking and entering without a search warrant. Police have not had proper warrants, if any, on several occasions, (narcotic agents don't need them - that's fair to you isn't it? - what if they wanted to break into your room to confiscate your copy of William F. Buckley's memoirs - could you allow it?), and I feel that this is a clear obstruction of our rights.

The Declaration of Independence allows for "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness". We are seeking these in our own way and need no mothering from the likes of you, thank you. I am not a radical but I AM a free American.

Glimmer

To the editor:

As President of the Central Area Council I've been more or less involved with the problems in our area during Friday morning and succeeding days. I would like to extend my personal thanks and gratitude (for whatever they're worth) to the following people:

(1) Sergeant Cavanaugh and the patrolmen under his command in the Central Area Thursday night and Friday morning. I feel that they handled the situation with a high degree of tact and professionalism.

(2) The House Governments, Heads of Residence, staff, and particularly the residents of Brett and Gorman who really did a fine job in finding emergency and in some cases permanent housing for residents of Mills.

(3) The brothers of TEP who welcomed the fraternity Pi Lam, who lived in Mills House.

(4) The faculty of the Math Department, who were absolutely great in their sincere efforts to solve the dilemma of twenty-one students left homeless. They first offered, on Sunday, to give up enough space to house sixty-eight students in Arnold House. On this campus, with the amazing lack of office space, this offer was absolutely tremendous. At this time (11:40 p.m., Wednesday) it looks as though the Mental Health Department will move into Arnold House for the rest of the semester freeing the first floor of Brooks House for the remaining twenty-one students. Believe it or not UMass students, there is now overwhelming evidence - at least to the residents of the Central Area - that the people in the Math Department really care for us and will make sacrifices for us. There does seem to be a glimmer of hope for a tripartite system on this campus.

(5) The staff of the Mental Health Department for agreeing to a negotiated settlement and reassuring me to a certain degree that brute force may not be necessary to get change on this campus.

(6) Lastly, I'd like to thank the residents of Brooks House. These women came up with the solution, and are tripling up until the Mental Health Department moves out of Brooks House. What this campus really needs is for each student to have a community to belong and relate to. From what I have seen, Brookmill is already such a place after just twenty-four hours. I want to wish them the best of luck.

Oh, oh, you will be sorry for that word!
Give back my book and take my kiss instead.
Was it my enemy or my friend
I heard,
"What a big book for such a

Come, I will show you now my

And you may watch me purse my

Oh, I shall love you still, and all of that.
I never again shall tell you what I think.
I shall be sweet and crafty, soft

You will not catch me reading any

And some day when you knock and

Some sane day, not too bright and not too stormy,
I shall be gone, and you may whistle for me.

Lib

To the editor:

Those of us in Women's Liberation cannot in anyway apologize to those people who might have been offended by our actions Tuesday. Guerrilla theater is clearly an unsuitable vehicle for subtle discourse; nonetheless, it is highly effective in confronting people with issues they might rather choose to ignore.

Our intention was to draw attention to serious questions that most of the audience of the Bridal Fair did not even regard as legitimate. "Liberated from what?" is a standard repartee, and because the question is simple, it is expected that the answer will be simple. The answer is, of course , oppression, but an explanation of that oppression is involved and complex. That explanation was available Tuesday and will continue to be available through the Women's Lib. organization to any woman who wishes to listen or ask questions.

What about the men? I pose a question: Why do you giggle and talk about the 'natural order of things' at the mere mention of Women's Liberation, but refuse to stick around for some hard statistics like women being the second highest killers of children in the U.S.? or that more wives kill husbands than vice versa? Something does seem amiss in 'the natural order of things'.

To the editor:
Mr. Fitzpatrick -

I am most grateful for the letter from you and James Walsh concerning my appearance at the University of Massachusetts. I have the greatest respect for the University and a sincere regard for its student body, and I fully realize that those who caused the disturbance are not representative of the total student body.

It is my belief that the majority of students must set the ground rules and must enforce those rules, in other words, such meetings as that at the University of Massachusetts are student-sponsored and should be student-managed. Whatever discipline that may be required to maintain order and to permit the free discussion of ideas should be initiated and enforced by the students themselves.

As you requested, I am enclosing two copies of the lecture which I had prepared for that evening.

Sincerely,

Disgusted

To the editor:

I was frankly disgusted by COLLEGIAN editorials, (Feb. 26, 27) concerning the Humphrey incident. They did not offer a valid justification for the radicals behavior, and they did not represent a balanced student viewpoint. I want to answer to several specific attacks on the establishment, and to attacks on the general way of living of those of us who felt Humphrey deserved to be listened to.

1. Quote: "the system, through its mishandling of the man-technology relationship, has brought racism, alientation, blind materialism, nuclear blackmail, depersonalization, etc." I have some second thoughts. Racism has existed in pre-industrial societies, presently exists in Red China and the Middle East, and seems largely to be a product of man's mind, rather than his institutions. In the U.S., institutions are biggest and most pervasive in the North, while racism is worst in the South. As far as alientation and depersonalization are concerned, I suggest that they are somewhat inevitable in a world of 3-1/2 billion, even if all institutions, miraculously, could be exempted. Nuclear weapons exist, and they must be controlled. How does it follow that if we lose our institutions we then get rid of the bomb? I consider it a terribly naive view of humanity to argue that man would not be materialistic without institutions. This oversimplified, conspiratorial "THEY are guilty" approach is reminiscent of Joe McCarthy and Spiro Agnew. History will devastate both of them.

2. Quote: "The Judeo-Christian culture is primarily one of sacrifice and subjection. Cruelty and pain are its basic attributes." Also, what we need are "emotion and intellect, Dionysian and Apollinian," both of Hellenistic derivation. First, I think both editors are overestimating the role of the Church in America today, although I may be wrong. But what, really, is the alternative to the Judeo-Christian tradition of "sacrifice and subjection"? Nietsche believed that without God, or some substitute, the id would take over - passion, instinct, primal force; the sign of Dionysius. Man would then arrest his creativity, his power, and his ability to dominate. This is a dangerous force which historically has led to everything from repression of women to Nazism. Apollinian Hellenism stresses intellect. Values of pity and compassion derive in large part from our Judeo-Christian heritage. Radicals profess to desire a "spiritual regeneration", but their choices of values do not indicate just how this might come about.

3. Quote: "Those who seek to change the government must do so not out of hate, but out of hope." It would be more correct to say, according to COLLEGIAN editorials, that such efforts are based on an incredible amount of self-righteousness. We are told that radicals' motives "will not be compromised" - as if the rest of us admit that our motives would be. They tell us that radicals realize how to live full, complete lives. Empirically, I find this most questionable.

Goddell Cutbacks Cause Serious Crisis

By ROSE MILLER
Staff Reporter

The restoration of Goddell Library funds in December, according to Mr. Siefried Feller, chief bibliographer, has kept the library at substitence level.

In an interview with the COLLEGIAN, Mr. Feller said the $500 000 cut by the Massachusetts State Legislature forced the library to seriously cut back on its commitments. The library's first move was to cancel orders on periodicals which Feller labeled as mostly duplicates and to cancel all book orders. Another area which was reduced was the current book holdings.

Explaining how the cutback affected periodical holdings on campus, Feller said the periodicals which were reduced were duplicates of journals found in departmental library collections, such as in Morrill Science Center. The only drawback to students or faculty in eliminating the accessibility to duplicate copies in Goddell was one of convenience. Some students felt Goddell copies were more centrally located. Another factor in Goddell being a more favorable location is that departmental libraries tend to be composed of holdings from many related departments. Therefore, in some cases, duplicate copies at less crowded areas are more convenient for the campus community.

Further where the campus community is suffering now and will continue to suffer Feller maintains, is in the area of research books published in the last decade. If the library cannot keep up with recent studies, Feller declares, "we will lose ground," even though the library is managing to maintain its titles in the periodicals area.

With the restoration of some of the library funds in December, the crisis in continuing the acquisition of research studies has been temporarily averted.

But Mr. Feller is quick to point out, that without more adequate funding, the library at its present 75% or substitence level will not be able to acquire books in proportion to the needs of next decade.

Mr. Feller, describing where the library stands now, says the basic need is for more funds to serve the graduate program.

Goddell Library, serving a student body of 18,000 with 650,000 holdings, falls a million short of schools now serving the same size student body.

In order to maintain acquisition needs of the University, a group of administrators and faculty will set up a Friends of the University Library group with the purpose of finding private funding for the library.

Library Lags Behind University Growth

Today, when cumulative knowledge is growing faster than ever before in world history, it is eminently important that our collegiate libraries maintain a large and current cataloguing of books and periodicals. However it is in this fiscal year that the largest institute of education in Massachusetts has the smallest book acquisition budget in at least the past five years.

Since 1965 the value of the dollar has been plummeting, the population of the University of Massachusetts has increased annually by 1100 to 1500 students and 100 faculty members, and the publication rate has risen dramatically; in fact, last year over 400,000 new volumes went into print in this country alone. It would logically follow that the budget for book acquisitions would steadily increase from a substantial base amount to allow for rising costs, to provide for acquiring a large number of the new books which become available and to allow for increased usage of the library. However, jus t the opposite is true. Except for the last fiscal year, both state and total appropriations fo r the University Library's Acquisition Fund have steadily declined since 1965 from an only adequate base figure.

This lack of adequate financing has necessitated the curtailing of many periodical subscriptions this year and many current books needed by the students cannot be purchased. This will have serious ramifications not only this year but in future years, for even if necessary funds can be budgeted in the future, magazine reprints cannot always be purchased and many current books may go out of print and become unattainable or prohibitively expensive.

Most state universities are allowed at least one million dollars for their annual acquisitions and UMass Library Director David Clay estimates that his library requires twice that amount, given the large number of programs being offered at the University and the size of the population which must be served by the Amherst campus facility. Clay also stated that for the University to "catch up" on purchases of back volumes an additional twenty million dollars would be needed.

In order to acquire more library funding, the University and State Communications Council has filed this bill which would provide the UMass Library with three million dollars of state appropriations over the next three years. This would only be enough to maintain broad annual book and periodical selections for a library of this size, but it would be a progressive step toward alleviation of the problem.

There are two national organizations which study collegiate libraries and report on their quality according to the number of volumes acquired in the given year and the total volumes in the library. Their reports point out the great need the UMass Library has for more acquisition funding.

The Association of Research Libraries which compiles figures on the 76 major college libraries, has shown that our library is deficient in total number of volumes and operating expenses. The latest figures, those for 1968/1969, showed that 70 of those 76 owned more volumes than our library did; out of 42 state universities considered, 39 had more books than the University of Massachusetts. Although we had the largest acquisition budget to date during that fiscal year, 37 schools, including 22 state universities, had greater operating budgets than our university.

The Library Resources Index rates university libraries according to total volumes, volumes added during the year and periodicals subscribed and assigns a numerical rank and an overall index number. The UMass Library ranked 34th out of 40 state universities. Our overall index was .63 while the average was 1.0 and the median index for the upper half of schools was 1.14.

The New England Association for Accreditation and accrediting societies for the various professions have all reported that our library is far below its standards. If a library acquisition budget increase is not forthcoming, the University is in danger of losing its accreditation. This would hinder students in being accepted to graduate schools and injure the external reputation of the University.

The Commonwealth realizes that institutes of higher learning are necessary for its continued growth, and the economic well being of its citizens and we appreciate the support which the Legislature has given us in the past. But more than buildings are needed to make a good university. The hallmark of a great university is a great library; it draws capable faculty and provides for a broader education than a student can receive in the classroom.

Our library problem is crucial. We can no longer afford to fall behind on purchases of books needed by the students of the University of Massachusetts. The student population is going to increase each year; the dollar will probably continue to lose its value; and the amount of available knowledge published will continue to rise. If we are to have the quality of library that the University of Massachusetts requires, we must work now to acquire necessary books. Unfortunately this costs money, so we look to you for support.

Hope on the Horizon For the Sugar Maple

AMHERST, Mass. - There's some hope for the ailing New England sugar maple, recent research at the University of Massachusetts indicates.

Sugar producers and others concerned over this classic New England tree have feared in recent years that the maple might be facing the kind of threat that Dutch Elm disease holds over the American elm.

Sugar maples are being hit throughout the Northeast by maple decline, a blight first evident from yellowing of the foliage and then progressing to dying of twigs and branches. Starting from the top of the crown, the disease can spread to whole sections of the tree and often kills it over a period of years.

A UMass forestry research team, after a detailed study of maple decline in 21 different maple stands in western Massachusetts, has concluded that "low foliar nitrogen, probabl y from lack of available soil nitrogen, is an important factor in the decline of sugar maples on some sites." Adding nitrogen under test conditions resulted in improvement in some cases.

"One of the imperative reasons for immediate investigation of the problem was the hope of determining the causes in time to develop programs to safeguard the health of the trees and thus avoid catastrophic losses such as have occurred from chestnut blight and Dutch Elm disease," explained Dr. Donald L. Mader, UMass professor of forestry who directed the study.

The UMass research team began by locating 21 sugar maple stands representing a cross-section of declined trees. Forest locations and sugarbush stands were included. Many of the sugarbush stands were located through the cooperation of the Berkshire-Pioneer Maple Producers Association. With the exception of one stand in Hampden County, all stands were in Northern Hampshire and southern Franklin Counties.

Rate of tree growth and general condition was checked, along with soil conditions. Laboratory analyses were made of the nutrient content of leaf and soil samples. Also measured was the moisture storage and supplying properties of the soil.

Specifics on the fertilization and other details of the study are in "Influence of Nitrogen on Sugar Maple Decline," Bulletin No. 582 published by the UMass Department of Forestry and Wildlife

The Bach Aria Group will perform tonight in Bowker Auditorium.

Bach Ariia Group Concert Tonight

The Bach Aria Group will pay a two-day visit to the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts as part of this year's Concert Association Celebrity Series. Two identical concerts will be performed by this distinguished ensemble in Bowker Auditorium on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 10 and 11, each at 8 p.m.

The Bach Aria Group is the only organization of its kind in the United States. For many years, the group has delighted large audiences in New York City and on concert tours in all of the major music centers throughout this country, South America and Europe with its superb renditions of Bach's greatest choral works. The New York Times characterized its performance "such as it is seldom one's pleasure to hear."

The Bach Aria Group is directed by its founder, William H. Scheide, and numbers along its members great names in vocal and instrumental music, including Maureen Forrester, contralto; Lois Marshall, soprano; Richard Lewis, tenor, and Norman Farrow, bass-baritone. The accompaniement is provided by such noted musicians as Samuel Baron, flute; Robert Bloom, oboe; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Oscar Shumsky, violin; and Yehudi Wyner, organ.

Full program information and tickets may be obtained from the University's Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202. Reserved tickets are priced at $1 for UMass undergraduates; $2 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students; and $3 for the general public.

Coffee Hour Today With Bach Aria Group

The Fine Arts Council will sponsor another of its informal coffee hours today at 1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m. in honor of The Bach Aria Group. This reception is open to everyone without charge and will be held in the Art Gallery in Herter Hall.

Members of the Bach Aria Group are expected to attend the reception which has been planned to give students and others on the campus the opportunity to meet informally with the visiting artists. The Bach Aria Group is a particularly interesting ensemble inasmuch as its members are among the world's top vocal and instrumentalists individually and only join together for a few weeks each season to perform Bach's leading choral music as The Bach Aria Group. Appearing at the University for this engagement of two Bowker Auditorium concerts at 8 p.m. on Tuesday and tonight will be the outstanding vocal quartet of Maureen Forrester, Contralto; Richard Lewis, Tenor; Lois Marshall, Soprano and Norman Farrow, Bass-baritone. The accompaniement will be provided by Samuel Baron, flute; Robert Bloom, oboe; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Oscar Shumsky, violin and Yehudi Wyner, organ.

Reserved tickets for tonight's final concert by The Bach Aria Group are available from the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall until 4:00 p.m. and from 6:00 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium Box Office. Telephone for both offices is 545-0202. Tickets are priced at $1.00 for UMass undergraduates; $2.00 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3.00 for the general public.

Britell's Exciting Art Exhibit at S.U.

COLLEGIAN article (S.U. Arts Committee):

The Reading Room of the Student Union is presently showing a series of etchings and lithographs by Mr. Richard Britell. Originally from Utica, N.Y., Mr. Britell attended Pratt Institute and received his B.F.A. in painting from Syracuse University. He has completed some graduate work in graphics at Eastern University in Michigan, and will possibly continue this course of study here at UMass. Visitors to the exhibit will note the fantasy effect achieved in several of the pieces through intricately detailed rendering of vividly imaginary themes. Also included in the exhibit is some intriguing experimental work involving the photographic process. The prices of Mr. Britell's prints may be ascertained by contacting Mr. Jim Riley in the R.S.O. Office (545-2351).

Save Yourself From Being Weeded, Read This!

"Persons who have filed motor vehicle insurance claims but who have not filed accident reports with the Registrar of Motor Vehicles as required by law under Chapter 90, section 26, will be revealed for the first time by Computers in a system made possible by a National Highway Safety Bureau $414,700 annual grant to the Registry," Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin said today.

McLaughlin said that any persons found in violation of section 26, will receive a written request to submit a report to him properly filled out and signed. Failure to do so will result in a hearing on the suspension or revocation of their license or registration.

The new system, developed by the Traffic Records Section of the Registry, utilizes insurance company records of accident claims and by computer matches them with accident reports filed at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, weeding out the names of all those who have failed to make the required reports.

His Excellency, Governor Francis Sargent joined McLaughlin in saying that this is another giant step forward which Massachusetts is taking to remove violators of motor vehicle laws from the highways and one which will also result in huge savings to insurance companies on fraudulent claims.

Section 26 provides that persons operating a motor vehicle which is involved in an accident with damage in excess of $200 to any vehicle or other property or in which personal injury occurs report in writing to the Registrar and the local police on the proper form within five days -- unless the person is physically incapable of reporting within that time.

Peter Pan Hikes Prices. Get Tickets by March 16

The Student Union has announced that as of Monday, March 16, Peter Pan Bus lines will raise instate ticket prices 10-12%. The SU bus ticket concession urges that students buy tickets for the spring vacation trip and other future bus trips before March 16 if possible to avoid paying a higher price.

The $6.40 two trip Amherst-Boston ticket must be honored for 30days after the date it is purchased. All other roundtrip tickets must be honored for one year after purchase. One-way tickets must be honored for 60 days after purchase.

For students who use buses frequently, it will be well worth investing in tickets within the next week.

Gallagher, Betancourt More Than Just Athletes

(Today features the second of a special five-part series of interviews of UMass basketball players and later on, coach Jack Leaman, by Denise Magnell, Monday Issue Editor of the Collegian).

Jack Gallagher likes to play his man "nose to nose." Deriving more satisfaction from playing a strong defensive game than from gaining points, he personally enjoyed the win over Gannon College in the Gem City Bowl Tournament more than any other Redman triumph during the regular season.

As he put it, "the fire was there" when Gannon laughed at the New England challengers before playing them in the final game of the tourney.

Gallagher added that he felt the best team effort was defeating URI directly after the Holy Cross and UConn tilts. "The win not only cemented UMass' position in New England basketball but also brightened the team's hopes for an NIT bid," he emphasized.

Comparing this Redman squad to those he has played with in previous years, the 6'4 senior spoke of the '69-'70 group as having "the best team attitude I have ever witnessed." For him, pride in being a Redman has increased every year.

Athletics and academics, Gallagher finds, are well-balanced at UMass. He thinks that a highly rated sports program may act as a drawing-card for a school to entice prospective applicants, but judging by the value most New England schools place on education, he does not anticipate athletics overwhelming academics on this campus.

The 21-year old forward cited apathy of crowds when the team is on a losing streak and the imbalance of attention the campus community pays to different sports as the main problems plaguing an athletic department.

Singling out fairweather fans, he said, "I don't resent them much, because the players play mostly for the team's benefit anyway. But the capacity crowds we have been drawing definitely give us an added psychological lift."

Through teamwork, Gallagher has learned to respect the abilities of others. "The fans might complain when a certain player is picked over another to start, but only we know what we have done in practice lately and who deserves the starting positions."

A marketing major planning marriage in his hometown of Trenton, New Jersey, June 13, Jack answers to the nicknames of Worm, Turtle, and Jackson. "They (nicknames) usually relate back to past experiences with the team, as when Erving coined 'turtle' during a scrimmage with Hoftra when my reactions were pretty slow," Sam Provo has helped keep the name alive.

Gallagher participates in various intramurals during the spring, is a member of the Marketing Club, and thinks "gymnastics is a great sport." He plans to attend grad school and looks forward to college teaching career.

John Betancourt's dream will come true next Saturday night at nine p.m. "I've always wanted to play in Madison Square Garden, even more now that we have played at the Palestra." (The Redmen played Pennsylvania in Philadelphia's Palestra last January 17.)

"Adding schools with a name and a tradition to our schedule is another way to get recognition --- they are the only ones you get credit for beating."

By playing in a league, Betancourt feels that a team has something to strive for. "Independent teams are tense for every game, but we can take things as they come, moving closer and closer to our goal."

However, he would like to see the Yankee Conference expanded to a New England-wide conference to develop a stricter criteria for establishing the number one team in the area.

In graduating from the frosh to the varsity team, Betancourt has found his hardest adjustment has been "learning to handle the ball better."

"I don't have to worry about shooting as much because Ray takes care of most of the offense work. And covering richer-scoring guards than last year has also improved my defense."

Betancourt, nicknamed Bingo and Manny, chose Holy Cross as his favorite game of the season, both personally and as a team effort ("Gallagher stopped Kissane and Julie prove he is number one in New England!").

Majoring in Business Administration, the 5'11 guard is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity and plans to participate in softball intra-murals this spring.
(Tomorrow - Julius Erving)

Intramural swimming practice will be available in the Curry Hicks Cage pool on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, 7-9 p.m.

Intramural fliers announcing softball and soccer have been mailed. If you did not receive one, stop down at the intramural office and pick up a copy.

With NIT excitement at an unbelievably high pitch, there is a possibility that the demand for tickets will exceed the supply and many UMass fans will not get to go to New York City. Should such a situation present itself, and there is fair indication it will, it has been advised that students who would like to "see" the Redmen, telephone one or both of the television stations in Springfield (WHMP channel 40 and/or WWLP Channel 22). Enough requests to these studios could convince them to "get a feed" into a local New York City station that is carrying the Saturday night tilt.

Redmen Meet Marquette Prime for Upset

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Marquette University, coached by Al McGuire and owner of a 22-3 record, is UMass' basketball foe in the first round of the 33rd Annual National Invitational Tournament Saturday night at nine o'clock.

The Warriors, paced by junior guard Dean Meminger, have won eight straight and are favorites to win the NIT. This will mark the fourth time Marquette has gone to the NIT; it made it to the finals in 1967, only to lose to Southern Illinois.

Other Warriors of note include Hugh McMahon, Ric Cobb, Gary Brell, Joe Thomas and Jeff Sewell. A more detailed description of Marquette will run in Thursday's Collegian.

The Redmen, meanwhile, enter the Madison Square Garden classic with an 18-6 record and will be primed for an upset. Coach Jack Leaman has kept UMass in tune with practice sessions over the weekend and yesterday.

Tickets for this first-round contest went on sale yesterday evening at 6:30. Tickets for students are priced at $3.50 and will also go on sale this morning at Boyden ticket office from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

There are 1750 student tix available. Approximately 1700 were sold last night. Reports are pretty accurate that New York will send additional ducats for the Tuesday sale. There are also 500 adult tickets on hand. Price for these is $6.50.

HOOP NOTES - Saturday will mark the Redmen's first appearance in a post-season tournament since 1961 when they dropped an opening-round NCAA matchup to New York University. . .In an NIT article yesterday morning the New York Times singled out for special praise both Pete Maravich and Julius Erving. . .The world-famous paper put it like this, "Maravich and Erving are among the nation's glamour players.", in doing some thumbnail sketches of Who's Who in the tourney. . .Erving was also honored by this week's issue of Look Magazine whose publication of the U. Martin, Gray Heroes In Come from Behind Win

For the second time in thirty years, the 1970 UMass Ski Team captured the New England Inter-collegiate Ski Conference title on Saturday at Cranmore Mountain in North Conway, N.H. This capped of the Redmen's untouchable 67-5 win-loss ratio and gave the team the distinction of being the finest ski team in UMass history.

Saturday's course was set on Cranmore's Kandahur trail and was the longest course of the season. The course itself was a 38 gate one run Giant Slalom that ran the entire length of the trails. Racers with a low seed found the course to be slower because the warm weather softened the snow. In this particular race sixteen colleges were entered from both divisions of the NEISC. It proved to be a dramatic end to the Redmen's finest season.

Co-captain Jim Garstang was seeded number eleven and was the first man to race for the team. Garstang had a fine run, a 100.4 which snagged him a fourth place in the league and an eighth place out of over 100 top collegian racers from the East. This was good enough to give Garstang a second place finish in the final NEISC standings. Actually, he won the league placing first in five races and third in the other two but a bug in the F.I.S. point system that has yet to be ironed out gave the first place cup to Don Marsh of Tufts although he only won two races.

Along with Garstang's second place finish he was awarded the coveted sportsmanship award which is valued more by the skiers than winning the league. This was a great honor and Garstang is only the second skier from UMass to receive the award since it was originated in 1948.

Junior Co-captain Ted Martin had his finest race all season Saturday. Martin, wearing his silver racing suit, beat his teammate Garstang for the first time in two years by two full seconds. Posting an excellent time of 98.8, he placed second to Marsh by only two-tenths of a second and put him fourth overall among the 100 collegians. This helped Martin to be awarded seventh place overall for the year in the Osborne division of NEISC.

Chuck Walker, who has been the unsung hero for the Redmen this year, was moved up from his starting position of sixth for the team to starting third. Walker, probably the strongest skier on the team, is the finest clutch skier in the legue. He has saved the win for the Redmen in over half of their races. Experiencing difficulty on the top part of the course, Walker was a few seconds off the pace with a time of 109.7.

Jerry Curran, who had a bad start this year, made a tremendous comeback from a knee injury suffered in training camp in Oregon in the early part of the summer. Saturday, Curran, because of his low seed, starting number 52, turned in a run of 107.6 although being hampered by extremely soft snow. The amazing part of Curran's season is that he finished eleventh in the NEISC final standings after being given a slim chance of being able to ski again because of his knee injury.

At this point in the race, despite fine performances by the Redmen's first four, Lowell Tech had it all wrapped up and were jubilant because they figured with the condition of the course deteriorating and the snow condition slowing down the racers by about seven full seconds that they were the sure winners with a two second lead over UMass. But it was the last two Redman racers, John Gray and Jim Latimer, two newcomers to the team, that were to throw a little gloom into the lives of six Lowell Tech racers.

Gray, who has done a fine job of team skiing this year for the Redmen, was the racer who won the race for the skiers. With a starting number of 67, he had little or no chance to better Curran's 107.6. All the skiers needed was a 105.3, but with the soft snow this was almost untouchable. Yet when Gray crossed the finish line he brought with him the Redmen's first place trophy. He had turned in an amazing 103.2 and settled anyone's doubts as to who was the number one team on the mountain. By his performance Saturday and throughout the season, Gray captured fourteenth place, one of the highest finishes of a rookie in UMass history.

Still the Redmen and Lattimer were not satisfied with their four second victory. Lattimer, who has been the finest rookie ever to ski for UMass, was seeded 94th, two places away from the last man. Turning in a time of 101.3 he secured UMass' win, crushing Lowell Tech by nine full seconds. This was good enough to put Lattimer in tenth place in league standings, and also placed five of the Redmen's six racers in the top fourteen for the final NEISC standings. It also gave the team the largest winning margin of over 100 second in NEISC history.

While pages are being put away in the record books for other athletic teams at UMass, a special page should be set aside for Coach Bill MacConnell's ski team, because all the records that were held by other teams in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference now belong to the 1970 UMass ski team.

Girl Gymnasts Down Salem, Penn St. By Record Scores

The UMass girls gymnastics team scored their greatest number of points Saturday defeating Penn State and Salem State. Penn State scored 70.50 and Salem 68.25 but were soundly out scored by the UMass girls who scored 96 points in their best performance of the year.

Candy Breeze of Penn was the outstanding individual of the meet winning all around, floor exercises, vaulting and uneven bars. The UMass girls were outstanding in the balance beam taking the first three places. Marina Rodriguez won the event scoring her highest, a 9.3, with Linda Seikunas scoring a 8.92 and Ruth Morse turning in a 8.63.

Woman's gymnastics coach Mrs. Kirsti Kjeldsen said she was very pleased with Saturday's performance and has high hopes for the regionals at So. Conn., where their chief opponent will be current national champion Springfield. If the team does well they will go to the Nationals at Brigham Young University in Utah. Mrs. Kjeldsen says "We don't know how it will turn out but we will do our best."

Five College Black Studies Proposal

Text of The Area Committee Recommendations

RECOMMENDED STRUCTURE OF COOPERATION

February 24, 1970

The Five College Committee on Black Studies, commissioned to consider the most effective way to pool present and future resources of the five colleges in the development of black studies, being fully cognizant of recent black student demonstrations decrying the insufficient sense of urgency in developing and implementing such a program, hereby recommends:

1. That a Department of Black Studies, named for W.E.B. DuBois be created at the University of Massachusetts and a program, similar in outline and purpose to that set forth in the February 1, 1970 proposal submitted by the University Committee on Afro-American Studies be offered.

2. That each of the other four colleges develop a Department of Black Studies (and the nearest equivalent of such a Department at Hampshire College) on its home campus and appoint a Department Chairman and faculty members who will teach in their respective Departments. These faculty members collectively will be known as the Five College Black Studies Faculty, and thus may be asked to teach on more than one campus as the need arises.

3. That the Black Studies offerings in the five college area have coherence and be informed by a unified black perspective. This will be achieved best by instituting a Five College Black Studies Executive Committee.

4. That the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee be composed of ten members: the Black Studies Department chairman and a student from each of the five colleges, with the chairman chosen annually by the Executive Committee from along the five faculty members.

5. That an executive secretary be appointed by the executive committee to expedite its deliberations and decisions.

JUSTIFICATION FOR COOPERATIVE PROGRAM

Black protest has generated an almost fervent interest in research and study of the Afro-American experience. The voluminous materials of early black writers, which had been largely ignored by white publishers, are now being reproduced as rapidly as they are being sold. The reproduction of these works, combined with the thousands of books and articles on black experience published within the last decade, severely undermines the contention that the experience of black people in Africa and America lacks sufficient depth and amplitude to merit serious academic exploration. That certain educators continue to oppose the creation of black studies programs on these grounds is both a reflection of their general ignorance of black experience and an indication of their at least tacit support of the racist assertion that black people collectively are incapable of producing or accomplishing anything worthy of study. In the face of such attitudes, and in view of numerous distortions and sketchy treatment of black experience in traditional academic curricula, black students have called for the development of a meaningful Black Studies Program supervised by blacks not only to reveal the depths of their heritage, but also to approach the subject matter with a unified perspective and a comprehensive coverage.

The insistent demands of black students have produced unprecedented results. This is seen specifically in the proliferation of "Black Studies" programs on college campuses. However, there is little to justify the claim that these programs are uniformly meeting the needs of black students. Too often they are characterized by a mere "warming over" of existent course offerings and passed off as "Black Studies." Moreover, many of these courses are taught by instructors who are insensitive to the complex issues of race relations in America and who lack the historical, sociological and psychological imagination that would permit a comprehensive interpretation and analysis of materials pertaining to black experiences. To some extent this unfortunate situation, which continues to irritate black students, is a consequence of the lack of commitment on the part of college administrators and faculties to develop a viable program of black studies; in other cases it is the result of a lack of knowledge about the nature and philosophy underlying black studies. Finally, and most importantly, it is a reflection of the small number of black professors with expertise now available in black studies.

It is important to note that the above conditions have existed on the five campuses despite the belated attempts of the five college Presidents to address themselves to these issues. Even more significantly, the black students in the Valley have dramatically raised these issues in their recent unified display of discontent. Accordingly, the Five College Committee on Black Studies recognizes the urgent need to form a cooperative program designed to offer students the best possible curriculum in black studies and to eliminate the unnecessary competition among the Valley schools for a limited number of available black professors. In addition to achieving these ends, the Committee feels that a cooperative program would not only attract the best black talent but would also increase the possibility of support from funding agencies, many of whom have expressed an interest in programs of this nature (e.g., the Ford Foundation has given initial backing to a possible cooperative black studies program among Boston College, Boston University, Brandeis, Harvard, Northeastern and UMass/Boston).

The Committee strongly feels, however, that a five college program should be structured to preserve the integrity of black studies (i.e., provide a unified black perspective)* as well as to facilitate the hiring of black studies faculty. We feel that the structure we have outlined on page one of this proposal, which calls for the creation of a Department of Black Studies on each campus (or the nearest equivalent of such a Department at Hampshire College) and a Five College Black Studies Executive Committee, will accomplish these ends.

PROCESS OF IMPLEMENTATION

Consistent with the outlined structure of cooperation, the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee will be responsible primarily for the implementation process. Specifically, the Executive Committee will:

1. Make recommendations concerning faculty appointments and curricular offerings to each of the appointment committees and to the committees on educational policy of the colleges when faculty members are to be affiliated primarily with a college, or where courses are to be offered on a college campus.

2. Explore the relationship of specialized programs overseas (for example, in Africa or in the Caribbean) or in urban areas to the Black Studies major. (These opportunities may be arranged through separate schools of the University or through non-academic agencies, or through other five-college facilities -- e.g., the proposed five college Urban Center in the Springfield area.)

3. Coordinate the cultural calendars of the institutions in the Valley to arrive at a program of visiting lecturers, artists, and performers that would be of maximum benefit to the Black Studies programs in the Valley as a whole.

To expedite the process of developing a Five College Black Studies Executive Committee, we further recommend that an Interim Five College Black Studies Executive Committee be established immediately. In order to insure a continuing stability, the Interim executive Committee should be composed of ten members: A faculty member and a student from each of the five colleges. Each President will choose the faculty representative to the Interim Executive Committee with the advice and consent of the Black Community on the campus. The black students on the respective campuses will elect their representative to this Committee.

The specific functions of the Interim Executive Committee will be to:

1. Recommend candidates for the position of Department Chairman to the respective college.

2. Begin a search for an executive secretary.

3. Begin seeking outside financial support for the five college cooperative program.

Finally, we recommend that monies be allocated from the Mellon Fund for the Interim Executive Committee to facilitate its work in recruiting Department Chairmen and that a budget be established for the operation of the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee and further that this budget be contributed to by each institution.

CONCLUSION

Our suggested model of five college cooperation is designed to provide the various departments of black studies and the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee with the same degree of autonomy enjoyed by any other department or academic executive committee in the Valley. Such autonomy is defined by the freedom to recommend the hiring of faculty, to establish a curriculum and to develop a philosophy of education. We should therefore like to emphasize, that, in view of the many charges levied against black studies programs across the nation, no attempt is being made here to isolate black students or to prevent them from functioning as an integral part of the larger five college setting.

Moreover, the executive committee may actively seek to hire both black and white professors whose expertise is in the area of black studies, even though we feel that the greater emphasis should be placed on the recruitment of black scholars. Finally, the cooperative program is designed for all students but we recommend that a concerted effort be made by the various Black Studies Departments to insure that no black student who wishes to enroll in a black studies course is eliminated because of lack of space.

We submit this proposal with the strong belief that a firm commitment on the part of the five institutions to accept and implement this suggested model of cooperation will contribute to the intellectual growth of the four colleges and the University, and provide students with a body of knowledge heretofore largely absent from the curricula of institutions of higher learning.

Background of the Proposal

In accordance with the Five College Black Studies Committee's request, attached is a report of the Five College Black Studies Committee's recommendations concerning the development of a cooperative program of Black Studies in the Valley.

Reflecting the Committee's strong sense of urgency, we have held long weekly sessions in order to draft and submit a report to you as soon as possible. To maintain this sense of urgency we advise that the consideration of our recommendations be given highest and immediate priority.

The student members of our Committee have requested the inclusion of a statement to the effect that our recommendations: one, are in accord with one of their recently submitted demands; and, two, are being submitted in order to provide sufficient time for the Presidents to study the document and to formulate a response prior to the students stated March 3rd deadline.

To further expedite matters, members of this Committee will be willing and happy to appear at appropriate committee and faculty meetings at each institution to answer questions pertaining to this request.

Finally, we have attached a shortened version of the University of Massachusetts Black Studies Committee's proposal for the formation of the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies. We feel that this proposal should be read in conjunction with our report since it is in the spirit of the UMass proposal that our recommendations are being submitted.

Problem of The Seventies Is to Close U.S., Asia Gap

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

EDWIN O. REISCHAUER

Edwin C. Reischauer told a U-Mass audience last night that the Asian problem of the seventies involves America's attempt to lessen "the widening gap between the one-third of the world that includes industrial nations and the two-thirds of humanity not modernized."

Speaking as a guest of the Distinguished Visitors Program, the former U.S. Ambassador to Japan stated that this widening gap between the U.S. and Asia has been getting larger in recent years and represents a "great challenge for the future," which must be met successfully if we "hope to survive as a society."

Reischauer began his address by declaring that there is "No such thing as Asia!" "Everything that isn't the West we call Asia," he added. The DVP speaker called it an area that has presented great problems for the United States in the last 25 "catastrophic" years.

Last night's speech was divided into four areas by Reischauer: 1. The United States and its relations with Asia, 2. Communist China and its role in Asia, 3. Southeast Asia, 4. and Japan and its new and changing rl new and changing role in the Pacific.

The Asian expert said of the United States has been making several wrong assumptions concerning Asian politics since WWII. One of these has been that there is a "unitary monolithic Communism" in Asia. Reischauer said there is no such thing. As for the popular "domino theory", he called this the "silliest of all" assumptions. He also stated that Vietnam and the rest of Asia "is not a power vacuum. They are going to determine their own future with no outside influence Reischauer said of U.S. involvement in Asia that "We often are working against our own best interests."

Concerning the Vietnam situation Mr. Reischauer stated that the problem is trying to get out without doing too much harm to the future. He continued that the United States must be willing to give Asia the kind of aid it needs and not "turn our backs on them" because we have pulled out militarily. He views Vietnamization as "half fake and half reality." While Reischauer considers it a "cover term for withdrawal," he also believes it may be successful in leading to some sort of compromise solution to the war.

Of the current Laotian crisis, the former Ambassador to Japan said that "Laos is not like Vietnam. It is much worse!" He believes "We never should have gotten involved there at all." Reischauer did add, however, that he does not think the people of the United States would accept further extensive involvement (i.e., ground forces) and that Pre-

Faculty Senate Will Vote On Black Studies Proposal

By NEAL NOVACK
Senior Reporter

A special meeting of the Faculty Senate to review and vote on the Black Studies Proposal of February 1, 1970, has been scheduled for March 17.

The proposal for the establishment of the W.E.B. Dubois Department of Afro-American Studies was endorsed by the Faculty Senate Committee on Academic Matters on March 5. The proposal will now go before the Faculty Senate's special meeting on Tuesday. If the proposal is endorsed by the Faculty Senate, it will then be recommended to Chancellor Tippo, and if approved by him, the proposal will then await the final approval of the Board of Trustees.

Picking up the sequence of the proposal's approval in reverse order, the AD HOC committee, headed by Associate Professor of English, A. W. Plumstead, recommended on March 4 that the proposal be sent before the Academic Matters Committee for review.

The Feb. 1 proposal which was originally drawn up by the University Committee headed by Assistant Professor of English Michael Thelwell, was distributed yesterday along with the main proposals of the AD HOC committee to all faculty senators.

In the special report made by the Academic Matters Committee recommending approval of the proposal in principle by the Faculty Senate, it was moved: (1) That the Faculty Senate approve the creation of the W.E.B. Dubois Department of Afro-American Studies in the College of Arts & Sciences as generally stated in the proposal of February 1, 1970, with the understanding that the department shall be subject to the rules and regulations of the College of Arts & Sciences as administered by the Dean and the appropriate administrative officials. (2) That new courses to be offered by the Afro-American Studies Department be taught on a provisional basis for the first semester, 1970, until official procedure s can be followed.

Rent Hike May Be Less Than Proposed

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

Preliminary researches by the tripartite Presidential Advisory Committee on Rents and Fees have yielded the prospect of a rent increase which, in the words of committee member Senator James Albert, will be "substantially less than originally proposed": to date, traditional dorms from a projection of $550 a year reduced to $500; Southwest from $600 to $560; and project 12 from $730 to $650.

Though these figures are by no means final, they are the product of a number of committee policy decisions which appear to be more or less firm. Since the committee has yet to explore a number of areas, it is conceivable that the figures will go lower yet.

Though the Committee is advisory to the President, the likelihood that its recommendations will be adopted is considerable, and therefore a degree of relief from the projected rents appears certain.

The Committee's work has been an example of community cooperation to a degree that is unusual. The Committee has drawn upon student, administrative, and particularly faculty resources: of particular value has been the assistance in financial analysis provided by Professor James Ludtke, member of the committee and head of the Department of General Business and Finance, who, in the words of Senator Albert, "shredded (Associate Treasurer) Brand's report (projecting a 1/3 increase)".

A further cause for hope is the sympathetic cooperation expected from the Board of Trustees, particularly the Committee on Building and Grounds, which will receive the report of the Rent Committee on March 31. The Board is known to have been as surprised as the students were over the rent increase, and to be nearly as concerned as the students in moderating the increase. The Board will act on the question at their April meeting.

The Committee's tentative decisions resulting in the decrease include: overruling a Treasurer's Office decision to pay a portion of the principal of the short term notes used to finance the most recent projects (the Treasurer's Office saw this action as a token of good faith, but the committee held that the backing of the bonds by the Commonwealth was sufficient surety); reducing the furbishing replacement fund from $450,000 to $250,000, the brunt of the reduction to

Butterfield Trial Set for March 31

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

The first General Court session of the "Butterfield Trial" ended with the enforcement of a three week delay in proceedings.

Butterfield president, Edward Foss and Treasurer, Richard Hanson requested this delay last night in an effort to prepare the defense's case against the alleged charges of non-compliance with the Student Senate revised financial act, billS-15.

The trial, officially named "Richard Verrochi versus Butterfield", is the result of what Rick Verrochi, Chairman of the Student Senate Ways and Means Committee, called "refusal to co-operate." The charges against Butterfield constitute the first of their kind; there is no precedent.

The "Butterfield-120", named so by a Butterfield resident, because of the number of residents within Butterfield House is re - scheduled for March 31, 1970 at 7:30 at a place yet to be designated. The defense asked the court to reserve the Student Union ballroom or a comparable hall. The case is expected to receive widespread attention from the Central area and other dorms which have been affected by R.S.O. student senate policies.

Rick Verrochi, senator from Greenough, will act as prosecutor for the Student Senate. Verrochi gave hint to some under-currents within the Student Senate when he informed the Court that the charges would be dropped immediately if the Student Senate passed a motion calling for dismissal of the case.

The trial shows signs of becoming another marathom event; indications are that the Butterfield Defense will call some 100 or more witnesses. Prosecutor, Rick Verrochi has already requested the presence of some nine students and what he described as "other materials."

One student senator remarked upon hearing of the proceedings that he felt that nothing could actually happen unless there were very serious allegations involved. Apparently the nature of the trial is concerned with what Verrochi termed "co-operation" with and compliance to the principles behind the present R.S.O. Student Senate Revised Financial Policy Act of 1967.

Earlier in the year approximately twenty dormitories had financial records subpoenaed and funds frozen by the Ways and Means Committee in connection with alleged discrepancies with R.S.O. policy. All other dorms have in some way re-instated themselves to the R.S.O. norm. Butterfield stands alone.

Comm. Council To Plea for Library Funds

Members of the University and State Communications Council will appear today before the Joint Education Committee in Boston to plead the case for passage of a bill that requests $3,000,000 over the next three years for improvement of the UMass library.

Bob Harrington and Judy Gill will be presenting the rationale (published in yesterday's Collegian) for the bill, which was drawn up and proposed by USCC.

The UMass library ranks 34th out of 40 state universities. Mr. Siefried Feller, chief bibliographer of Goodell Library, has said that due to cutbacks by the Massachusetts State Legislature the library has had to cancel orders on periodicals and all further book orders.

USCC has also planned a Press Day and a Legislators Day for this Spring. According to members of the Council, much help is still needed to complete the plans for these two days. A meeting will be held Sunday night at 8:00 in the student Union. The Council encourages those who are interested to attend.

Campus Votes in Nat'l Referendum Withdrawal from Vietnam Favored

ALMOST 1800 STUDENTS voted yes to a referendum question yesterday asking, "Do you support immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnam?" Less than 350 were opposed. (MDC photo by Pat Lempart)

Over 2,000 UMass students participated in a national college referendum on the Vietnam War and voted overwhelmingly in favor o cessation of U. S. involvemen there. In answer to the question, "Do you support the immediate withdrawal of all U. S. troops from Vietnam?", 1771 students voted "Yes" and 341 voted "No".

The referendum, held in the Student Union Ballroom yesterday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., was sponsored by the Association of the American Universities in Washington, D. C. It was run by the Senate Social Action Committee in conjunction with two student political groups, Young Americans for Freedom (Y.A.F.), and the Student Mobilization Committee (S.M.C.).

Y.A.F. and S.M.C., who hold opposing views of American involvement, hope the poll will give an accurate view of sentiment among college students towards the war. Results of the nationwide voting will be released before the April Moratorium.

The Nation and The World

Constitutional Hang-up Faces Lower Voting Age

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration - still on record in favor of lowering the voting age to 18 - vigorously opposed yesterday doing it by an act of Congress.

And Margaret Mead, the nation's foremost woman anthropologist, warned that any technicality that blocks extending the voting age to the nation's youth will be regarded by them as a trick and as proof there is no room for them in the political system.

William H. Rehnquist, an assistant attorney general, told senators studying the issue that the Justice Department has severe doubts that lowering the voting age by congressional vote would be constitutional.

Such a move is the thrust of an amendment offered by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield to a pending voting rights bill.

Two other senators, one of them Republican Leader Hugh Scott, have introduced a separate bill which would do the same thing, but be detached from the emotional debate which has accompanied Senate consideration of the voting rights bill aimed at assuring minority group voting rights.

Rehnquist cited Supreme Court decisions to bolster his argument that high court approval of an across-the-board lowering of the voting age would be at least dubious.

"No informed observer can affirmatively state that the statutory approach would pass muster with the Supreme Court," Rehnquist said.

He made these other points:

"Doubt as to the validity of the statute could create confusion and uncertainty as to the outcome of a presidential election."

The longer process needed to amend the Constitution - by winning House and Senate approval and then ratification by three quarters of the states - is necessary to build the popular concensus needed to bring younger citizens into the ranks of voters.

The administration amendment would lower the voting age in federal elections only.

Chairman Birch Bayh, D-Ind., of a subcommittee on amendments, and other senators want to lower the age in all elections - federal, state and local.

Rehnquist contended the concept of federalism demands that each state must decide voter qualifications for its own elections.

Dr. Mead joined several other witnesses in contending extension of the ballot to youth is a logical, timely and a completely justified action.

"We need them to ask the timely questions, to release the latent power and strength of this country to deal responsibly with the present and future," she said.

Not Rap Brown In Car, Says Med. Examiner

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) - An associate of Negro militant H. Rap Brown and a man whose identity remained a mystery were killed Tuesday by an explosion that tore apart the car in which they were riding south of here.

Brown himself was nowhere to be found - not at home in New York City or here, where he is on trial on charges of arson and inciting to riot.

But a medical examiner and Brown's lawyer, William M. Kunstler, said they did not believe the second dead man was Brown.

Lamar, S.C. Uneasy As School Reopens

LAMAR, S.C. (AP) Lamar public schools, closed a week ago after angry whites attacked buses carrying Negro pupils, reopened Tuesday as National Guardsmen and state police stood guard. Only 76 pupils showed up.

Fifty-two of the 76 were black. Two small groups of white adults were turned back by police and guardsmen as they approached the dusty campus of the Lamar high and elementary school complex, which resembled an armed camp.

Highway patrolmen, in riot gear and armed with riot guns, stood in double lines.

Guardsmen patroled the area, armed with rifles and tear gas launchers. Armored personnel carriers were parked in the front and rear of the school. Two National Guard helicopters and a spotter plane flew overhead.

The first group of pupils arrived about 8 a.m. in buses driven by teen-agers and escorted by highway patrol car. All those arriving by bus were Negroes. Several white pupils were driven to school in cars by adults.

Soon after school opened, 18 white men walked to within one block of the campus and were confronted by a double line of patrolmen with riot guns at the ready.

One white man was arrested by a State Law Enforcement Division agent on charges of carrying a club. The man was not identified.

Gov't Charges 5 More In My Lai Incident

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) - The Army filed new charges of murder, assault and rape Tuesday in connection with the alleged massacre at My Lai and added five more soldiers, including Capt. Ernest L. Medina, to the list of men accused in the incident. The number of accused now stands at 10.

Medina, 33, of Pico Rivera, Calif., is a former commanding officer of Lt. William L. Calley Jr., who goes to trial May 18 on charges of premeditated murder in the deaths of 102 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai.

The Army charged Medina with three counts, one of maiming and murder, one of murder and one of assault with a deadly weapon. The two murder counts are linked to the sweep through the hamlet March 16, 1968, and the assault charge stems from an incident the following day. All allegedly occured during interrogation.

The Army would not release further details because public disclosure might prejudice the rights of the accused, said a spokesman at Ft. McPherson here, where seven accused have been assigned.

The five charged Tuesday now face investigations to determine whether they will be brought before a court-martial for prosecution.

Calley, a 26-year-old platoon leader under Medina, was charged Sept. 5, the first to be accused after the alleged massacre came to light 18 months after the raid.

There have been several separate investigations of the raid, including the Army's own survey conducted by Lt. Gen. William R. Peers.

He and his investigators sought to determine whether field officers concealed the result of the My Lai raid.

Pentagon Says MIRV Missles Done by June

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon disclosed yesterday that the first U.S. Land-based missiles with multiwarhead MIRVs will be deployed in June.

The disclosure was made by Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamans at a closed session of the Senate Armed Services Committee. Deployment previously had been listed as scheduled in late 1970.

"After a number of delays and stretchouts," he said, "we will start fielding the Minuteman III in June."

The Minuteman III is an advanced intercontinental ballistic missile ICBM equipped with three Multiple Independently Targeted Re-entry Vehicles MIRVs.

Senate critics of the Nixon administration's arms-control policies have fought for the past year to convince it to take the lead in a U.S.-Soviet moratorium of MIRV deployment as a spur to the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks SALT which reopen April 16 in Vienna.

The administration, however, has taken the position that continued progress on deploying the MIRV is necessary both for national security and to enable the United States to negotiate from strength at the SALT talks.

Farmer Forces HEW to Ignore Miss.Governor

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration, under the insistent prodding of its bestknown Negro official, yesterday overrode the governor of Mississippi's veto of $4.2 million in federal funds for three Head Start programs.

Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch brushed aside the objections of Mississippi Gov. John Bell Williams and started new money flowing to pre-school, early learning projects that enroll 2,819 mostly Negro children, in Cohema County, Hines County and Greenville, Miss.

The action was a victory within the administration for James Farmer, assistant secretary of welfare in charge of Head Start and one-time civil rights activist as head of the Congress on Racial Equality.

Leaders of such groups as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have challenged Farmer in recent weeks to prove his civil rights credentials by forcing the administration to override the Mississippi veto.

Farmer, in turn, carried his case to the White House through Finch.

Gluckstern Assumes Duties of Provost

Dr. Oswald Tippo, Chancellor of UMass, Amherst, announced today that Associate Provost Robert L. Gluckstern will perform the duties of the Provost on an interim basis, effective immediately.

Dr. Tippo's appointment as Chancellor on Feb. 23 created the vacancy in the Provost's position. Dr. Gluckstern, who will retain his present title, will assume the duties of the Provost as the chief academic officer of the Amherst campus.

According to Chancellor Tippo, a search committee of students, faculty and administrators will be formed to make recommendations to fill the Provost's position. The search will start later this spring, after a decision is reached on campus administrative reorganization.

Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen will continue to work closely with Dr. Gluckstern in the Provost's Office.

HCC Seeks Room for Rubin

A group of Holyoke Community College students have contacted Chicago Seven defendant Jerry Rubin to speak there April 3.

However, the city is reluctant to give the students a place for Rubin to speak. HCC students have been as yet unable to secure an auditorium for his appearance as the college does not have one of its own.

Holyoke Mayor Taupier said he was against the use of a public auditorium for the speaking engagement, which was contracted after HCC students rated Rubin, in a school-wide poll, the person they would most like to hear speak.

The students were reportedly warned the adult population of Holyoke was becoming "up-tight" about Rubin's appearance.

fall on Southwest; attempting, through stricter enforcement of existing off-campus permission rules and expansion of the room deposit system to include all dorm residents instead of just freshmen, to insure a 95% occupancy rate, thereby raising the amount of rental revenue; and increasing swingshift and transfer students to maintain full occupancy second semester. The general situation has also been aided by a recent downward fluctuation in the bond market.

The Committee is also exploring such things as the possibility of janitorial services on every other day, with work reduction to be accomplished by staffing the new dorms with presently employed janitors, and not filling janitorial vacancies; checking the reasonableness of materials and supplies figures; and raising the occupancy rate from 95% to 98% for 1971-72. It is hoped, particularly by this last measure, to avoid a rent increase next year.

sident Nixon will probably not commit the nation there.

Reischauer talked on China next and pointed out that the Communist power is a "great and proud country, but one in serious trouble." He went on to point out that the Chinese have made "no significant economic advances in the last ten years. They are very likely to be deeply involved in their own problems for a very long time. They are a rational people and it is not to their interest to go abroad in military adventurism."

The guest speaker feels President Nixon has made signs in the right directions in dealing with China and that if the U.S. pulls out of Vietnam militarily relations with the Communists will ease.

Finally Mr. Reischauer spoke of Japan which he said would perhaps play the key role in determining the future of the United States, China and Southeast Asia in the Pacific area.

He termed the nation a "giant" with a "great sense of nationalism." The Japanese problem is one of its role in the world, especially Asia, according to Reischauer. While it is "quite capable of going its own way," militarily and economically, there is great concern over becoming a potential nuclear power. Reischauer believes that too much of a buildup of Japanese military power, combined with U.S. withdrawal from Asia, would cause great tension among other nations such as China and Soviet Union.

Better Policies

Butterfield House is being charged with violation of R.S.O. policy and Massachusetts State Law; allegedly withholddorm funds from R.S.O. There will be a trial and depending on how adament the prosecution (Senate Ways and Means Committee Chairman, Richard Verrochi–Greenough) is in its desire to enforce an unworkable policy upon the students of Butterfield House, there may be a conviction.

The conviction will probably be in the form of a demand (Writ of adaemus) upon the residents of Butterfield to submit to the R.S.O. office any and all financial records.

Butterfield residents in the past and at Monday night's meeting with the Senate Ways and Means Committee have consistently told the Student Senate that any and all financial records that might be kept at Butterfield are purely "Butterfield business". Butterfield residents apparently feel that as long as Butterfield Residents are satisfied with their policies, it is no one elses responsibility.

Student Senate investigators have inferred that they have gathered information which would indicate that Butterfield has made some financial transactions outside of the normal R.S.O. policy, which has never been respected by the majority of dorms on this Campus.

Senator Verrochi continually asserts that the actions of the Senate are necessary. With strict interpretation of the S.G.A. constitution, the Ways and Means committee is entirely justified and correct in conducting drug arrests and investigations on campus.

The break-down of this parallel is that the University and State police have no choice because of their status in our State Governmental system. People would be extremely irked at non-enforcement of drug laws against those social degenerates, who use drugs and populate more than half of our campus.

The Student Senate has a duty to the students of this University. That duty is basically to keep students whom it represents from being abused and to further the best interests of the students. The Senate Ways and Means Committee should recognize the realities of Butterfield's position.

If the Senators involved with bringing Butterfield to court would spend less time enforcing un-workable laws and more time creating workable financial policies and laws, like the MacMillan Bill (Financial policy act of 1970), this University might have a government less like the Massachusetts State government.

Border Clashes

Imagine you are a Neolithic cave man, and you live prepared to kill or be killed. Over the other side of the valley lives another big strong cave man, who thinks about you in a like manner. In the garden in front of his cave is a huge sleeping dragon which seems only to yawn and accept food from its master, emitting occasional rumbling and roaring noises. One day, to your amazement, the dragon lifts up a clawed foot and takes a vicious swipe at its master, thereby refuting all your own ideas about having to fight both of them together. Suddenly a thick fog descends on the valley and you scratch your head in anxious puzzlement.

Just so is the United States looking at the present situation between the U.S.S.R. and China, awaiting any developments in the talks which, apart from a three-week recess in mid-December, have been going on since Mid-October in Peking. There has been a real possibility of nuclear war between the two countries; even before the first publicized and now famous border clash last March on the Ussuri River. The Chinese had set up minefields and stationed some 600,000 new troops along the Northern border. Likewise the Russians had built up their armed forces to somewhere around 40 divisions, transported by the Trans-Siberian Railroad, which follows much of the border.

The border is the friction point. It runs for nearly 4,500 miles (the longest in the world) going over mountains and following rivers through Sinkiang, Mongolia and Manchuria, eventually arriving at the sea north of North Korea. There is nothing exceptional about the clashes, which have been going on for about 300 years, except that the Russians chose to magnify them suddenly, in part to elicit sympathy after losing prestige over Czechoslovakia, and in part to take world attention off the then East Berlin flare-up, it has been suggested.

Unfortunately the present border was set up by the Peking Treaty of 1860 along the Ussuri River; it was imposed on the weak Chinese Manchu dynasty by old Czarist Russia, China is now pointing to Lenin's annulment in 1918 of all treaties signed by the Czars; Russia refuses to give back any of the 500,000 square miles they happily accepted last century. According to the NEW YORK TIMES of February 16, the Peking talks are deadlocked; China is in a state of preparedness for war, digging bomb shelters throughout the country and training her soldiers intensively. Russia is already prepared, obviously ready to wipe out the Chinese nuclear installations at Lop Nor in Sinkiang Province, but stating firmly that she does not want war.

The present situation was set off last March 2, by a band of chanting Chinese who marched over the frozen Ussuri River toward Chen Pao Tao, or Damansky Island as the Russians call it. Some 30 Russian soldiers were killed by hidden machine guns and mortars when they ventured forth to parley. Apparently Damansky is not even on most maps, and it is possible that the "Thalweg", or deep channel, which originally delineated the border, gradually changed from one side of the island to the other. Be that as it may, the incident provoked massive demonstrations in Moscow, and equally massive counter demonstrations throughout China.

The second incident occurred about two weeks later at the same spot. Some western observers think that Mao was sending probes to test Russian strength in the area. His probes met the heavy artillery that Russia had moved up quietly during the interim, and in two days of fighting, hundreds of Chinese troops lost their lives. Mao had been stung badly. The Chinese embassy windows in Moscow were smashed and ink covered the outside walls, highlighting the demonstrations there. The West was generally delighted to see them at each other's throats; China was unified at a time of crisis, when Mao needed something to take the accent off the internal mess; and Russia felt that at the World Communist summit meeting in Moscow in a couple of months from then, China would be disgraced, and Russia somewhat elevated from her unhappy position after the Czechoslovakia invasion. All in all it was an extremely interesting situation.

In mid June of 1969, some Chinese soldiers in Sinkiang province followed a herd of sheep through the mountain border pass at the Dzungarian gate, 3,000 miles from Damansky Island and forced their way into Russian Kazakastan, only to be driven back. This incident, although in itself nothing very special, was again blown up by the Russians at home. This area is between the Russian nuclear testing grounds and China's own establishments at Lop Nor in the desert; it is also an incredibly rich and untapped area for uranium, oil and minerals. Small wonder that there was bad feeling.

The U.S. has been forced to acknowledge that China is a power with an independent mind. They are talking together in Warsaw, much to Soviet suspicion. Conversely, China is suspicious of Russian relaxation (one soviet paper recently called Taiwan a 'country').

If all this seems ominous, the west may be relaxing because the question now beginning to loom is: When will China become a United Nations member, rather than when will war break out between Russia and China?

Mid–East Again

In the Collegian of March 3 there were two letters alluding to the current Mid-East situation which literally beg for replies. Mr. Fortin and an anonymous person both praised the Arab cause while villifying Israel and Keith Bromery.

To take Mr. Fortin point by point, he first implicitly defended the sabotaging of aircraft bound for Israel, while condemning the bombing of an Egyptian factory by Israel. Considering the fact that Arabs bomb planes, blow up crowded marketplaces, and attack innocent tourists one can hardly feel too badly about the ACCIDENTAL deaths of 74 Arabs.

Mr. Fortin also called for the establishment of a secular state in Israel. To the extent that Israel is a religion-dominated state it is non-conformist Jews who are oppressed by the orthodox. Arab religious shrines are guarded and honored - a stark contrast to the days of Arab rule of Jerusalem, when Jews were not allowed to worship in freedom at their shrines. By referring to Israel as a non-secular state Mr. Fortin assumes that Jews are not a people in the sense that Kenyans, Irish, Syrians, or French are. Yet it is a sociological fact that "Jewishness" is not as much a religion as a culture and Jews are a culture group, a people. Certainly if Irish, Pakistanis, Africans, Americans and Czechoslovakians are entitled to live in their lands as free men so are Jews.

Mention was made in both letters of oppression, massacres, and the legitimate aspirations of the Arabs. The letters ignore the fact that throughout history Jews have been THE oppressed people, and that Israel was established as a refuge. That Arabs are second-class citizens of Israel and that Arabs on the West Bank are under Israeli rule is but a logical consequence of Arab terrorism and aggression. In Israel most Arab rights are respected and their political parties are represented - in Egypt the entire adult male Jewish population is imprisoned by Nasser.

While it is a sad fact that Israelis have committed some atrocities against Arabs, they are slight compared to the consistent shootings, explosions and mutilations visited upon Jews by the Arabs since the '20's. Furthermore it should be recalled that during World War II the Arab leaders collaborated with the Nazis, hitherto known as oppressors par excellence. Today Nazi scientists work for the Arab states. Records and documents from the 1967 war show that the Arabs planned to murder a large segment of the Jewish population of Israel, in other words to commit genocide. Oppression; Mr. Fortin does not know what it is.

As for the legitimate aspirations of the Palestinian people, the UN partitioned Palestine in 1948, attempting to be fair to all concerned. The Arabs have refused to abide by this solution, and have refused to help those Palestinian Arabs who left Israel in 1948. Palestinians fare better in Israel than they do in Arab states. For the benefit of Mr. Fortin and others, Jews have legitimate aspirations too, and are entitled to the same rights as everyone else in the world.

The anonymous letter indicted the "liberal elite" of the United States for its support of Israel and criticism of the terrorists. It would be impossible for civilized men to take any other course. Israel is a democratic, sovereign nation - the so called resistance fighters are attempting to destroy a legal state and to steal a land which historically and by vote of a world tribunal belongs to the Israelis. The land was partitioned, each side got a share. Sometimes history is cruel - to the Jews when most were expelled from Israel 2000 years ago, in 1948 to those Arabs who lived in the Israeli side of Palestine. But a fair partition was made - it is the Arabs who refuse to live in peace. No one dares condemn the legitimate sentiment of various ethnic-Americans for their friends and relations in England during WW II, or in South Africa today, how dare anyone condemn Jews for support of Israel. There is no conflict of interest or disloyalty.

As for applying the same criteria to Israel as to Viet Nam, there is a clear comparison. In Israel one finds native Israelis fighting not one but many foreign aggressors no bomb, mutilate and plan genocide in a fashion hardly comparable to the unplanned, small atrocities of the US in Vietnam. Liberals, Jews and non-Jews, need have no compunction about calling for US withdrawal from Vietnam and supporting Israel, the issues are congruent, the right of a people to live free from terror and political domination by other people. To be a liberal is thus to be an American in the most honorable sense of both words.

Lastly, notice should be taken by Arabs, Mr. Fortin and the anonymous person, Argentinian neo-Nazis who carve swastikas on the breasts of Jewish girls (see AFTER THE MELTING POT by Glazer and Moynihan), and the general lot of anti-semites that there is no law that says that Jews have to be patsys for other peaple, have to play by rules other peoples ignore, or have to get the world's pardon for being Jews. The days of the cowardly, self-deprecating "Kike" are long gone, freedom and dignity are for everyone.

For Radicals

To the editor:

Hungry-eyed radicals have been searching this issue of the COLLEGIAN for an announcement as to the meeting time and place of a new radical organization. This organization was to bring together into a unified, disciplined action group furthering the cause of radical change those elements which made the Humphrey disruption such a huge success. Sorry, kids, we blew it. With god-less communists you can form a disciplined organization, but with the anarchists we have on this campus - nothing.

So WHAT IS TO BE DONE? as Lenin once said. Some of us would still like to form what we call, tongue in cheek, the NDP:RC. The stands for the "New Democratic Party: A Radical Collective." The name New Democratic Party was inspired by the Canadian socialist party of the same name. We are not affiliated with the Canadian NDP, but since we do consider ourselves socialists we thought it would be a nice gesture to swipe the name. Then, rather than form the organization and wait for a faction to develop, we decided to create a faction right away and call it the Radical Collective. This faction will be the "leftist" part of our NDP (rightists will have to create their own). This faction immediately seized control of our NDP (why wait until later), and so even before anything happens we are the NDP:RC. Sort of the Bolsheviks of the Social Democrats, you understand.

The NDP will hopefully be a small, dedicated collective of radical activists seeking, first, to define, consolidate, and defend a radical community here on campus and, second, to educate on issues as well as to inspire and support students' direct actions. The group, or if it is a large one, the cells of the group, will be small and close. (Note: We don't want any foul-mouthed people in the group. We don't want any of that stuff that went on at the Humphrey thing where a certain professor, whose name I will not mention but his initials are Howard Gadlin, had the courage to call Hubert B. Humphrey by his middle name--how informal! And this despite the fact that he knew Humphrey was a distinguished speaker. Personally I feel that swearing is for the home, not public places. So nip it, Howard. Swearing at non-distinguished speakers may be all right, but it said right there on the program that Humphrey was a "distinguished" visitor. Some people, honestly! They don't even take the time to read the programs to find out who is distinguished and who isn't.)

But back to our present concern. If any radicals who feel the need for an organized, disciplined, activist group with which to participate would like to join us in forming a working party, come to our general meeting in the Nantucket Room at the Student Union, Thursday evening, March 12th, at 8:30 p.m.

Subversively yours,

Faster Changes

To the editor:

Why do we need a twenty story library when we can't even buy books for the old one? Why are projects started without being adequately researched and planned? Their failure just results in everyone using those big words "why" and "why not". Why must there be requirements and why must a student be evaluated for personal meaning in a subject by a machine (or isolated instructor) that doesn't give a damn?

Maybe "the hallmark of a great university is a great library", but the foundations of this hallmark is a mature community. A handful of students and a few faculty members aren't going to make this. The result has to include everyone who lives and learns in the system.

Maybe I am a pessimistic individual who cannot appreciate what is mine, I don't know. I do know more changes are needed and they should be made faster than they are presently. The best way for this to happen would be for UMass to lose its accreditation. Maybe then the academic and social conditions will change and change fast. Questions will be asked and they will have to be answered.

DICK BOUCHER

No Privilege

To the editor:

Monday evening in the "F-lot" student parking area in Southwest, a stolen car from Chicopee was dumped off. Thieves unsuccessfully attempted to steal my car, damaging its ignition system. When I reported the attempt to the UMass police, I was informed that another car was stolen from the lot that night, as yet unrecovered. All this under the bright lights of "F-lot". Evidently, these lights are not a very good deterent to crime. Instead, because of the lack of a night guard, these lights serve only to aid thieves.

What can be done to protect students' cars in "F-lot"? I suggest that the area be fenced in with a police guard station erected at its "exit-entrance" as at other university parking areas. To reach this goal, all users of "F-lot" must petition Mr. Robert P. Ferriter, the parking coordinator, NOW.

According to Mr. Ferriter, it is a "privilege" for us to park our cars in "F-lot". However, because of the large amount of vandalism and theft there, I don't consider this a privilege. DO YOU?

RICHARD D. ROTHSTEIN

An Alternative? Partial Reply

To the editor:

The Mills House incident has occurred. That's about the only fact of the matter.

Now that the events have been well aired, it's up to this "academic community" to realize that the only way to lessen the tension is for white to respect what the black community is striving for. The white community of this country cannot forget the ideals that are supposedly its basis. If anybody wants to see these ideas achieved, or at least positive steps in that direction, the university's "intellectually capable" had better start responding to the present. Pondering on the whys is not the way.

Each individual must view his own situation and reactions. If polarization is the goal, then the path of present misunderstanding will be more than adequate. But if something more is desired, which I must believe is the goal, the white community had better get over its feeling of unshakable superiority and righteousness. So far the university's response to the black community's interest has been giving in to immediate pressure, not a re-evaluation of goals and ideas. Community recognition of the problem is a necessary step, but it's not the solution. Now it's the responsibility of every white person involved in the university and the whole of American society to at least admit that the problem is not solvable by past actions. An internal change in individual and cultural values will have to occur. I know it's not easy. But what's the alternative?

To the editor:

One of God's prominent commandments is: "Love your neighbor as yourself." This commandment was to become the building block for all mankind. Unfortunately, this block has been devoured in crevices which humanity can't mend.

I am especially speaking about man's ignorance, self-interest which leaves the truth and good in every man. Every man whether Black or White has some qualities of God in order to exist. The Black man has had his difficulties but so has many a White man.

A person's flesh is not a symbol of love, hate, revenge, power and other characteristics.

There should be a way Black and Whites could exchange their ideas. I suggest that Black and White leaders blend their ideas and arrange special meetings throughout the country in every large city and town which would involve the power transfer of both White and Black. Regional directors should be in charge of specific, cultural, sport, social and economic activities which exist between the two races.

This is just a step up a steep ladder, but by climbing slowly, the vine will strengthen.

The Black are Black in flesh, but deep in their inner selves, the White man lives.

Togetherness

To the editor:

The situation in Brooks boiled down to this: what is less harmful, inconvenience or destruction? Doctor Janowitz was stubborn to the upmost degree, although the effectiveness, facilities, and purpose of Mental Health would be little impaired by moving to Arnold. Mental Health would have the same amount of room space and be spared the problem of sharing their facilities with a girl's dorm. The Brooks girls have never liked having only three-fourths of a house. Every year they ask to have Mental Health removed. In fact, the counselors had to walk up to the second floor and go down the corridor and back down stairs just to go from door to door to lock up. The only excuse for not moving to Arnold House was the fact that it is far away from the infirmary. Well, Arnold is no more than a five minute walk from the infirmary and a shuttle has been provided to go to and from there. Yet Janowitz found excuse after excuse, every one far-fetched and easily rebutted effectively. Even though he finally did agree to move, he is still making life difficult for us. Although the space in Arnold was cleared by 1:00 p.m. Friday, he refused to move until Wednesday. And he also accused us of using all the toilets on his floor and leaving them unflushed and also throwing up in the bathtub.

The twenty-one of us enjoyed a rapport and living situation which is generally needed in the large impassive university. Becoming adjusted to a new group of people in a new environment is extremely difficult in the middle of the semester. Brooks was the only place where we were welcome as a group. In order for our group to keep functioning at all, we needed to be together in a place where we could continue to live unoppressed. The girls in Brooks gave this to us, and after long days of inconvenience, loneliness, frustration and despair, we will not be denied.

No Trust

To the Editor:

Last weekend did it.

You can't trust anyone at all. No one.

All we can do is extend our "thanks" to the person who really made our weekend. We appreciate the way you broke into the car and wiped us clean (oops! you forget to take the work boots on the floor in the back seat. At least 25 bucks right there, easy.) Well, enjoy the tapes - the carrying case is nice, too, isn't it. Convenient. Cash in on the suitcase. Enjoy the bitterness you've caused and cash in on the sentimental value. By the way, are you the same one who picked a pocket a few years ago? The same one who crushed me into the fence at the Winter Carni concert? The same one who calls people niggers? Oh, not the same one, huh. You've got friends.

Because of you we can't keep our doors unchained, our windows open, our laundry in the dryer any more. Because of you the vicious circles of the world - ghettos, riots, wars - keep grinding away at the human race.

And people complain that we don't have open minds. We can't - they might get stolen.

Thru the Editor:

To my friend Peggy Forfa, I'm sorry that it took so long to get a reply out to you, but the combination of impending hourlies and the eclipse made time hard to find. I hope you didn't think that I'd forgotten about you.

I also regret having reduced you to name calling with my last letter. It was not my intention to do so.

To answer a few specific questions you asked: No, I did not rush down from Grayson to obstruct the raid. No one rang the fire alarm here to notify me. What bothers me is that in saying, "Did the fire alarm awake you at 2:30 a.m.?", you are inferring that, had the fire alarm here rang, I would NOT have gone to support anti-raid action in Southwest. In other words, you are accusing me of not having the courage of my convictions, so to speak. I challenge you on this because I believe that you do not have adequate grounds to make that accusation, or to infer it's equivalent.

I CAN imagine everyone at Southwest surrounding Cance, not necessarily shrieking filthy words but making a general commotion. I used the idea of filthy words on the theory that a chorus of people shouting obscenities creates a more aggravating noise than a chorus of people reciting passages from OLIVER TWIST or ALICE IN WONDERLAND, and the whole point of creating a commotion is to eat away at the policemen's nerves until they get so paranoid they have to leave before completing the raid, at which point, we prevent them from leaving, making them even more nervous and paranoid than before until they are afraid to return again once they do get out. I will readily agree that a two hour monologue composed entirely of the Six Basic Obscenities is ludicrous and absurd but I expect that anyone involved in the situation in question would automatically (if for no other reason than self-satisfaction) attempt to think up something more clever and reflective of his true character. I only used the term "shriek filthy words" in a vain attempt to condense a paragraph similar to this one into a simple root idea composed of three words. I seem to have over-generalized. I apologize, most sincerely.

I am not comparing America to Nazi Germany. I am comparing the reactions of Americans to the signs of budding dictatorial democracy to the reactions of Germans to the first signs of Hitler and dictatorialism. And when it comes to the slaughter of people who expressed their opinions openly, think of Bobby Seale who was impresioned for the thoughts he was thinking when he crossed the Illinois border - guilty of not his actions or words, but his intentions. Anyway, it is not the Nazi Germany prospect I'm afraid of right now, it's the approaching 1984.

Now, due to the MDC regulation concerning length of letters, I must close. The second half of this letter I will submit tomorrow, so if you want to reply, wait for the second half.

UMass Studio Theatre Presents "The Great American Desert"

When "The Great American Desert" opens this Friday night, a new season begins at the UMass Studio Theatre.

This newly renovated area, located on the second floor of South College, provides facilities for the production of contemporary plays, acting practicums and older plays in modern styles. An important part of any Theatre department, the studio theatre is a small but versatile room which is also suitable for production courses and discussions as well as actual plays.

One use to which this facility will be put is the "Theatre 4:30" meetings, which will be held every Thursday from 4:30 - 5:30. At these get-togethers, faculty undergraduate and grad students can meet for interesting and informative chats on any phase of drama. The meetings will feature guest speakers, technique demonstrations, one-act plays, or just plain talk, and are open to all interested members of the University community.

"The Great American Desert", written by Joel Oppenheimer, is the first of four major productions planned for this semester. The play first appeared off-Broadway, where it was part of the repertory of the "Cafe le Mama" troupe.

"This play," said director Gary Stewart, "involves a sentimental but critical look at the Wild West". Done in a style of ironic nostalgia, "The Great American Desert" deals with myths of the West, having within the plot a poignant view of manifest destiny.

The play, open to all interested persons, will run Friday and Saturday nights, at 8 p.m., in the Studio Theatre. Seating is limited to eighty, and there is no admission charge.

Israeli Art Display Now at Amherst

"Five from Israel," an exhibit displaying the diversity of Israeli art, is currently on view at Amherst College.

The exhibition will be shown through March 18 in the Robert Frost Library on the campus. This event is sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at Smith and Amherst Colleges as part of the "Israel: 1970" series.

Represented in the show are five young painters, born in various parts of the world, who typify a cross-section of Israeli culture in their origins and styles. Polish-born Moshe Bernstein migrated to Israel in 1947 and participated in the War of Independence. Shimon Kaplan, born in France, studied art and agriculture in Brazil and now paints the people of his agricultural village as well as immigrants.

Prize-winning, Austrian-born Shmuel Katz studied art in various European cities and is now a member of Kibbutz Gaaton. Young Ruth Schloss, born in Germany, trained at the Bezalel Art School and has lived in a kibbutz. American-born William Weintraub, a graduate of the Maryland Institute of Art, paints the natives of Israel, particularly Yemenite and Oriental children and old people.

The public is invited to view the exhibit without charge.

Brubeck to Perform In Two Concerts Fri.

The Dave Brubeck Trio with guest artist Gerry Mulligan will appear in two concerts at UMass March 13 under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council Concert Association.

A very small number of tickets are left for each show.

Two identical programs will be offered Friday, March 13, at Bowker Auditorium at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Reserved tickets for these concerts are now available through the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202, and are priced at $1.50 for UMass undergraduates; $2.50 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3 for the general public. Remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office from 5:30 p.m. Friday, March 13 telephone 545-2149.

Pianist Marian Mc Partland aptly described Dave Brubeck as "half genius, half square, and impossible to pigeonhole." He holds solid credentials as a professional musician, having studied privately with distinguished French composer Darius Milhaud, who strongly encouraged Brubeck to follow his natural inclinations to compose and perform jazz.

Dave Brubeck has now formed a trio and has asked Gerry Mulligan, the great baritone saxophonist, to join him in a limited number of concerts this year. His performances at the University of Massachusetts on Friday, March 13, are among the few he has scheduled.

Dave Brubeck confers with Gerry Mulligan before a performance.

Nationally Known Conductor Holds Conducting Symposium

Dr. James Neilson, nationally-known conductor and educator, will offer a conducting symposium at UMass March 13 through 15.

During the symposium, Dr. Neilson will give clinic-rehearsals of the University Wind Ensemble and Symphony Band. In addition, he will work with bands from Tantasqua Regional and Greenfield High Schools. He will also teach conducting master classes at the beginning and advanced levels.

The symposium will begin Friday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. in Berkshire Dining Commons with an unrehearsed clinic-performance by the 13-member University Wind Ensemble, which will work with Richard Strauss' romantic "Serenade in E-Flat for Thirteen Winds".

Dr. Neilson will spend Saturday in conducting master classes in Machmer E-16 in the morning, and rehearsals in Bowker Auditorium in the afternoon. He will be at an informal symposium in the Student Union Colonial Lounge beginning at 7:15 p.m.

The symposium will end Sunday evening with a concert by the University Wind Ensemble and Symphony Band at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Dr. Neilson will appear as guest conductor during the second half of the concert. The repertoire for the concert will include works studied earlier in the symposium, as well as works by Berlioz, Rossini, Grainger, Jarnefelt, Smetana and Russell. The concert will also include a performance of "Sonata for Marimba and Wind Ensemble" by Peter Tanner of the UMass music department, with the composer as guest soloist.

At 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Dr. Neilson will hold clinic-rehearsals for the two high school bands. He and a panel of conductors from the University will offer constructive criticism to invited high school conductors.

Arrangements have been made so that all visiting conductors may sit onstage, behind the band, so that they observe and actively participate in discussions and demonstrations.

All events of the symposium will be informal, and open to the public without charge. The coordinator is John Jenkins, UMass director of bands.

Dr. Neilson's appearance is being sponsored by the University Fine Arts Council and the G. Le Blanc Corporation. Dr. Neilson is director of the LeBlanc Company Educational Department, and is responsible for writing, editing and supervising preparation of the educational materials published by the company. Prior to accepting that post, Dr. Neilson spent twenty-five years as Professor and Director of Musical Organizations at Oklahoma City University.

Man's Environment to Be Focus of New Institute

Dr. Mortimer H. Appley, Dean of the Graduate School at UMass will present a summary briefing on the proposed Institute on Man and His Environment at the Seminar on Urban and Regional Development to be held Wednesday March 18 in Room 211, School of Business Administration, UMass. At this same session, Professor Irving Howards, Department of Government and member of the Long Range Planning Committee of the Faculty Senate, will discuss proposals for University policies and public-service programs.

Dean Appley, on behalf of a large group of interested faculty, has invited members of the University and the Five College Community to consider a proposal for the establishment of an Institute on Man and His Environment.

The proposed institute would facilitate organized efforts by faculty and students to focus on urban, regional and environmental problems, their underlying causes, and ways and means of improving environmental quality in the broadest sense. The institute would engage in projects of research, education, and advisory services for business, industry, government or welfare agencies concerned with improving urban and environmental qualities.

The institute would also foster more intensive and extensive collaboration by faculty and students in diverse fields of arts, sciences, humanities, and the professions, so that present fragmented efforts could be consolidated into more effective projects and programs. He expressed the hope that the Institute might serve as an "activating catalyst" to the formation of regional instead of municipal or strictly local approaches to problems of improving mass transportation, opportunities for employment, housing, education and controlling the pollution of air, land, and water.

The proposal was developed by a faculty committee chaired by Professor Bernard B. Berger, Director of the Water Resources Research Center at the University of Massachusetts. Serving on this committee were members representing the fields of Natural Sciences, Physical Sciences, Public Health, Social Sciences, Engineering, Government, and Business Administration.

In commenting on the proposal, Dean Appley stated that the new institute would emphasize sociotechnological concerns of man. He pointed out the broad range of problems, noting as examples population, changes in human and social values, and scientific and technological means for pollution control. He said that the proposed institute would seek to foster closer collaboration among the arts, sciences, humanities, and professions so that values and functions of institutions, primarily business and government, could be made more effectively to serve society faced with impending crises of decaying cities and polluted environment.

Students and Faculty concerned with urban and environmental quality problems are welcome to attend.

Tippo Names Geol. Head Aide on Student Affairs

Dr. Oswald Tippo, Chancellor of UMass, Amherst, announced yesterday that Professor R. W. Bromery, head of the department of geology, has been appointed Special Assistant to the Chancellor on an interim basis, effective Monday, March 16.

Dr. Bromery will serve as the Chancellor's deputy on matters involving student affairs until the new campus administrative organization is decided. At that time committees of students, faculty and administrators will be formed to conduct searches for all major administrative positions to be filled.

Dean of Students William F. Field will report to the Chancellor through Prof. Bromery rather than through the Office of the Provost, which is now being administered by Associate Provost Robert L. Gluckstern. Dr. Bromery will retain his position as professor of geology.

According to Chancellor Tippo, Prof. Bromery's appointment recognizes the increased importance of student affairs in the growing University.

Dr. Bromery came to UMass in 1967 as an associate professor of geology. He was named head of the department in 1969. He helped found and is now President of CCEBS, the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black Students. The group helps black students and others with college potential to overcome financial and academic barriers to University careers.

Much of this service was supervision and conducting of low-level aeromagnetic and airborne radioactivity surveys along flight traverses totaling more than 750,000 miles in many parts of the U. S., Puerto Rico and Alaska, including parts of the Arctic Ocean.

He served as Branch of Regional Geophysics chief of data processing and as project chief on airborne survey projects in several areas of the U. S. until 1962, when he became chief of the New England and Eastern States Geophysical Program. In 1965 he was named branch chief-representative of the Branch of Regional Geophysics, Washington, D. C., office.

Frosh Icemen Enjoy Successful Year

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

The freshman hockey team ended an otherwise very successful season on a rather sour note last week with a 6-1 loss to a strong Dartmouth squad. This left the frosh with a very creditable overall record of 7-4.

At the outset of the season, coach William Richards, in his first year as coach of the Little Redman sextet, did not know what to expect from his team. He was well aware that the team suffered from a lack of depth, and this was his major concern.

To accentuate the problem, co-captain goalie Pete Erickson suffered a recurrence of an old leg injury before the season even started, and this left the burden of the net-minding chores to John Kiah.

However, things looked much brighter when the frosh traveled to New Haven for the opener against Yale JV's, a convincing 5-1 victory. This win set the tempo for a lot of outstanding efforts in a very outstanding season.

It was in this game that frosh phenom Pat Keenan came into prominence with a hat trick. Keenan, from Toronto, Ont., went on to prove during the season that the opening game was no fluke as he led the team in scoring. The plaudits, however do not stop here.

Probably of most concern to Coach Richards before the first game was how his team would fare in the goals against department. He had been con partment. He had been counting on a good season from Erickson but was forced to go with Kiah.

Kiah responded with a tremendous effort throughout the season. He was in the nets for virtually every game and his steady play supplied a much-needed lift to the squad.

Also a major factor in the goals against department is the work of the defense, and the defensive job turned in was great all year.

UMass got particularly good efforts from Dave Branch, who might be classed as a 'defenseman's defenseman', and Don Lowe, who was by far the hardest hitter on the team.

Bob Shilalie and Rick Anderson must also be cited for their stellar contribution to the squad's defense, as they performed solidly all season. Anderson was later moved to a wing where he filled in very capably.

The team also scored well for the most part. Keenan led the scoring, but he was certainly not alone. Co-captain Don Riley came up with many crucial scores and added a great offensive spark.

Lonnie Avery, Riley and Keenan provided most of the scoring punch, but Joe Roache, Bob Shea, Anderson and Paul Whitney contributed more than their share.

Whitney, who was not quite as flashy as some of the other forwards and thus was somewhat under rated, was one of the steadiest performers on the squad.

Also, Rich Ryley, who joined the team at the outset of second semester, was mentioned by Richards for his desire and hustle.

Forwards Winchester Wooland, Al Flanders, Skip Kelly and defenseman Bruce Kay must also be mentioned for the jobs they did filling in for injured players. Although they saw limited ice time, they helped alleviate somewhat the extreme lack of depth. A special thanks must go to Rich Freccero for the job he did all season.

All in all, a season which started with a lot of 'ifs' ended with a lot of tremendous wins by a determined team.

Crown Will Wait on Maki

TORONTO (AP) - Attorney General Arthur Wishart said yesterday he is reconsidering his decision not to take action in the Wayne Maki assault case because of a month-long delay in the trial of Ted Green on a similar charge.

Maki, 26, a former St. Louis Blues hockey player, now with Buffalo was acquitted last Thursday on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

Wr. Wishart said the Crown had decided to take no action in either the Maki or Green trials until both were concluded to avoid prejudicing one trial by action in the other.

Astrological Forecast

The CANCER kitten will always find its way home. And the favorite part of that cat's house will be the kitchen. Some cats like television. Others like to rest on newspaper. But the Cancer cat sticks close to the food.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): You may feel grass is greener at a distance. But truth is you can create your own destiny. This is not meant to be metaphysical. Today — right now — you have required assets for success.

LIBRA (Sept 23 - Oct. 22:) Check financial resources. Checking account may need some beefing up — be realistic. Intuitive intelect is sharp. But you could also use some practical advice from knowledgeable person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): You may be in expansive mood. This could result in expensive action. Have fun without being careless, extravagant. You are going to be very pleasantly surprised.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Adhere to rules. Be thorough. You cannot be an innovator without being imbued with basic information. Plainly, you must learn rules before breaking them. Be patient with yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): You face some realities about romantic interests. If you expect perfection, disappointment arrives. If practical and mature, satisfaction could make an appearance. Think.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You may not get your price? But you do make definite gains in security area. You are more secure inwardly. People express confidence in your views.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Say no to journey which can lead you in circles. Your potential is great. But you have been receiving advice which is less than realistic. Play waiting game.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher. You can help others — now start aiding yourself. Get down to basic issues. You can and will clear away emotional debris.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Money situation needs review. There is diversity of opinion. You may be drawn in two directions. Be sensible, but don't skimp on giving pleasure to loved ones. Message clarified by tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): What appears adverse is likely to boomerang in your favor. Seek harmony. Be happy. Weight that seems to oppress you is temporary. Take it easy. Make gesture to family member.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) You find great outlet in work, exercise. This is no tie to confine yourself. Think of where you are going rather than where you have been. Be perceptive. See through attempted sham.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22) Some friends seem depressed. Don't attempt to be a back-yard psychoiatrist. Help those who want to aid themselves. Steer clear of emotional entanglements of others.

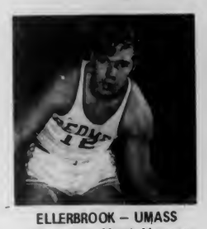
Prep for NIT Continues, Yan Con All Stars Named



ELLERBROOK – UMASS

ENGLISH – URI

JULIUS – UMASS

MARTINIUK – UVM

FULTZ – URI

As Saturday, March 14 approaches, final arrangements for the trip to New York for the NIT are being made all over campus. The latest word on tickets, if you haven't already purchased them, is that there will probably be a minimum of eleven hundred extra tix available.

As far as buses are concerned, if you haven't got your tickets yet, you're out of luck. There will be at least six buses making the trip and as many more will be provided as were filled by the deadline last night.

When you get to New York before the game, stop in at the Ivy Room of the Statler Hilton hotel. All friends of UMass basketball are invited to attend a party to be held there between 6-7:30 p.m. Saturday evening. The hotel is in the vicinity of Madison Square Garden and the affair is a DUTCH TREAT.

To restate and emphasize a point that was made in yesterday's Collegian, any fans who are unable to make the trip to New York and who wish to see the game should telephone one or both of the television stations in Springfield (WHYN Channel 40 and/or WWLP Channel 22). It has been learned through reliable sources that enough requests to these studios could convince them to "get a feed" into a local New York City station that is carrying the Saturday night tilt.

Julius Erving was further honored this week as he was named to the 1970 Look - United States Basketball Writers Association All America District 1 basketball team. Also picked for the squad were Jim O'Brien, Boston College; Jim Morgan, Yale; Bob Kissane, Holy Cross; and Jim Hayes, Boston University.

A final note concerns coach Jack Leaman, who was named New England Coach of the Year by the UPI.

The following story was released last week by Connecticut's Sports Information Department and names the All-Yankee Conference team for this season.

STORRS, Ct. - Co-Champion U-Mass and third-place Rhode Island each placed two men on the All-Yankee Conference basketball team selected by vote of member coaches and announced by the office of Commissioner J. O. Christian.

Forward Julius Erving of Roosevelt, N.Y., New England's top scorer and rebounder, and guard Ray Ellerbrook of Hawthorne, N.J. were the Redman entries to make the dream team; while forwards John Fultz of North Plainfield, N.J., and Claude English of Columbus, Ga., represented URI. Vermont's guard Frank Martiniuk, of Union City, N.J., completed the first five.

Erving, a 6'5 performer who can do it all, topped all selectees in scoring with 625 points for an average of 26.0 per game and in rebounding with 508 for a 21.2 average which is second best in the nation.

In addition, Erving engraved his name in the UMass record books for single season achievements, as follows: most points (625), best average (26.0), most rebounds (508), best rebound average (21.2) most free throws (163) and most free throws attempted (223). Also, his 231 field goals was one short of another record. He had 455 field goal attempts and his shooting average was 50.8%.

Erving and Fultz were both unanimous choices for the first team, while English missed one ballot completely. Martiniuk had four first-place votes and two for the second team while Ellerbrook's name appeared on three first-place teams and three second-place teams.

It was the second time that Fultz English and Ellerbrook, all seniors won All-Yan-Con honors.

Co-champion UConn placed three on the second time, guards Bob Boyd of Worcester, Mass. and Bob Staak of Darien, Conn., as well as forward Ron Hrubala, of East Hartford, Conn. Completing the second five were URI GUARD Dwight Tolliver of Hartford, Conn., and New Hampshire forward, Dave Pemberton, of Maroneck, N.Y.

Receiving honorable mention were Dick Samuelson and John Betancourt, UMass; Robert Taylor, UConn; Phil Blum, New Hampshire; Craig Randall and Dom Susi, Maine.

NIT Notes, More Ducats Due Today

The 1750 student tickets put on sale by the Boyden ticket office were quickly bought up Monday night and early Tuesday morning. A minimum of 1100 additional tickets will arrive in Boyden today for sale starting at 10 a.m.

He will do his best to get everyone accommodations or give information concerning ride openings and offerings. Should one call him and then receive notice of a ride, or riders, from someone else, be sure to notify Ken.

At 3:30 yesterday afternoon, the Student Senate Service committee announced that better than six of the original eight buses had been filled and that two more would be ordered. If more need be ordered, they will, but the deadline on buses will be tonight when the amount of buses that are filled will be the the amount of buses that will go to New York. The additional buses will probably cost the same as the previous eight.

Once again, the buses will board at the main entrace to Whitmore Hall beginning at 2:45 p.m. Saturday with departure scheduled for 3 p.m. This should allow arrival at Madison Square Garden by 7 p.m. Buses will leave not later than twenty minutes after the game (around 11:15 p.m.) and should return before 2:30 p.m. to campus.

Tickets are being sold at the Student Union Ticket Office. Price is $6.50 for the round trip.

Openings are available for the Saturday trip to the NIT by train. Yes, train, and it costs $8.25 round trip and leaves from Springfield at 11:28 a.m. Saturday and, on Sunday leaves from Penn Station in New York at 12:30 p.m., 30 minutes after noontime on Sunday. This service is being sponsored by the 'Infamous Fourth Floor MacKimmie'. For information, call Russ Noble (6-9819) or Fred Marshall (6-9820).

Any other notices such as this one can be brought to the Collegian office; they will be printed on the sports page.

BoSox Baffled, 6-3, Peters Shines

COCOA, Fla (AP) - Rookie John Mayberry's grand slam homerun in the fifth inning lifted the Houston Astros from behind to a 6-3 exhibition baseball victory over the Boston Red Sox yesterday.

It was the second straight triumph via the grand slam route for the Astros, who won Monday's game with the Red Sox at Winter Haven on Joe Pepitone's bases loaded shot in the eighth inning.

The Red Sox jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead yesterday. Doubles by Mike Andrews and George Thomas plus a single by Tony Conigliaro produced two runs in the first inning. Then Don Pavletich, in his first time at bat for Boston, crashed a sole homer over the left field fence in the second.

Left-hander Gary Peters, also making his debut for the Red Sox, pitched the first four innings and was very sharp, allowing only two hits and no runs.

Rookie Mike Garman took over in the fifth but immediately ran into trouble. Singles by Johnny Edwards and Jesus Alou and a walk to Pepitone loaded the bases, then with two out the 20-year old Mayberry unloaded his homer off the scoreboard behind the right field fence.

The Astros picked up another run off Garman in the sixth as Edwards walked and eventually scored on a single by Joe Morgan. They closed out the scoring off Ray Jarvis in the eighth on a hit batsman and a run scoring single by Marty Martinez.

The Red Sox bats went silent after Pavletich's homer.

Hill of AIC, Rinka, Make All-America

NEW YORK (AP) - John Rinka, the Pistol Pete of the small colleges, heads the 1970 Little All-American college basketball team named yesterday by The Associated Press.

It was the second straight year that the diminutive 5-feet-9 sharpshooter for Kenyon, College of Gambier, Ohio, dominated the voting for the team by 106 sports writers and broadcasters.

Like Pistol Pete Maravich of Louisiana State in the major category, Rinka has scored more than 3,000 points in his career. He has an average of 41 per game and is well on his way to winning the small college scoring title two years in a row. He polled 57 first team votes in the balloting. No one else came close.

Named to the first team, along with Rinka, were Earnest Killum of Stetson, Marvin Winkler of Southwestern Louisiana, Surry Oliver of Stephen F. Austin and Greg Hill of American International. All are seniors.

Travis Grant, a 6'7 scoring sophomore from Clayton, Ala. for Kentucky State, was named on the second team along with Ted Mc Clain of Tennessee State, Greg Hyder of Eastern New Mexico, Jake Ford of Maryland State and John Napier of Tampa, a repeater from the 1969 second team.

Dennis Clark of Springfield Mass., Dennis Womeldorf of South Dakota State, Gene Mumford of Scranton, Fred Davis of Howard Payne and George Johnson of Stephen F. Austin were selected as a third team.

Star Erving Knows How to Stay Cool

(Today features the third of special five-part series of interviews with UMass basketball players and later on, coach Jack Leaman, by Denise Magnell, Monday Issue Editor of the Collegian).

Just about everyone knows what Julius Erving has given basketball this year. But it seems Julie has gotten something in return, aside from the piles of points and rebounds he has accumulated during the season.

"Basketball has made me more susceptible to relying on others---it has built my confidence in people. It's improved my concentration; I can react more quickly now in a given situation. And I have something to take pride in."

"A good athletic program tends to unify the students---cheering together is a real sign of unity. I dunk to get everyone psyched up."

When asked how he plays without showing expression at any time during a game, he said "I'm cool", but added, more seriously, "You have to limit your thinking to what you are doing out there. If you clutter your mind with other things you become less effective."

Erving's hardest adjustments to varsity ball were getting used to new coaching methods and the idea of playing on a national rather than a regional level. He found "breaking the ice in my first varsity game was much more difficut than my first frosh start."

A resident of Roosevelt, New York, Erving enjoyed playing Fordham because that game was played so close to home. However, he saw the most teamwork displayed when the Redmen toppled Gannon in the Christmas tourney.

When discussing public issues, Julius feels an athlete should be seen as an individual first. "By getting too involved in something outside of my primary reasons for being here, my studies and basketball, I might be spreading myself too thin. But if I felt strongly enough about that something, I would have to be open about it, taking into consideration its after effects."

The 6'5" business major would like to grow to 6'8" before he graduates. He hopes to play professionally someday, and through sports, would like to help disadvantaged children.

Until then, Julie is taking things in his stride, unconcerned about statictics and record-breaking, but confident in his game. (Tomorrow - Dick Samuelson and Dennis Chapman)

UMass-Boston Building Plans Announced

BOSTON - Representatives of the new 15,000 student, $355-million University of Massachusetts campus in Boston yesterday announced the design-construction program for Phase I of the project's 10-year master plan. Phase I, estimated to cost $150 million, will total 1.3-million square feet of building construction.

The 2-3/4 year crash design-construction program constitutes development of 40% of the 90-acre site at Columbia Point in Boston Harbor. Announcement of the program launches the largest building project ever undertaken by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The University's Board of Trustees and the Massachusetts Bureau of Building Construction (BBC) also announced final approval of the project's master plan for the urban campus. The master plan delineates the number, size, and physical relationship of buildings and services required to accommodate a total enrollment of 15,000 commuter students by 1980. Approval of the master plan, executed by Pietro Belluschi and Sasaki, Dawson, DeMay, associated architects based in Watertown, Mass., effectively brings this phase of development to a close. The team, however, will be retained as design consultant through Phase I development of the project.

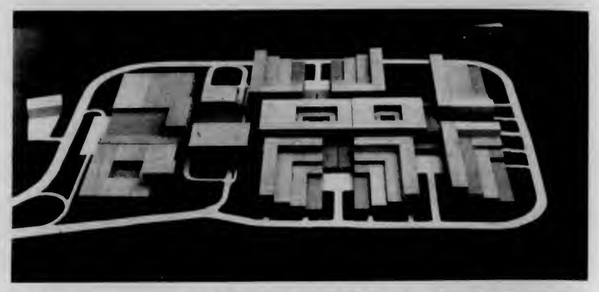
The new campus will transform the former city dump at Columbia Point into a flourishing university community. During construction more than 2,000 construction workers will be employed. When completed, UMass/Boston will provide over 2,000 new faculty and staff positions.

Six architectural firms are currently designing the six structures to be built during the construction program's first phase. The six buildings are: a Library, a Science Center, two "colleges," an Administration Building, and a Central Service facility. The Science Center (to be constructed in two stages), the Library, and two "colleges", will cost approximately $20 million each. The total estimated cost of the other two structures is $9 million. Each "college" will be a self-contained liberal arts and science school for 2,500 students.

Due to the project's short construction timetable, the architects were scheduled to complete working drawings by August this year. Contracts for construction of the six buildings are scheduled for award near the end of 1970. And construction of Phase I is expected to be completed by the fall of 1972. Buildings programmed for subsequent construction phases include a Field House and Physical Education facility, a Fine Arts Building, a Student Activity Center, four additional "colleges," and the second stage of the Science Building. Erection of these buildings will proceed in overlapping phases through the 1970's according to the project's continuous and closely coordinated construction program.

The BBC also announced the selection of McKee-Berger-Mansueto, Inc. (MBM), of Boston and New York, as project manager for Phase I of the design-construction program. MBM will represent the BBC in coordinating all work of the project's architects and contractors. MBM has just completed establishment of a central office for "one-roof" coordination of all firms participating in the development of the project. The project office, located on Boylston Street, in downtown Boston, is equipped to house a 50-man project development staff.

Test borings and site investigations are already under way at Columbia Point. Sitework for the project is scheduled to start this spring, followed by foundation work in the summer.



Master plan model for the $355-million UMass/Boston campus to be constructed at Columbia Point over the next 10 years. The model indicates the approximate outlines of the proposed buildings, but not their final shapes. These will be determined by the individual architects, working within the guidelines of the master plan.

Senator McCarthy to Read Friday In Moratorium Poetry Festival

Senator Eugene McCarthy, of Minnesota will read his poems at the University of Massachusetts March Moratorium Poetry Festival Friday evening March 13 in Curry Hicks Cage on the Amherst campus.

The public will be admitted without charge, with doors open at 8:30 p.m. Senator McCarthy will appear with award-winning poet Robert Bly and UMass poet Jane Tokarz in a reading replacing one originally scheduled for Mahar Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. Friday.

The reading is part of a week of national protest and celebration by some 40 visiting and local poets "to focus attention on the social and psychological pollution of the nation and to personally declare in readings of their poetry a view of contemporary life in America," according to festival coordinators Joseph Langland and Donald Junkins of the UMass English department.

The festival is sponsored by UMass students Distinguished Visitors Program with the assistance of the Master of Fine Arts Program in English.

The festival began Monday on a schedule of 14 double, triple and quadruple poetry readings.

Senator McCarthy came into national focus in the 1968 presidential campaign as the candidate of many young people and others opposed to the Vietnam War

Student Senate Approves Governance Committee

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Senate last night overwhelmingly rejected an attempt by Senator Geoffrey Levine to raise to a majority the undergraduate membership on the joint Committee on University Governance, which is expected to recommend fundamental changes in the University's governing institutions, probably including a University Senate.

Opponents of the move argued that an attempt to obtain the agreement of the other two Senates to the proposed increase would cut into the scant six weeks that remain before the May 1 target date for the Committee's report; and that since the report would return to the Senate for approval, any objections to the product could be taken up at that time. Upon passage of the bill, President Olken appointed to the Committee Vice-President Elters, and Senators Stephen Walt, Daniel Madden, and Sharon O'Brien.

Upon hearing Ways and Means Chairman Richard Verrochi recount the history of Butterfield House's refusal to comply with RSO financial policy or co-operate with the pursuant investigation by the Ways and Means Committee, the Senate responded in the negative by a vote of 18-33-10 to Senator Verrochi's question as to whether the General Court prosecution should continue.

In debate, after noting that he had been "under immense pressure" to halt prosecution, Senator Verrochi stated his belief that, although the requirement that dorms operate through RSO did not reflect student views and has since been stricken, "These people should be prosecuted because that was the law in effect at the time (which the defendants had) knowingly violated." Mr. William Gibson, speaking for Butterfield, called obedience "untenable", and claimed that the defiance by Butterfield and other dorms had resulted in the subsequent change in policy.

The Senate acted to reduce the impending rent increase by approving an extension of the 450 room deposit system from on-campus freshmen and transfers, the past Senate recommendation, to all on-campus students, effective in the Spring of next year. Senator James Albert, member of the President's Advisory Committee on Rents and Fees, revealed that each resident would have $10 on his rent for each 1 per cent the occupancy rate of a dorm rises above the present target of 92%.

The room deposit is designed to insure a high level of occupancy by requiring those students who sign up for a room and do not notify Housing of subsequent off-campus plans in time for Housing to fill the vacancy, to forfeit the room deposit. Otherwise, the deposit would be returned upon graduation or proper notification. Interest on the monies collected would go into refurbishing, thus helping to depress rents.

The Senate expressed its dissatisfaction with the thoroughness of the Finance Committee's report favoring an appropriation for a black radio station, broadcasting over WFCR with a studio in Mills, by recommitting the matter for one week.

In other action, the Senate supported the creation of a two-meal a day meal ticket, and recommended that an agency, separate from the Athletic Council, one-half composed of students, set the Athletic Fee.

Threatened Musicians' Boycott Aimed At R.S.O. Booking Policy

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

The University may be in danger of being placed on a national entertainers' black list if a local booking agent's charge that he has been discriminated against by R.S.O. is upheld by the American Federation of Musicians (AFM).

In a statement sent to AFM headquarters in New York and signed by Student Senate President Cynthia Olken, Vice President Glen Elters and Finance CommitteeChairman Sharon O'Brien, Robert E. Seligman alledges that R.S.O. is preventing him from making a living by "barring him from campus."

He claims that Assistant Dean of Students Gerald Scanlon told him the service he was offering to students (booking movies and concerts) was not worth the price he charges student groups.

And, he also alleges, R.S.O. staff member Mrs. Jill Cochran told him, "I want to kick all agents off campus and SGP productions (his company) in particular."

Seligman maintains that if the New York Union upholds his charges, the University will be placed on a national black list, and will remain on the list until R.S.O. changes its policy toward booking agents.

The black list would affect the University in two ways.

1) No union booking agents would deal with any University groups,

2) No entertainers belonging to the Union could play at UMass.

Since virtually all known entertainers belong to the Union, Seligman claims, this would leave the University with no way to stage any major concerts in the future.

"Not a single entertainer would touch this place if it were placed on a black list," according to Seligman, "and R.S.O. will be solely to blame if that happened."

He continued, "It's up to students to convince Mr. Scanlon and R.S.O. to reverse their policy toward booking agents, and only students have to ability and power to make R.S.O. change."

Seligman contends that he and SGP productions offer students a service, just as any other vender on campus, such as Peter Pan and the Union bookstore, by providing students with a band or a movie and taking care of all booking arrangements for 45% of the concert's net profit.

He guarantees all of his clients at least $100 from each concert.

But Scanlon contends that this service is not worth 45% of the net profit of a concert. "The only thing which SGP productions does is to book the talent, and students have had a good success record of doing this for themselves in the past," he says.

Seligman also charges that by "banning" all booking agents from campus, R.S.O. is overstepping its authority.

He says in the statement, "As I understand the function of the R.S.O. office, it has been set up as a clearing house for contracual business, and to give advice to students. . .but students can disregard the advice given them if they deem it unsatisfactory."

Thus, according to Seligman, R.S.O. has no right to ban SGP or any other booking agents from campus, since some student groups might wish to "disregard" R.S.O.'s "advice", and do business with the agent.

"In fact," he says," in the past R.S.O. has told students what they can and what they cannot do," and , "they have no right to do this."

Neither Scanlon or Mrs. Cochran have responded to this charge.

Ambassador Speaks Tonight

The permanent representative from Jordan to the United Nations will speak on "The Middle East Crisis" Thursday, March 12, at 8:15 p.m. at the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration Auditorium 120. The room announced in yester day's paper was incorrect.

The talk by Ambassador Muhammad El-Farra is open to the public without charge and is sponsored by the Organization of Arab Students at UMass.

Ambassador El-Farra served as president of the UN Security Council in 1965 and 1966. He has also served as vice-president of the UN Economic and Social Council and has represented Jordan at a number of international conferences.

The Nation and The World

Voting Age Bill Passes First Test in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's proposal to lower the voting age to 18 survived a key test in the Senate late Wednesday after opponents sharply challenged its constitutionality.

By a vote of 62 to 21 the Senate defeated a motion of Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La. to table and thus kill the Montana senator's amendment to a bill to extend the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The big margin by which the tabling motion was rejected indicated that the amendment will be adopted when it can be brought to a vote. It would extend the franchise to an estimated 10 million to 11 million young people.

Opponents of Mansfield's proposal uniformly endorsed the vote for 18-year-olds but argued that it could not be constitutionally brought about by congressional action.

Mansfield's amendment to lower the voting age to 18 in all elections - federal, state and local, would be effective beginning with elections after Jan. 1, 1971.

Mansfield, urging approval of his proposal, said that he foresees no possibility of the adoption of a constitutional amendment this year and perhaps for years to come.

Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said the presidential election in 1972 might be thrown into uncertainty and confusion if, at about that time, the Supreme Court should rule that Mansfield's amendment was unconstitutional.

Brook Knocks Nixon On Civil Rights Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate's only Negro member, Republican Edward W. Brooke, said Wednesday the Nixon administration has made "a cold, calculated, political decision" to adopt a negative civil rights policy.

"President Nixon said he wanted to bring us together," the Massachusetts senator said, "but everything he has done so far appears to be designed to push us further apart."

Asked if the Republican administration has set a deliberate policy of halting civil rights advances, Brooke replied:

"The facts support that. It's a rather cold, calculating, political decision that has been made by some of his advisers."

Brooke was interviewed on the CBS radio program "Capitol Cloakroom."

He noted that Nixon said after the 1968 election black Americans should judge his administration by its deeds, not its words.

"I have seen very few deeds that have pleased me," Brooke said. "But I have been very discouraged by the administration's position on desegregation guidelines and on the voting rights bill, by the Supreme Court nominations and by the lack of momentum in the programs to develop black entrepreneurs. That hasn't gotten off the ground.

"I have seen very little for Negroes - black people - to applaud during his administration. If anything, it has been negative."

Brooke said he believes Nixon is using Southern or suburban political strategy of writing off support of black and urban voters in favor of gains in suburban and Southern areas.

"Richard Nixon didn't win on the black vote," he said. "He could win again in 1972, unfortunately - I mean unfortunate that it could be that way."

Brooke said he believed, when campaigning for Nixon in 1968, the President would adopt a more vigorous civil rights stand if elected.

"I must confess I expected the Nixon campaign strategy was to be ignored after the election," he said.

Brooke, a leader in the fight against confirmation of Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court, said 37 senators have pledged to vote against the Nixon nominee.

"I expect that number to increase," he said. "But I'm realistic. It's going to be tough."

While taking issue with Nixon on civil rights, the Republican senator said he supports administration policy on the economy and on Vietnam.

"He turned that war around," Brooke said. "Instead of sending American boys over there, we're bringing them back."

Gov't. Bombs Out Of Nebraska Rail

AURORA, Neb. (AP) - A freight train with 13 carloads of bombs destined for Vietnam derailed near this small central Nebraska town Wednesday, scattering 750-pound bombs along the tracks.

None exploded, but city officials viewing the wreckage in a rural area a quarter-mile outside town, ordered schools closed and advised residents in a 35-block area to stay inside.

Female Radical Sought In New York Bombing

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - A young woman radical from the lap of luxury and wealth was sought widely Wednesday as the key to the explosive mystery of her father's demolished townhouse on West 11th street. Also missing was a companion of hers in the New Left, daughter of a well-known lawyer.

Chief target of investigators was Cathlyn Pratt Wilkerson, 25. She was one of two women known to have fled alive after what police said was a bungled attempt at producing home made bombs which blew up her father's $100,000 Greenwich Village brownstone Friday, at the cost of two lives. Miss Wilkerson disappeared and the other woman has not been identified.

"We think she has gone into hiding in fear of her life," said Miss Wilkerson's stepfather, Harlan Logan, majority leader of the New Hampshire House. The girl's mother by a first marriage is now his wife.

Also sought was Katherine Boudin, 26, daughter of Attorney Leonard Boudin, the defender of Dr. Benjamin Spock in a celebrated anti-draft case two years ago.

Police said a credit card, a library card and a birth certificate in Miss Boudin's name were found in the blast wreckage, although it was not known whether she was in the townhouse at the time of the explosion. She, too, disappeared.

The explosion in the 19th century brownstone owned by James Pratt Wilkerson was attributed by police to efforts at fashioning home made bombs. More than 60 sticks of dynamite and 100 blasting caps were discovered in the rubble of the building, as well as a number of pipes packed with dynamite and wired.

"I would say they were making bombs - yes, definitely," Asst. Chief Inspector Albert Seedman said of the occupants of the demolished building, at 18 West 11th Street.

Wilkerson and his second wife were on a prolonged vacation in the British West Indies when the explosion occured. He is an advertising man.

One of the victims of the blast was Theodore Gold, 23, a leader in the Students for a Democratic Society during the 1968 revolt at Columbia University. He was described subsequently as a member of the radical Weatherman faction of SDS.

The other body recovered from the wreckage was that of an unidentified woman.

Miss Wilkerson was a Weatherman activist free in $40,000 bail in Chicago on charges of resisting a police officer and mob action during an Oct. 9 demonstration there. She is a graduate of Swarthmore College.

In reference to the explosion, Miss Wilkerson's attorney in Chicago, Ronald Clark, said, "I have not been incontact with her since the incident. I have no knowledge as to her whereabouts. I expect her to be in court here March 16."

Two women fled the townhouse after the explosion - one of them partially clad and the other nude. They took showers at the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Susan Wager, borrowed clothes and then disappeared.

Police said Mrs. Wager positively identified Miss Wilkerson as one of the pair.

With the discovery of the documents in her name in the wreckage, police sought Miss Boudin for questioning in the hope she might shed light on the mysterious goings-on on West 11th Street.

Her father, himself a longtime resident of the Village, has been active over the years in defense of leftist clients. In 1956, he denied before the House Un-American Activities Committee that he had ever been a Communist.

Michigan Students Protest Pollution

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) - University of Michigan students demolished a 1959 Ford with sledge hammers and their bare hands Wednesday. High school pupils in Bloomfield Hills mailed hundreds of throwaway bottles and cans back to the firms that made them.

Both were symbolic protests against pollution.

The car smashing was part of a teach-in at the University of Michigan about air pollution, water pollution and litter in general.

After the students finished smashing the car, about 200 of them - lugging plastic bags filled with empty soft drink and beer cans - marched about a mile to the local Coca-Cola plant.

There they dumped thousands of cans into a huge circle, banged them around and protested to the bottling plant employes about the use of nonreturnable cans. After finishing their protest, the youths cleaned up the discarded cans.

Most of the teach-in will be devoted to hearing a variety of pollution foes in speeched and seminars. Speakers include Sens. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Philip Hart, D-Mich., entertainer Arthur Godfrey, consumer advocate Ralph Nader and United Auto Workers President Walter Reuther.

In Bloomfield Hills, a wealthy Detroit suburb about 35 miles from Ann Arbor, the high school students enclosed letters in the packages of throwaway bottles and cans asking that the firms stop selling pop in nonreturnable containers.

Labor Dispute Threatens Campus Center Opening

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

The opening of the Campus Center has not been void from problems and it looks like another is emerging. The contract of the laborers working on the building is renewable on April 1st and a dispute now would deter the tentative May 1st opening. Spokesman say that for each day of the labor dispute the Campus Center will be delayed from opening by one day.

Hopefully, this semester's graduating seniors will be able to see and use the facilities of the Campus Center. Indeed, many over 21 will want to use the bar in order to rid themselves of the rigors of an educational environment.

With all its troubles, the Campus Center which still hopes to open May 1, has been a closely watched building.

There are two student activity floors underground which will provide students with the facilities of a coffee shop, a larger and well-stocked bookstore, meeting rooms, centralized offices, and an automated post office.

The new post office is expected to offer almost everything the present one does. However, both areas will be operated with the old post office being open on a curtailed schedule. Persons now working in the post office will be transferred into the larger bookstore operation.

More noticeable to those viewing the campus are the upper floors which contain 116 hotel rooms, meeting areas and the Top of the Campus Restaurant. Prices for hotel rooms have been established at $12 for a single occupancy and $18 for a double occupancy.

These facilities will provide students with very adequate space to house friends and relatives and also allow parents a place to have dinner with their sons or daughters or just a very good place to have a special dinner separated from the daily servings of the dining commons. The restaurant is to be operated by a private food concern and not in conjunction with the University food services.

The Campus Center also has available 900 underground parking spaces. Some 200 spaces will be reserved, but the others will be available to faculty, administration and students. The maximum cost per day is $2 and it will be possible for more than one automobile to occupy a space. A ticket office will be opened in the student union as soon as the parking space is opened.

Plans for a rathskeller are being discussed. Assuming all function of the building operate as planned, this could be a reality by the fall.

Even though the Campus Center's concern is to make money, students are not going to be slighted. Students will have priority when use of facilities are desired. Given adequate notice of room needs by a student group, other non-student groups will be pushed aside.

How much will all this cost? The SUG Board has passed a 15-15-10 plan which means the first year of operation the student union fee increase will be $15 and again the second year with an additional $10 increase the last year, amounting to a total increase of $40 over a three year period.

Silver Interview

UMass Students Radicalized

Are UMass student s being radicalized? The answer is yes, according to American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Isidore Silver, who discussed campus activism in a recent interview.

Silver is an associate professor of general business and finance at UMass.

"I've seen a major portion of the liberal students willing to become radical in the four years I've been here," he said. "I don't think they'll be reconciled until the society makes changes."

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR ISIDORE SILVER

He explained that university radicalism reflects the wider problems of our social institutions, which have suffered from "a loss of legitimacy and belief" and become "a fragile barrier for the discontented.

"Demonstrations are sometimes the only way radicals have of communicating with society," he added. "A campus is an easy and vulnerable target because it is run by consensus - we have a very small police force for a city of 15 or 20 thousand people.

"I'd extend the term 'legal processes' to include peaceful demonstrations but not violent ones like the Humphrey protest, which don't go anywhere - violence is a stupid tactic, politically."

Silver explained that American history contains incidents of official injustice much worse than recent ones. "Many radicals suffer from historical myopia," he added. "I'd say that unofficial social repression is now a greater problem than political repression in America."

Protest is effective when it makes an appeal to conscience, he said. "Demonstrators in the Labor Movement of the thirties got their heads cracked, but they got people on their side.

"Radicals show people the hypocricy in society failing to meet its commitments. People sometimes accept this and sometimes reject it - the second reaction seems more common at this time."

Silver is not politically active. "I'm too anarchistic to be a member of any liberal or radical group, " he said, "except , of course, the Civil Liberties Union."

Scholarships Delayed, Money Unknown

The amount of money allocated determines t the number of all student scholarships available for next semester, but neither will be known for "four to six weeks", according to Lynn E. Santner, associate director of the University Financial Aid Office.

Santner stated two reasons for the delay: "The State Legislature has not yet approved its funding and Congress has not yet made any appropriations".

The current State appropriation of $850,000 is divided between the Boston and Amherst campuses, he said.

The Financial Aid Office processed about 11,600 requests last year, but applications increase annually by about 2,800, the associate director said.

All student scholarships, limited to residents of Massachusetts are "based on acceptable academic standing and financial need determined by the family situation".

APG Plans Seminars On Student Press

Alpha Phi Gamma, the honorary journalism fraternity, announced an "April Seminar" for New England student editors, their teachers and administrators to be held here, April 24-25.

Co-sponsored by the National Council of College Publications Advisors, the conference will be a series of seminars on issues pertinent to the students press with a large number of outside resources to people supplying expertise and a fresh perspective.

APG President Bill Dickinson said "The sessions will be aimed at exchanging ideas, not lecturing."

Among the topics, he said, will be, "The Student Press and Student Government," "How to attain Fiscal Independence and Survive," "Sex is a Syllable in Print," "Pictures Should Say a Thousand Words' Worth," and "Case Histories of Censorship."

Anyone interested in participating should contact APG through RSO Box 714, Student Union, University of Mass., Amherst.

Meeting for all Math undergraduates will be held on Thursday March 12, 7:00 p.m. in Arnold House Lounge to meet the candidates for the Departmental Planning Committee.

Miss-State Press May Lose Support

JACKSON, Miss.--(CPS)--Rep. Malcom Mabry has introduced a bill in the state House of Representatives banning the practice of setting mandatory student fees to support student publications at state-supported colleges.

Mabry reportedly is irked by criticism of the state legislature in the Mississippi State University newspaper, the REFLECTOR.

The Jan. 27 issue of the REFLECTOR contained an editorial on the legislature's retention of the state law banning teaching of evolution. The editorial called the law "a shining example of moral idiocy" and gave legislators who opposed its repeal "three cheers for hypocricy."

The same issue contained an opinion column saying "the buffoons in the Mississippi legislature and some influential alumni will meddle with the affairs of this school and will retard progress considerably as they have done in the past."

Mabry acknowledged a belief that "the newspaper of a college or university supported by the state should be called upon to show more restraint than, say, the CLARKSDALE PRESS REGISTER." He wouldn't comment for publication on his reaction to the REFLECTOR articles.

However, the aim of the bill is not to harm publications but to help students, Mabry says. "I don't believe it's right to use taxpayers dollars and student fees to subsidize any publication, regardless written statement explaining the bill.

"I believe a student should have the freedom to decide for himself whether he wants to spend his money on a subscription. All my bill would do is guarantee each student the freedom to decide how he will spend his own money. . ."

At Mississippi State, proceeds from a mandatory $12 student activity fee go for support of the student newspaper, yearbook, and several campus cultural and entertainment activities to which students are admitted free.

Other mandatory fees entitle students to free admission to some athletic events.

Mabry said he opposed these mandatory fees, too. The bill has been referred for study to the House Universities and Colleges Committee, of which he is a member. "We may change it in committee to include those fees, too," he said.

"Many students who have only limited funds could probably use this money for books or clothes or some other needed item," Mabry stated. "What right does the college have to force him to pay money for something which really has nothing to do with his education?"

Mabry, a 36-year old farmer from Dublin, attended Delta State College and the University of Mississippi. He is a former public school teacher, and is one of the two Republicans in the House.

Dark Shadow

We've been in Vietnam in some capacity now for approximately eight years with little change besides the continued escalation of same. We are presently in Laos in a frighteningly similar position to the one that we were in eight years ago in Vietnam. In both cases the American public was the last to be informed of our involvement in these countries and then only after we had been involved militarily for a long period of time.

Since our planet is inhabited by human beings, we must expect that we are going to be involved periodically in wars. It's, indeed, part of our heritage. But, even in the days when kings and czars ruled the great countries of the world; the people were at least informed of the fact that they were to be in a war before the fact, even if they didn't have any say in it. Now days this courtesy seems to have fallen into disuse at least in this country with our two most recent war ventures.

Indeed, it seems evident that President Nixon had no intention of telling the American public of our involvement in what essentially is another Vietnam conflict. This was undoubtedly due to his recent foreign policy statement which proported that America would refrain from future involvement, at least direct involvement, in the affairs of other countries. This was quite evident when the "cat was let out of the bag" concerning our involvement in Laos when Nixon very obviously vacilated and played the "technicality game" over the issue when questions were put to him by senators, congressmen, and reporters regarding same.

It would appear that we have indeed gone far enough in our support of what essentially is the "autocracy" which now unrepresentatively and in-constitutionally rules over this nation. The stated policies of this "autocracy" and their actions are invariably turning out to be two vastly differing things. It is a wonder why the citizens of this nation aren't taking a more direct part in opposing a government which has directly voiced a "go slow" policy involving further civil rights and anti-poverty legislation, which is moving rapidly toward apparent facism in its "anti-crime" and "anti-conspiracy" policies, and which enters into foreign wars on apparent whims without consulting either of its Congressional Houses, its citizens, or other involved nations.

The time for apathy and for "waiting for better days" is gone. The majority of the German citizens in Pre-Nazi Germany were waiting for better days which obviously just weren't to come.

It is apparent that the majority of the American public are presently in a conservative mood. Same was evidenced with the election of Nixon. But it is certain that no one expected him to turn into the autocrat that he has become. Not even his most radical opponents expected such a situation.

It should now be apparent that it was a mistake putting Nixon in the position that he is in now. He is either too weak a man to fight the Mitchels, the Thurmonds, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or is, in fact, spearheading this rightest move which is veering dangerously close to facism. In either case, we simply cannot afford to leave things be. It's past time for the citizens of this country to openly and massively oppose the autocratic nature of our present governmental system. The time is late, the hour dark, and the dark shadow of facism spreading ever further over the land.

It's time to "ask not what your country can do for you...."

Cacklebirds

anytime now all the cacklebirds will be flying home after a hard ayd at the office and leave the telephone poles and return to their arial trees, such as the one i live in with my guardians, and watch the bees kick up a fuss on the tv-hive.

mama and daddy cacklebird are so funny. they make themselves up so freaky. i feel so sneaky just being around. if i could talk and be listened to, i'd say a thing or two about how i feel and what is making me act like an abnormal cacklebird but there's nothing i can do till i can buy my own booze.

the lizard that chews on earwigs right below our tree is my friend. he says that most of the cacklebirds are solely intent on cackling away night and day as if their bellies were bloated by the thirsty gremlins they are so riled about. i defend my feathers, but having grown tired of their teased effect i just sit and watch the lizard chew gumptuously on his tender earwig, and sing myself to sleep.

upon awakening i notice that a few other cacklebirds are busy building something...what are you doing i ask with a hunger that travels all the way up my spine. "we're building a tree that will reach all the way up to cacklebird heaven" said spiny the elder. is that right? i chimed in...and what do you expect to find up there? roullette wheels that win with every spin? or a super intergalactic bee-show?

to that they did not reply but muttered among themselves. "it's none of your business" they finally answered. "you would not understand if we told you." what? starkly what? i quipped. . .but went away famished.

you know said the lizard with a yawn...you just have to take a bite of this earwig. it is so good for you! for your head...

really? well...i thought that earwigs crawled into your ears at night and did a mess...and god knows what he would do to your stomach.

that's just it...replied the lizard, you WILL know if you try it...you musn't wait for them to tell you when and what to eat. it is good for you. trust my sincerity and you will not hunger for their little flimsy well-guarded secrets any longer.

...so i did and sis told mommy and daddy and they don't want any part of me. and after they build their dream house and revel in the tree to cacklebird heaven they will leave this legacy to me and sis...but now they do not want to leave it with me,..but i have already given sis my earwig and we wear them around our ears and all kinds of near stuff... and pretty soon someday they may give up on their dreamhouse and their tree to cacklebird heaven..and someday they will come down to earth and shake the lizard's tail and shed like snakes in the sun... what? starkly what?...tut tut tut sputtered the tobacco-chewing mummy to baby-gauze.

A Quiet Place

AND IF IF FACT THE WORLD IS RIGHT, IF THIS MUSIC OF THE CAFES, THESE MASS ENJOY – MENTS AND THESE AMERICAN–ISED MEN WHO ARE PLEASED WITH SO LITTLE ARE RIGHT, THEN I AM WRONG, I AM CRAZY. I AM IN TRUTH THE STEPPEN–WOLF THAT I OFTEN CALL MY–SELF; THAT BEAST ASTRAY WHO FINDS NEITHER HOME NOR JOY NOR NOURISHMENT IN A WORLD THAT IS STRANGE AND INCOMPREHENSIBLE TO HIM...

Harry Haller in THE STEP–
PENWOLF by Hesse

My friends sometimes tell me that I have a knack for finding strange people. I do it only by happenstance, but often this world and the people of the Pioneer valley often seem to me to be taken from a good novel.

On Saturday nights when I have nothing much to do and the library is closed, I sometimes thumb down to Hamp for a beer in one of the old taversn on King street. I enjoy going where there are no students although the old men standing at the wrought iron bar can be especially cold to a young stranger in Levis.

I SOUGHT OUT THE ANCIENT TAVERN, wrote Hesse, . . .HERE, TOO, I FOUND NEITHER HOME NOR COMPANY, NOTHING BUT A SEAT FROM WHICH TO VIEW A STAGE WHERE STRANGE PEOPLE PLAYED STRANGE PARTS. NEVERTHELESS, THE QUIET OF THE PLACE WAS WORTH SOMETHING; NO CR–OWDS, NO MUSIC, ONLY A FEW PEACEFUL TOWNSFOLD AT BARE WOODEN TABLES.

One night when I was feeling in such a mood, I took a friend to one of these places for a glass of wine before the feature at the Coolidge. The bartender came over and served us, sat down and talked a while. "We don't get many people like you in here, you know," he said. "No, not too many students. Tell me, what are you studying?" He bought us each another glass of the sweet, red wine.

PERHAPS, TOO, THEY WERE SOLITARY FELLOWS WHO HAD BEEN SIDETRACKED, QUIET, THOUGHTFUL TOPERS OF BANKRUPT IDEALS, LONE WOL–VES AND POOR DEVILS LIKE ME . . . EITHER HOMESICKNESS OR DISAPPOINTMENT BROUGHT THEM THERE, THE MARRIED TO RECOVER THE ATMOSPHERE OF HIS BACHELOR DAYS, THE OLD OFFICIAL TO RECOVER HIS STU–DENT YEARS . . .

But everyone knows that the place to go is the Drake, where beer is cheap (relatively) and if you're lucky you can see some chic loading her laundry into one of the machines. To a newcomer in Amherst, it must closely resemble the 'place' of a certain Petula Clark song.

I used to go to the Pub to watch the exquisite DERNIERS of the cocktail waitresses, along with all the athletic supporters and the others, who, tanked up a bit, wish they were.

Some nights the piano plays and the people there actually sing "God Bless America" and other equally intelligent drinking songs. Or the guitarist sits up on the counter and tries not to sing out of tune, but he could sure use a little help from his friends.

IT WAS MUSIC OF THE DE–CLINE, wrote Hesse, THERE MUST HAVE BEEN SUCH MUSIC IN ROME UNDER THE LATER EMPERORS. COMPARED WITH BACH AND MOZART AND REAL MUSIC, IT WAS, NATURALLY, A MISERABLE AFFAIR, BUT SO WAS ALL OUR ART, ALL OUR THOUGHT, ALL OUR MAKESHIFT CULTURE IN COMPARISON WITH REAL CULTURE. THIS MUSIC WAS AT LEAST SINCERE, UN–ASHAMEDLY PRIMITIVE AND CHILDISHLY HAPPY. THERE WAS SOMETHING OF THE NEGRO IN IT. AND SOMETHING OF THE AMERICAN, WHO WITH ALL HIS STRENGTH SEEMS SO BOYISHLY FRESH AND CHILDLIKE TO US EUROPEANS.

No, I guess it's the Drake for me. Or perhaps just a can of Gansett on my night-stand and settle down to a little Roszak: "We may discover," he says, "that what a mere handful of be-atniks pioneered in Alan Ginsberg's youth will have become the life style of millions of college age young. Is there any other ideal toward which the young can grow that looks half so appealing?"

Freedom

To The Editor:

I notice a controversy on the MDC editorial pages concerning the meaning of "freedom." I would like to offer a viewpoint that may explain the behavior of both radicals and conservatives.

Radicals argue that we live with only an illusion of freedom: the majority is satisfied to delegate decision-making power to leaders in exchange for the toys of technology; the leaders' values are financial and their personalities are authoritarian; a large minority of African, Latin and Indian Americans are not even given a good payoff in toys. The conservatives respond by saying that ours is the most free society in the world: it tolerates dissent and provides freedom of the press; it is lenient toward law-breakers, provides economic opportunities, and in general is democratically structured.

Both radicals and conservatives are correct, except that the radicals are "more correct." It is true that we have free speech and a free press; however, these are specific opportunities that do not necessarily produce real freedom or democracy. Here is my definition of "real freedom": Freedom does not mean only access to communications, it means access to power. Access to power means the opportunity to exercise some appropriate and fair control over one's entire environment. In a democracy, appropriate and fair control is one vote per person on all public issues. Since we have computers and a great variety of communications machines, the "data" of the voting procedure can be processed as efficiently as any other data. For example: if the Pro-Brush company wants to beat and poison the water in the Mill River and Connecticut River, the citizens of Florence and Northampton and the entire Connecticut Valley should vote on it. Also, if the academic life at the University is to be regulated, the citizens of the University should vote on each regulation. The fundamental process of a democracy is communication from the bottom up. But it is improbable that we will soon see improvement in upward communication because our society has already institutionalized direction by managers and officials with quiet agreement by all citizens (silent majority) who are enjoying their toys.

Radicals are also criticized for being ineffective. If they are ineffective, it is because they are still mostly verbal. The violence of their words may be followed by equally violent action, because they want to change our society radically. Radicals can study our own Founding Fathers as examples of effective radicals. They wrote fine words and then they killed the British. Conservatives can study the British as the best example of effective conservatives: they wrote fine words and dominated the world, except for U.S.

A Conversation

To The Editor:

The following conversation with Dean Richards took place on Wednesday, March 11th at 2:30 p.m. "Dean Richards, will the University suspend a whole fraternity if one of the members gets busted?"

"Although it has never happened, yes, I think it will." WHY? "Because it is illegal". So is minors drinking, girls sleeping with guys, girls crossing state lines to stay with someone, and dangerous weapons on a campus. ??Well, Alcohol is an excepted social phenomenon." Then aren't you looking at the issue of drugs from a moral standpoint and are therefore discriminating?

"I guess I am Discriminating. You know, I was even thinking of taking all the fraternity presidents to see the psycho wards." "I bet you didn't even think of taking them to an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting?" "No, I didn't" "Didn't Mr. Brook, representing the University, issue a statement that the University would take no stand either legal or moral concerning drugs?" "I guess he did, but untill someone can prove to me that some good comes out of marijuana, I can't condone its use in Fraternities."

"What good comes from the use of alcohol? "It's accepted. I can't give marijuana my stamp of approval." We don't want approval! we just want to be considered like all the other students at the university! We want you to adopt a lassiez-faire policy. Let it be just what it is, a individual decision. "I can't do that." What we want is the right of self-determination. We don't want anyone imposing his moral judgements on us. "If you don't like the system you can always get out of it." All the time we've been in school they tell us to change the system from within. "Well, you can try", Richards stated.

Coalition

To The Editor:

The New Politics Coalition, now in office at 25 Main Street, Northampton Mass., recently adopted a charter and elected officers. "Our purpose in founding NPC," says co-chairman Bill Connolly, political scientist, "is to provide residents of the first Congressional District with channels for participation in the political process. We've set up a number of Action Committees to investigate and propose possible solutions to some of our most urgent problems --- pollution, human rights, quality education, poverty and our military involvement in the world."

NPC was founded by residents of the First Congressional District. Charles Sheldon, student, was elected Chairman of the Ecology Action Committee: "It is not our intent to tell people what to do; rather, we are determined to work with people to achieve the goals most beneficial to all of us. Our intent is to be of a cooperative nature, working with concerned citizens who cannot devote the time themselves to information-gathering or program-development."

In operation only a month, the Coalition now has members from several communities in the district and expects to enlarge its membership to include citizens in all congressional districts of Massachusetts. "The word 'coalition', says Stephen Oates, Co-Chairman of NPC and a historian, implies the coming together of concerned persons of all ages to recognize one another's problems, to unite efforts of individual groups presently working on specific problems and to forge a powerful pressure group for progressive legislation."

The New Silent Majority

To The Editor:

The goddamn apathy on this campus is unbelievable! In the event that many don't understand what we're directly referring to, it's the referendum on Vietnam, that was held on March 10th. Of the approximately 18,000 students on this campus, only 2000 cared enough to go. That's really poor. Do you care? There's the old excuses like "My vote won't make a difference" or "It won't change anything." Are you serious? Don't express any opinion and reinforce that status quo. That's exactly what's happening. It is assumed that Nixon recognizes lack of protest as support for his policies. Remember that he feels that the silent majority is behind him. Wow, he doesn't have to worry about the old silent majority dying out, he's got a new one breeding on this campus.!

Although both sides are to blame, those who favor immediate withdrawal, that didn't show are worse. You want us out, but yet to spend a little time putting a check in a box, you are too busy. If you can get up and scream about the policy, you can get out there and use the system to change it.

It's time to wake up and get off your asses, people! Get out and do something except talk to each other. Have a little pride in opinion and use it while you still have the chance!

White Man's Burden

Sharing the white man's Burden. When U.S. Ambassador to Saigon Ellsworth Bunker was questioned on Nixon's "Vietnamization" policy a few months ago, he summed it up by stating, "We want to change the skin color of the corpses but the war will continue to victory." The point was not lost on George Wallace, or William Calley, who has been charged with the murder of 102 Vietnamese villagers in the Song My massacre, Wallace said he was a "great American" and had been unjustly attacked.

When the vice-president of South Vietnam, Ky, was asked by a journalist who his heroes were, he replied, "I have only one, Adolf Hitler."

A Farce

To The Editor:

The March Moratorium Poetry Festival reveals the nature of the liberal, middle class contribution to the peace movement. At a time demanding action, they give words. As people are jailed, they close themselves in auditoriums. Violence rules the day, yet they whisper to each other and damn the war.

The Poetry Festival has no claim to "Moratorium", the war continues. They waste their energy in personal suffering, to torture their ears to cleanse their souls. It is a serious waste of money and human resources.

RAYMOND DAVIS

A Politician

To The Editor:

Hubert Humphrey is an experienced politician, he knows how to control crowds and has faced and overcome many groups of hecklers before. It seems illogical that he could be heckled off the stage at the rather conservative University of Massachusetts. I would like to offer an alternate explanation of why he left before finishing his speech.

Mr. Humphrey agreed to answer questions from the floor before speaking. The first two questions concerned the 1968 Convention and the Chicago trial. Professor Humphrey answered both very cleverly saying that he supported the freedom of dissent and he questioned the Constitutionality of the conspiracy law. However, in both answers, he stressed strongly that it was imperative that American citizens abide by the due process of the Constitution. The next question was left out of all the news releases so I will quote it, "Professor Humphrey, only Congress has the power to declare war. You have just told us to obey the Constitution. Why during the four years of your administration did you support a war not declared by Congress in direct violation of the Constitution?" Mr. Humphrey's answer was a weak, "I don't know, you'll have to ask Congress." He left almost immediately after this.

The heckling was a convenient scapegoat to get him out of a situation which would have caused a very embarrassing exposure. It seems he wasn't prepared to answer for his part in the Vietnam war. I sincerely hope that every American who believes in the Constitution will ask him the same question. If you ever get a worthwhile answer, I would most like to hear it.

Liberated?

To The Editor:

For the last week or more, the Collegian has had at least one article everyday from the Women's Liberation concerning the Bridal Fair and the exploitation of women, and there hasn't been any opposition to any of their statements. What's the matter with the men and women of this college?

As far as the Bridal Fair is concerned, I can see no way in which anyone's rights were violated. No one was forced to go and as long as it does appeal to some members of the college community, I can't see why it shouldn't be allowed to take place here. Yes, it did try to convince the bride-to-be that she should have certain items in order to be a good wife, but these are simple advertising techniques, the same kind of techniques that are used on every single member of this society to get him to buy goods from the people who are selling. Children are pumped with garbage about "being the first kid on your block to get the new super-duper what-sis!" between their cartoons and super-heroes. Teenagers are endlessly faithful in following the rash of new fads that come with every season. Men simply aren't "real" men unless they own the sharpest little sports car around or the classiest luxury model that money can buy. That's the way our economic system works, it's called "competition".

That happens to be the "American Way" like it or not, and women get their share of it because they spend a lot of the money that is spent in this country each year. Does this give women the exclusive right of feeling that their rights are being infringed upon?

On Loyalty

To The Editor:

Now that UMass is going to the N.I.T., a word should be said concerning the cheerless (leaders??). Throughout the season, basketball mostly, these people have not provided any leadership never mind any cheers. Only a few faithful members of the troop ritually showed up each game; and to these people I do not direct this letter. It is to those who don't come to any games, oh yes, you did come to the Holy Cross game; but weren't there TV cameras there? No, that couldn't be the reason for so many of you finally showing up!! Now that the N.I.T. is at hand you'll probably get 100% turn out again. Could it be that they get the ride down and in for free? No I must be mistaken??? You'll dig out those moth eaten sweaters and get ready to use your privileges again. You ought not to be allowed to do so in my estimation. Maybe some of the kids who lead the cheers in the stands should go, after all they did a better jot than you did.

Metals, Synthetics Featured In "The Misunderstanding"

Metals, mirrors and synthetic materials are being used to dramatize loneliness in a Smith College production of Albert Camus' "The Misunderstanding." The Smith theatre and speech department production will be at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday (March 12-14) in Theatre 14 of the Center for the Performing Arts.

Regarded as a forerunner of the Theatre of the Absurd of Pinter, Sartre and Ionesco, its themes of lineliness and alienation will be expressed in the stage setting and in costumes. Costumes designer Richard A. Keshishian of the Smith faculty clothes cast members in synthetic materials, with a minimum of color. Some characters will wear a metallic-appearing clothing.

The set is mounted on a revolve and surrounded by a cyclorama of mirror-like plastic. Result: the feeling of eternal captivity and confrontation, with no horizon and nowhere else to go. The set design was done by William Hatch of the Smith faculty.

Hatch uses metals extensively in the floors and walls of his set. His aim was to create a "cage effect, in which the actors make a scraping, honing sound as they walk. As in the costumes, there is a lack of color - everything is frozen in grays, metals and blacks."

Director Stephen Macht felt the setting and costumes should "draw the audience into its own world of eternal confrontation." He interprets the existentialist Camus' meaning in "The Misunderstanding" to be, i n part, that "There is no such thing as religious help. One must find his own sense of personal integrity."

Tickets for the performances are available at the Center box office weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and an hour before curtain time. For phone reservations and group rates information, call 584-2700, Ext. 840.

Senate Will Investigate Radicals

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS-LNS) - The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi, has launched a new investigation into several radical groups.

The investigation involves at least four groups:

The SDS New York Regional office, now an independent collective. The office has been used as a meeting center and for printing and propaganda work.

Cambridge Iron and Steel, Inc., a corporation operated by movement people for the purpose of distributing money donated by a wealthy benefactor. A spokesman for Cambridge Iron and Steel described the organization as a "fluke" - that is, not the ordinary movement funding apparatus - and said the name was a joke. The corporation disbursed nearly $25,000 to about a dozen movement groups, including LNS and the SDS New York regional office. An "expose" in PL Magazine (the Progressive Labor monthly) brought the corporation into the public eye last year. The corporation has since become inactive.

The Institute for Policy Studies, a well-endowed left-liberal think tank located in Washington, D.C. IPS's fellows and visiting researchers include movement academicians and activists. Its director, Marcus Raskin, was a co-defendant with Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Liberation News Service, a news distribution agency which sends a packet of articles, photos and drawings twice a week to 500 subscribers in the U.S. and abroad.

The Eastland subcommittee has so far obtained the bank records of IPS (which offered no resistance) and of Cambridge Iron and Steel (whose bank, Cambridge Trust, did not notify the Corporation).

The banks of LNS and SDS were served with subpoenas to produce the records of the accounts for subcommittee, but the banks notified the movement groups. LNS and SDS went into court together, successfully obtaining a temporary restraining order.

Continuing legal action by the two group will seek to enjoin the subcommittee from continuing its investigation. So far, a federal judge has postponed making a decision.

Meanwhile, officers for Cambridge Iron and Steel were scheduled to appear before the subcommittee at secret hearings. A day before their scheduled appearance on Feb. 26, however, the Cambridge people were notified that the hearings were postponed "until further notice."

No one is sure just what Eastland and his cronies are going after.

Relax Your Mind and Gently Flow Downstream

Transcendental meditation as taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi and teachers trained personally by him at the Academy of Meditation, Himalayas, India, is a technique that allows any individual to use his full mental potential.

What we want is to enjoy life. We need the capacity to easily do whatever we want to do. Expansion of consciousness, which means using more of our potential, automatically gives us the ability to act with greater efficiency and greater enjoyment.

In TM we engage the mind in a simple, easy process called transcending. The conscious mind contacts the individual's own inner reservoir of creative intelligence, energy, and happiness. Because the mind wants to enjoy more, be more, this process of transcending is very easy, natural and pleasant.

Scientific experiments performed on meditators have shown that the state gained during the practice of TM, based on physical evidence, is unique. Measurements of metabolic rate, blood pressure, breath rate, and EEG (brain waves) show that very deep rest and new patterns of mental activity occur during meditation. Stanford Research Institute has considered these results so striking that they have begun an interdepartmental study of the transcendental state of consciousness.

In practice we find that everyone who meditates properly easily gains this state and quickly begins to realize and live the benefits in everyday life.

Troubles Loom For Profiteering College

ALBERT LEA, Minnesota -- (CPS) -- Not so many years ago, the then president of Parsons College, Millard R. Roberts, sky-rocketed to fame with his educational philosophy. He maintained it was possible to run a quality liberal arts institution and make a profit.

Largely because of a LIFE magazine article, national attention was focused on Parsons. The North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary School withdrew accreditation and the school began to have financial problems. Roberts' theories seemed wrong on both points. He moved on, but not before planting his philosophy of education in other places in the mid-west. Lea College in Albert Lea, Minnesota, which will graduate its original entering class this spring, is one such place.

But not all is right at Lea as that first graduation day draws near. Eight faculty members - almost one seventh of the instructional staff - received terminal notices at the beginning of the fall semester. The first president of Lea College, William A. DeMeester, was eased out of office none too gracefully by the Board of Trustees last summer. Now conversations with members of the teaching staff indicate probably half -- if not more -- of the faculty would go elsewhere if they could find jobs.

There are a variety of factors which have contributed to the situation, not the least of which one faculty member characterized as"a new president in the first line of power for the first time." But perhaps even more basic is the difference in outlook between many of the faculty members and the Board of Trustees. With one exception, all 43 of the Trustees come from the immediate Albert Lea area, the city of 20,000 in which Lea College is located. With one exception, none of them have had any experience as educators. They are on the Board because of their initial contributions to the college.

But as one professor cynically describes the board, "They're just small crooks,..." He means none of the trustees can tap large enough financial resources to thwart the money problems which have plagued the school since its beginning. Roberts' theory about making a profit doesn't seem to be working.

Things were so bad last spring, that the college organized a "Sock-it-to-Lea" fund drive during which students pledged to go home and raise money for the school. The primary concern of the board at at its almost weekly meetings is the financial state of the college.

The faculty came to Lea College because of the kind of education which was supposed to be offered there. The college was planned to recruit at least 1/3 of its student body from the lower third of high school classes. In one sense the college was to be a sort of second chance school. The program at Lea was to feature individual attention for students, putting emphasis on tutorials and the like.

In essence, the faculty came to Lea College with a stronger than average commitment to teaching. They came, as one professor put it, to try and start what they perceived to be needed changes in higher education. Another underscored the kind of commitment felt by most faculty, "nobody moved up by coming here."

Lea College was founded by people with different visions. The residents of Albert Lea primarily wanted a college which would run on a sound financial basis. They had entered the venture convinced it could be done. The faculty were committed to education. From the beginning there were clashes.

According to faculty sources, DeMeester, the first president, lost the support of the faculty because the faculty did not feel he was presenting their views to the Board of Trustees. Simultaneously he lost the confidence of the board. Last summer he was asked to resign, and the search for the new president began.

The board settled on Hale Aarnes, who had been chairman of department of education. He was characterized by several faculty members as follows: "As education department chairman Hale would always say, 'I've only got two things to say. The first is unimportant and the second is irrelevant.' Invariably he was right."

A member of the Board of Trustees said Aarnes was picked because of his "image". The board felt Aarnes had the "appropriate educational background" and "maturity" for the office.

Besides the new president, the fall semester started off with a new dean of the college and a new dean of students. As one faculty member returning at the time from work towards a Ph.D. characterized the situation, "I came back to an entirely different ship of state."

Shortly thereafter, that same faculty member, who had received a merit teaching award and had been recommended by his departing department chairman to take over the chairmanship, was given notice his contract was to be terminated.

Seven others received the same notice. Since the announcement of the terminations last fall, two of the faculty members have been reinstated. They maintain it is because the board "had to reinstate somebody."

Most faculty members feel the terminations came because Aarnes felt threatened by the eight in question. Members of the board talk of "financial problems and over staffing" as reasons for the terminations. But they also seem to think it understandable a new president would want to surround himself with a staff loyal to him. Perhaps that is because this is how they see things happening in the business world. One member of the board, a partner in an insurance firm, said it's only natural for a new president to ask "which of these people are going to rally around me."

One of the dismissed faculty members said he felt "loyalty" might be an issue in the terminations. He added, "When I complain the library doesn't have enough books, I'm not being disloyal." The same professor felt the college might close as a result of the current situation.

A board member maintains, "We're in better shape than we were four years ago."

It may indeed be the case the college is on a sounder financial footing, but the school has not attained the profitable status predicted by Millard R. Roberts.

University Secretary Robert J. McCartney, pictured here reading an old Yahoo, will be one of the administrators featured in the Spring edition of the campus humor magazine, due to hit the newsstands right after vacation.

Highlights of UMass' Regular Season: Pratice, Honors and Fans' Reactions

IT ALL STARTED HERE – Way back in November, the regular season that was to be UMass' greatest ever was still in its practice stages at the Cage. (MDC photo by Bob Christmann)

TWO TOP NEW ENGLANDERS – Redman basketball coach Jack Leaman and star sophomore Julius Erving are second to no one among their New England peers. Leaman, who in his fourth year as UMass coach is bringing his team to the National Invitational Tournament, was selected Tuesday as NE's top hoop coach by vote of the UPI. Erving needs no voting procedure for claim to his title; he is far and away recognized as NE's top basketball performer. (MDC Cartoons by Fred Rosenthal)

Swimmers Place Fourth At Yan-Con Relays

By JIM BROWN

This past weekend at the Yankee Conference Relay Championships held at the University of New Hampshire, the Redmen had to settle for a fourth place, six behind third place. The University of Connecticut, which has been very strong in conference meets during the regular season, showed its abilities by making convincing times to win most of the events. The University of Vermont placed first in three events, and was the only team that put UConn down to second place in any events. The University of New Hampshire took third place, with UMass in the final spot. The final scores were: UConn 128 pts., UVM 110 pts., UMass 46 pts.

In the first event, 400 yd. freestyle, Geoff Senior (56.4), Herb Schuster (53.6),Dennis Moulton (55.4), and Mark Miller (50.9) combined for a timing of 3:37.4, a third place. UConn's winning time was 3:28.9. In the next two events, UMass did not have entries. (The 400 yd backstroke and breaststroke-butterfly). In event four, which was a 500 yd crescendo relay (50-100-200-100-50), the UMass Aquamen were represented at 4:59.0 by Thomas (24.8), Rich Vogel (57.2), Eddie Jazab (2:01.6), Leach (59.4), and captain Al Northup (26.0) - a fourth place. In the 200 yd medley relay, Northup, Senior, Miller, and Paul Joy placed at 31.2, 30.7, 27.5, and 23.1 respectively for a final time of 1:52.5 UConn's timing was 1:46.4, UVM's was 1:49.2.In one meter diving, Joy (175.15 pt) and Schuster (138.9 pts) took third behind UConn and UVM. UMass didn't have an entry, for the third time, in the 400 yd individual medley relay.

In the 200 yard freestyle, the Redmen came in behind UConn's final time of 1:32.4 by just under two seconds. It was Senior (24.5), Moulton (23.7), Northup (24.0) and Miller (22.3) for UMass.

The three meter diving found UMass without an entry again. The 400 yard medley was won by UVM, followed by UConn, UNH, and U-Mass (Schuster 1:11.3, Leach 1:11.4), Moulton 1:12.6 and Jazab 55.4). UMass and UNH were the only teams that didn't have participants in all events.

NIT Roundups . . . .

NEW YORK (AP) - Army, the top defensive team in the country at 52.0, opposes Cincinnati in the second game of a Saturday afternoon doubleheader. Marquette, ranked No. 8 in the final Associated Press weekly poll, takes on darkhorse Massachusetts in Saturday night's twinbill nightcap.

LSU takes on Georgetown in Sunday afternoon's televised first game; Utah clashes with Duke in Saturday night's first game, and North Carolina opposes Manhatten in the first contest Saturday afternoon.

The final first round game Sunday after noon matches Louisville and Oklahoma.

Lou Carnesecca talks strangely for the coach of the eighth best defensive team in the country. "The 30 second clock is a good rule," he insists. "It's good for the game."

This was after Carnesecca watched on television last Saturday when North Carolina State stalled away minutes at a time and finally beat favored South Carolina in double overtime 42-39 for the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Carnesecca, perhaps a bit prominded now that he will be coaching next season the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association which has the 30-second rule, promised that there will be none of that Friday night when his Redmen face Miami of Ohio on the opening night of the National Invitation Tournament.

Miami is ranked fifth in defense allowing 62 points a game, to St. John's 63.6, but Carnesecca still feels there will be plenty of action in the nightcap of the doubleheader. Duquesne and George Tech open the tournament in the first game.

"We work for a good shot, but we put the ball up," Carnesecca said. "We don't hold the ball.

"That could spoil the game," he added, referring to N.C. State's stalling tactics. "I hope we can change that rule and put in a time limit. What good is it to have 11,500 people watch a kid dribble the ball back and forth."

Eighth Ranked Marquette Specialize in Defense

All Warrior Starters Score in Double Figures

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Owners of a 22-3 season record, ranked eighth and tenth nationally depending on whether one believes the AP or UPI, possessors of the tenth best defense statistically in the nation, a team which starts five men who average in double figures, participators in their fourth straight post season tournament, all of these things describe the team UMass must face in the first round of the NIT Saturday night, Marquette University.

Coached by Al McGuire, whose trademark in his own playing days was always defense, the Warriors work on defense almost exclusively. McGuire feels that the team "must control the tempo of the game through defense" and so far this season this theory has proved highly successful.

Marquette has held its opponents to an average of only 64.9 points a contest so far. In many of these tilts, the Warriors have limited their opponents to less than ten field goals in a half including their 66-54 win over St. Louis in which the losers could only make one hoop in the first nineteen minutes of play.

However, McGuire feels that the main purpose of his defense is not to steal the ball but to force the other team into turnovers and bad shots. A turnover, McGuire explains, "is worth four points, two that we get and two that they don't". Marquette has forced the opposition into an average of between fifteen and twenty turnovers a game which, in large part, explains the Warriors' success this season.

As far as the offense is concerned, Marquette has changed its strategy as the season has progressed. The Warriors opened the year with a running game but after their third contest, an 86-78 loss to Michigan, McGuire switched to a controlled and balanced type attack. McGuire's philosophy is to play for the percentage shot and look for the open man underneath the hoop.

This balanced attack shows through in the scoring column as all five starters averaged over eleven points a game. Leading the way is 6' junior guard Dean Meminger, affectionately referred to as "the dream" by Marquette followers. As St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca said, "Meminger is the kid who makes it all happen." He controls the offense and is an excellent shooter, averaging 19 points a game.

Another player UMass will have to be especially aware of is forward Ric Cobb. Cobb, although he is only 6'5, is described by Carnesecca as "a vicious rebounder" and could give UMass' Julius Erving a lot of trouble underneath. Cobb is also averaging 13 points along with his strong game off the boards.

But the Redmen cannot really afford to give special attention to any one of the Marquette starters for if they do, they will get hurt by someone else. Besides Meminger, the Warriors start 6'3 Jeff Sewell at guard. Sewell has been described as the team's best outside shooter and if he is better than Meminger, he must really be something. He was the lowest scorer of the starters, averaging only (??) eleven points.

Helping out Cobb up front are Joe Thomas and Gary Brell. Both are exceptional rebounders for their size, Thomas standing at 6'6, Brell at 6'5. But neither can be neglected offensively as Thomas scored 13.2 a game and Brell got 11.9. So if UMass tries to concentrate too much on Cobb or Meminger, these two could hurt them.

Besides their early season loss to Michigan, the Warriors have also suffered back to back defeats at the hands of Loyola (Ill.) and Notre Dame, in double overtime. They come into the game with eight straight victories and as favorites to win the tournament.

Marquette comes into the NIT after having turned down a bid to play in the NCAA Midwest regionals. The Warriors were hoping for a berth in the Mideast regionals, but when it didn't come, they decided to try the NIT instead. This is Marquette's fourth appearance in the NIT. Their best finish was in 1967 when they lost in the finals to Southern Illinois.

So all in all, UMass should have its hands full. The Warriors could hurt the Redmen badly with their vaunted zone press which has been characterized as one of the most effective in the nation. Presses have hurt UMass at times this year and one can be sure that Marquette is well aware of that fact. Don't be surprised if the Warriors decide to press early and often.

Another thing which could hurt the Redmen is turnovers. All season long, UMass has come down court on offense only to lose the ball without even having taken a shot. Even against some of the weaker teams, the Redmen have committed in the neighborhood of 15 to 20 turnovers. If they commit that many against Marquette, it could prove fatal.

But don't count UMass out. All season it has come back after many people had counted it out. The Redmen have the talent to beat anyone and it only remains to be seen if the talent can all jell in one game.

REDMAN RANTINGS - Erving was honored once again yesterday as he was given honorable mention in the UPI All-American selections for the 1969-70 season. This information came out in an official UPI release although the Boston Globe failed to mention Erving at all. He was the only New Englander so honored..... There are still about 1000 tickets available at $2.50 for Saturday night's NIT contest at the Boyden Ticket Office....The Redmen will be leaving for New York from outside the Cage at one p.m. on Friday. If a good size crowd were there to see them off, it might show the hoopsters the great support they have on campus.... (To Barry: We apologize for breaking your glasses. Peter and Sully).

There are still NIT tickets available at the Boyden ticket office and can be picked up today from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. There are near to 1000 tickets available, the price of which tickets is $2.50 each. A limited supply of adult tickets, price $7.50, are still on hand. All purchases must be made in cash.

E FOR EXCELLENT - Brook (shown in action against BU on left) will be counted on heavily to offset the scoring punch of MU's Dean Meminger. Julie (crashing the boards against Rider) will have his hands full against the Warrior rebounders.

Cage Crowd Pleasers; Bopper and Sam

(Today features the fourth of a special five-part series of interviews of UMass basketball players and tomorrow coach Jack Leaman, by Denise Magnel, Monday Issue Editor of the Collegian).

Dennis Chapman, alias "Bopper" (so-called for the way he bops his head up and down when he is excited), finds nicknames cut down barriers between people. "At the beginning of the season the sophomores may have felt strange around the seniors, but nicknaming each other got us together."

"Being part of a team has helped me adjust to people in general. The traveling I have done with them, and also going to school in a different area than I was brought up in, has taken me into contact with many kinds of people. It should help me judge others later in life."

Baltimore-born , Chapman attended Washington College and Baltimore Junior College a year each before coming to UMass. He finds the southern schools play a more "conservative" game of basketball, shooting more, whereas defense is a strong factor in New England games.

"Personally I liked our win over Rhode Island," he said, "because it was the first time we had beaten them on their own court since 1964."

Dennis is convinced that the fan support the Redmen have received this year has contributed greatly to their success, "especially those last few away games, with that large following backing us up."

Getting into a game as a reserve player is more interesting to Chapman than when he starts. "I feel I'm helping the team move when I'm put in for a particular reason. The challenge of it makes me more effective," he added.

The 6'4 forward feels that by stressing academics above athletics, UMass is getting "a smarter ballplayer and a better person to handle as a team member."

A senior, Dennis was a member of the School of Business Administration's Student-Faculty board for a year and a half through last semester.

He would like to put his marketing major to use in the business world before receiving his ROTC commission next fall.

DENNIS CHAPMAN

Dick Samuelson has proved himself as a reliable starting center this year. "Sitting on the bench makes me nervous. If I can get in the game from the beginning, I loosen up faster and usually play better ball."

Sam saw Holy Cross as the most crucial game of the season. "If we had lost that one, its psychological effect may have kept us from beating UConn and Rhode Island."

"Sports," Dick said, "has given me a sense of feeling for other people, but it's only one facet of my life. A person has a duty to himself to broaden as an individual."

As an active member of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity, Sam has tried to do that through his duties as social chairman, scribe and pledge master.

"The fraternity has given me a chance to meet the type of people I want to meet, people with the same interests I have."

The 6'6 Samuelson is now student-teaching in the Amherst school system. A physical education major, he looks forward to a teaching and coaching career after completing his studies.

Muhammed El-Farrar, Jordanian Ambassador to the United Nations, addressed an audience of 200 last evening. The audience was composed largely of two distinct factions – one pro-Arab and the other pro-Israeli – as indicated by their opposing responses to El-Farrar. (MDC Photo by Al McArdle.)

El-Farra Blasts Israel In Arab Student Lecture

"There will be no security in the Middle East as long as there is aggression there on the part of the Israelis." These were the words of Ambassador Muhammed El-Farra as he spoke on the possibility of peace during his speech last evening on "The Middle East Crisis." El-Farra is the permanent representative from Jordan to the United Nations and was sponsored on campus by the Organization of Arab Students at U-Mass.

Speaking before an audience of 200 in SBA 120, he said that the Arabs are willing to negotiate at any time but not at gunpoint, a position they find themselves in as long as Israel continues its alleged aggression. The Ambassador said that the Arabs are willing to "Live and let live" as long as the Israelis show that they also are willing to co-exist peacefully within the territory alloted them originally by the United Nations.

One factor which El-Farra cited as especially harmful to the possibility of peace was what he called an organized Zionist propaganda movement. He said that the picture of what is really happening in the Middle East is so distorted by "Zionist propaganda" that peace is not possible "until the curtain has been drawn aside." Because of the "distortion," the rest of the world does not realize what he considers the sanctity of the Arab position in the conflict.

Johnson Litter Controversy Discussed in Faculty Senate

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

At yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting, University Treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson in the face of rising criticism from individual faculty Senators, particularly from the Government Department, vowed to continue his campaign to have the janitorial staff "clean up" campus litter, until the Faculty Senate formally directs him otherwise.

The controversy developed as a result of a question asked by Senator Dean Alfange (Govt.) in which he sought the reason for the removal of a large quantity of graduate school and similar notices from the walls of Thompson Hall. Dr. Alfange was uncertain whether the Treasurer's response to the question at a previous Senate meeting constituted a promise to cease the practice.

The Treasurer replied that, upon viewing the large amount of litter around Herter Hall at a time when a number of dignitaries were expected, he directed the janitorial staff to undertake a general clean-up of academic buildings and their environs. The Treasurer expressed surprise that faculty were actually responsible for posting notices on other than official bulletin boards, such as wall areas, and asserted that the practice of removing as litter these notices would continue until the Senate directed him to the contrary.

A number of Senators responded to the Treasurer's challenge, many stating that bulletin board space in academic buildings was woefully inadequate. Dr. Alfange declared his intention to submit legislation to "direct the Treasurer to narrow his definition of litter." Mr. Syed stated that "these notices are there for the benefit of faculty and students, and they had better stay there." Professor Junkins (English) objected to the Treasurer's use of the English language, stating that to call these notices litter is similar to calling American tactics in Vietnam pacification.

Nixon to Reform Bureaucracy

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon, launching a continuing program to reshape the federal bureaucracy, began Thursday by proposing to revamp the policymaking and budget-drafting machinery of his own office.

In a special message to Congress, Nixon put forward a two-point plan that will go into effect automatically sometime this summer unless vetoed by either house of Congress within the next 60 days:

– A Cabinet-level Domestic Council with a staff of 40 to 50 specialists will coordinate the formulation of domestic policy - much as the long-established National Security Council operates in the area of foreign affairs and defense.

– The familiar Budget Bureau will be replaced by a new Office of Management and Budget that not only will help the President draft the government's annual spending programs but will keep a continuing watch on the effectiveness of federal undertakings.

"The Domestic Council," said Nixon, "will be primarily concerned with how we do it and how well we do it."

Robert P. Mayo, the current budget director, is expected to be named director of the new Office of Management and Budget.

The Domestic Council, although headed by the president, will have an executive director to run its day-to-day operations. There was speculation that this assignment would go to John D. Erlichman, already serving Nixon as coordinator of domestic policy planning.

Nixon said government often has been quick to demand reform in other institutions but has been slow to reform itself.

Arguing for the proposed overhaul of the executive office of the president, he said:

"The past 30 years have seen enormous changes in the size, structure and functions of the federal government. The budget has grown from less than $10 billion to $200 billion. The number of civilian employees has risen from 1 million to more than two and one half million. Four new Cabinet departments have been created, along with more than a score of independent agencies."

Senate Passes Bill Lowering Voting Age

WASHINGTON (AP) - Over-riding objections that it might throw the next presidential election into confusion, the Senate voted 64-17 Thursday to lower the voting age to 18 in all elections starting Jan. 1, 1971.

The Senate turned a deaf ear to protests by some members that the Supreme Court might rule the 18-year-old vote amendment invalid after millions of young people had cast ballots in the 1972 presidential election.

"What sort of confusion would reign?" asked Sen. James B. Allen, D–Ala. "Who would be president?"

Allen tried vainly to defer the effective date of the legislation until after 1972. His amendment was defeated 72-15.

The move to lower the voting age was pushed by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, who made it a part of a proposed five-year extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

It still must be approved by the House and, assuming the President signs it, it is sure to be challenged in the courts on constitutional grounds.

Allen and some other senators contended that Congress has no power under the Constitution to lower the voting age, that it can be done only by constitutional amendment. They argued that the Constitution specifically gives the power of determining voters' qualifications to the states.

Georgia, Kentucky, Alaska and Hawaii now permit persons under 21 to vote.

Under Mansfield's proposal, the right to vote in federal, state and local elections would be extended to all persons 18 and older.

This would give the ballot starting next year to an estimated 10 million to 11 million young people.

Backing Allen's unsuccessful effort to delay the effective date until Jan. 1, 1973, Sen. John C. Stennis, D–Miss., said an adverse court ruling after the 1972 election could throw the presidential contest into the House of Representatives.

Having won his fight to lower the voting age, Mansfield turned to an effort to win final passage of the Voting Right s Act extender.

He told newsmen if is uncertain now whether this can be done before next week.

Once the measure is disposed of, Mansfield said he plans to call up President Nixon's nomination of Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court.

Governance Commission Given Final Approval

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The bill creating a joint Commission on University Governance cleared its final hurdle yesterday with its approval by voice vote of the Faculty Senate. The measure has already received the approval of the graduate and undergraduate Student Senates. The vote was preceded by debate which heard several faculty Senators express reservations about both the commission's composition and the intended outcome of the commission's work.

Professor Corson expressed concern that as a result of the commission's work, faculty prerogatives would be eroded. Mr. Corson gave voice to what is probably the most prevalent reservation about the creation of a University Senate, the likely recommendation of the Commission. A Senator responded in debate that "It is impossible for one body to pass something that affects another body, and try to impose that decision." In the course of the debate, grading policy was cited as an example of such an impasse: the Faculty and Student Senates approved different proposals, with the result that no action has been taken.

Another Senator noted that it is not a matter of the faculty Senate sharing power it has with the students, inasmuch as the faculty Senate can only advise, and is in fact continually frustrated and confronted by its impotence when it seeks to implement its will. However, students and faculty united in a University Senate would exercise considerably more power, as that Senate would speak with one voice for the entire community. The Commission has been given a reporting day of May 1 by the Chancellor.

Tippo Praises Proposal For N.E. "Community"

By BETH GOODELL
Staff Reporter

Speaking to a recent meeting of the Student, Graduate, and Faculty Senates, Chancellor Oswald Tippo addressed himself to the problems of campus governance. Students of the Northeast Residence Area have for the past few months been considering a new type of "community" government for their area.

Tippo commented that , "It seems clear that our campus institutions obstruct our progress far more than do the mistakes of persons who are trying to operate within them." The proposed "community" government is designed to work under common concern, mutual respect, and trust, providing institutions to better deal with community concerns and issues.

This newly proposed government will replace the present Northeast Area Government. The nine residence halls included in it will be Crabtree, Dwight, Hamlin, Johnson, Knowlton, Leach, Lewis, Mary Lyons, and Thatcher. Ideally, the different factions of the area - students, administration, faculty food services, physical plant, etc.- will be able to work together towards a set of clearly identified educational goals. In practice, these ideals have often been frustrated by a lack of clearly defined goals and by the separation of these factions so that they have little opportunity to meet and/or work together.

The committee on community government is, therefore, proposing the Northeast Area Community Government, with the hope that it will help to draw the Area together, provide maximum participation and representation for all members of the Area community, and operate more efficiently than the present governmental structure.

The proposed Community Government would seek to establish the following goals and objectives: 1) maximum participation by all members of the Area Community on a fair and equitable basis; 2) the right of all members of the community to express their opinions; 3) a stronger voice and wider participation by students in all areas of governance and decision-making; 4) a more efficient means of dealing with area problems, concerns, etc.; 5) the unity of the community; 6) constructive, shared goals and programs for the whole area; 7) promotion of trust between student, faculty, administrators, and other groups in the Area.

The means of dealing with the problems and concerns mentioned above in the fourth goal would include the replacement of the present triangle of overlapping committees with a unified committee structure representing all members of the Area Community.

Within this unified body, more legislation could be discussed in a single meeting rather than through several meetings (i.e. - students ordinarily must seek opinion, advice, information, etc. from several different administrative officers, and then return to another meeting with their information.) Faculty, student, and administrative sentiment on proposed legislation will be known on a broader base than at present.

The total size of the Community Government would be 25. Two-thirds of the government would be made up of students. Each residence hall would elect one representative for a total of nine students. The students of the Area would also elect seven students to represent them at-large. The faculty would have three representatives, hopefully from Arts and Sciences, the School of Education, and one other academic discipline. The Area Coordinator's office, the Heads of Residence, the dining commons, the area physical plant office, the janitors, and the R.S.O. office would each have one representative for a total of six.

The Community Government would also maintain an executive secretary-treasurer, ex-officio (the Area Coordinator's secretary) to publish and maintain minutes, keep accurate and complete records, and to maintain accurate budget figures. The government would elect one of its members to be chairman and to preside at all meetings.

Eligibility for the government will involve the following: 1) To be eligible to be on the government or to vote, faculty representatives must be under a full-time University contract; 2) To be eligible to run for the government students must live in the Northeast Area, and be full-time registered undergraduates; 3) All other representatives must work directly in or for the Northeast Area to be eligible as a representative in the government.

Five working subcommittees will be established with representation to be determined by the government. The Committee on Student Welfare will deal with rules and regulations, food services, living accommodations and counseling services. The Education and Academic Planning Committee will develop area academic programs, Northeast Area courses education programs, involvement of faculty and so on. The Social and Cultural Committee will sponsor dances, speakers, coffee houses, art shows, films, and other special events. The Budget and Financial Planning Committee will be concerned with area budget; purchasing, room rents, grants, and damage billing. The Physical Plant Committee will deal with the condition of buildings and outside grounds, use of buildings and maintenance.

The present Northeast Area Government has recently voted its support of this proposal. The plan is still open to suggestions from the community. The planning committee hopes to have the proposal implemented by next fall.

Food Study Seen Pointless

UMass food services director Joel Stoneham said yesterday, "I am not afraid of any investigation" in light of a State Senator's call Wednesday to investigate the school's food system.

Senator Joseph J.C. DiCarlo called for the investigation "to see if there is any substance to complaints from parents and students received by members of the legislature." He cited the "roast beef incident" earlier this month in calling for the study.

However, Stoneham claimed that DiCarlo has presented similar proposals to the legislature for the past three years, and that the senator was prepared to call for this year's probe well before the alleged food-poisoning incident occured in Southwest.

In calling for the investigation, DiCarlo also claimed that academic scheduling and dining commons meal hours prevented many students from eating certain meals during the week.

"This is in no way true," maintained Stoneham yesterday.

He cited the extended lunch hours in Worcester Commons and the availability of box lunches as proof that no students are forced to miss any meals at UMass.

Scalon Defends RSO Booking Agent Policy

In an interview with the MDC yesterday, Assistant Dean of Students Gerald Scanlon explained his view of charges of discrimination which have been leveled at the R.S.O. (Recognized Student Organizations) office and explained University policy which bears heavily on the current feud between a local booking agent and R.S.O.

Robert Seligman, a booking agent for SGP productions, has alleged that R.S.O. has prevented him from making a living by "barring him from campus." He has submitted his charges to the American Federation of Musicians. If the AFM upholds the charges, UMass may be placed on an national entertainers' black list.

R.S.O. officials stated that their office does advise student groups against going with middle agents, if the groups are able to arrange the presentation on their own. However, Scanlon states: "Student groups are always allowed to do their own thing." The R.S.O. office always is willing to help student organizations arrange their own programs, but if they wish to work through an agent, the office will still cooperate.

Scanlon explained several reasons why use of an outside interest such as a booking agent is discouraged. Most importantly, is the need for community within the University.

Scanlon stredded throughout his discussion that under University policy outside vendors need permission to come on campus. "University facilities are not a market place for profits of outside interests," he explained. If the "captive market" of students is not protected, more and more promoters will offer movies and concerts until Amherst is saturated with entertainment and the educational institution deemphasized.

A second reason is that arranging entertainment is a learning experience in itself, and that student groups with the aid of R.S.O. may do their own work and students may feel the accomplishment of a successful presentation.

The third reason is financial. Student groups that do the work of presenting entertainment or academic programs will receive profits which will be plowed back into student activities rather than being lost to the University community.

If the only reason is financial, if "Student Activities are becoming an anachronism in their own time," Scanlon stated that he will propose that the University itself do the arranging of special programs and all profits go to the Student Union or the UMass Scholarship Fund.

In reference to Seligman's charge that he was "barred," Scanlon stated that R.S.O. is currently paying him for his services.

Scanlon also requested that he be informed of the charges being presented to the AFM as a matter of "common courtesy."

Peter Pan Hikes Prices, Purchase Tickets by Today

The Student Union has announced that as of Monday, March 16, Peter Pan Bus lines will raise instate ticket prices 10-12% . The SU bus ticket concession urges that students buy tickets for the spring vacation trip and other future bus trips before March 16 if possible to avoid paying a higher price.

The $6.40 two trip Amherst-Boston ticket must be honored for 30 days after the date it is purchased. All other roundtrip tickets must be honored for one year after purchase. One-way tickets must be honored for 60 days after purchase.

For students who use buses frequently, it will be well worth investing in tickets within the next week.

Police Oust Blacks from Springfield College Sit-in

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - More than 50 black students at Springfield College were arrested Thursday for contempt for failure to leave a building they seized, and the college announced later that all were suspended.

Dean John Costello announced the suspensions were ordered by President Wilbert E. Locklin. He said the order bars them from attending any classes or coming upon the Springfield campus. It also ordered them to vacate their rooms and to remove personal belongings from the dormitories.

Costello said written notices of the suspensions will be sent to the students at their homes. The notices will inform them they have a right to hearings later on the question of reinstatement.

The college obtained an injunction ordering the black students to vacate Massasoit Hall which they invaded and seized Tuesday.

Police broke into the barracaded dormitory Thursday afternoon and arrested 47 black students found there on contempt charges.

The 47 students were marched to a bus, pressed into service as a patrol wagon, and were driven to Superior Court for arraignment before Judge Samuel T. Tisdale, who issued the injunction.

In court the names of 50 students were read out by Judge Tisdale. As he concluded, three other black students rose and said their names had not been called, though they were in the building. Judge Tisdale ordered their names to be added to the list.

The cases all were continued to Tuesday, March 17 for hearing. Judge Tisdale said the delay is to allow the students time to obtain legal counsel.

Earlier a coed student at Springfield, Denis Alleyne, 18, a freshman, who left the building voluntarily, appeared in court to answer the citation served on her Wednesday.

Judge Tisdale delayed action in her case until the others were brought in, and it was continued with the rest.

There were no incidents at the college as Sheriff John G. Curley, with a force of policemen at his heels, smashed a glass door, and cut chains the students had locked across it.

The contempt citations result from an earlier issued injunction which ordered the students to vacate the building which was occupied Tuesday.

Several deadlines to vacate the premises were ignored by the blacks. However, J. Clifford Clarkson, an attorney for the blacks, said the deadlines were extended until late Thursday.

About 110 white students who have lived in the dormitory, were forced to' sleep elsewhere following the takeover because they were not permitted to return to their rooms to reclaim personal belongings.

The blacks, in a statement issued Wednesday, demanded that the dorm be allocated for "Third World" students - Blacks, Puerto Ricans and Mexican-Americans.

The occupiers also demanded more black students for the college, more aid to black students and a black studies program.

The blacks said the takeover was prompted by an incident with racial overtones at the dormitory Monday night.
